OBITUARY.

Mr. P. THIRLWELL (Annfield Plain).

It is with great regret, writes Mr. Geo. Reed, Scc. of the Durham Linnet Society, that I have to report the death of one of our fanciers, Mr. Peter Thirlwell, who died on Aug. 19th, after a long illness. Mr. Thirlwell was held in great respect by all who knew him. The sympathy of all fanciers is extended to his widow and family.

Where are the Starlings?

What has become of the Starlings? asks the "Evening News." They disappeared from the gardens of suburban London early in the drought, and have not been seen since. From a correspondent we learn that the North of Scotland has a plague of these birds, which make war upon Sparrows in most unmerciful fashion. Scores of Sparrows have been found dead in Aberdeenshire, and an examination of the birds showed that their eyes had been picked out. A knowledge of the habits of birds makes it clear that Starlings are the culprits.

The Greedy Cormorant.

Grave complaint is made of the destruction of trout in the Border rivers by the Cormorant. Although this bird's average weight is 6lb., says the "Evening News," it eats daily 36lb. of fish, and holds in its stomach eight to twelve fish at once. Mr. Herbert Dodds, of Berwick, a noted Border angler and sportsman, tells of taking a grilse of 3lb. 2oz. from one Cormorant, and six yellow trout of 2lb. 14oz. from another. Flocks of over a dozen Cormorants are feeding on the Tweed. A Cormorant can dive with one breath for 120 yards, so that the damage it does is apparent. Two shillings per head is offered at Berwick for every Cormorant shot dead.

A White Sparrow.

A correspondent in an Oswestry contemporary says: On July 27 I received from Mr. A. E. Hughes, Wynnstay Hotel, Llanfair Caereinion, a pure Albino Sparrow that had been captured that morning on his premises. As might be expected, it was a young bird, for peculiar specimens such as this seldom escape long enough to attain maturity, whilst these colourless birds are anaemic creatures of weaker constitution than those of normal colouration. The occurrence is rendered the more remarkable because another white Sparrow was obtained at the same spot exactly two years before. This seems to indicate that there is a local race of Sparrows at Llanfair with a tendency to albinism.

The Flight of Birds.

Lord Rayleigh, discoursing on the flight of birds, says a Newcastle contemporary, considers that the maximum speed does not much exceed fifty miles an hour. His lordship has here in view the bird's speed relative to the air; but, in the case of migrating birds at great heights, he admits that they may experience winds of like amount, "so that one hundred miles per hour, or more, relative to the ground may well be admissible." What might Lord Rayleigh say, it is asked, to those who say they have seen a Rook outfly an express train, estimating the bird's speed to be not less than sixty miles an hour, relative to the ground? But there are Hawks that fly twice as fast as a Rook; and the fastest Hawk would be left far behind by the Alpine Swift.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 534.
A Handy Lark Cage.

Sent by Mr. J. Burns, 74, Trumpet Terrace, Cleator.

The following idea may be of some good to Lark fanciers. It is very handy for giving the bird a bath, and the bird also likes to go on the raised turf. No. 1 in the sketch is the bow front of cage; No. 2 is turf; No. 3 is where I put another turf on a little partition; No. 4 is my dust box; No. 5 is the top padded with wadding, and No. 6 is the drawer.—J. Burns.

No. 535.
To Hold Finger Drawer in Position.

Sent by Mr. W. Gibson, 149, Agnes Street, Belfast.

I send you a very simple idea which will, I hope, be of benefit to many of your readers. It is one for holding a finger drawer in position in the wires of cage. File at each corner as per sketch (A and B), so that wires of the cage fall in and hold it in a firm position.—Willie Gibson.

WINGED HOOLIGANS.

The Story of a Pair of Australian Regent Birds.

There is one little household in London in which the recent upheaval in the industrial world found no inlet, says the "Evening Times." It is the house-aviary of Mr. Reginald Phillips, the well-known aviculturist of Hammersmith, from whence came the recent gifts of a splendid pair of the Australian Regent bird to the Zoological Gardens.

Mr. Phillips has grown grey in the jealously-guarded company of his chirping friends. From a room at the back of the house, which in ordinary circumstances would serve as a sitting room, there comes a perpetual chorus of sweet music. The privileged visitor who is allowed to peep momentarily inside is amazed to see excellent specimens of the rarest birds flitting about the whitewashed cage with the vigour and freedom of happy and well-cared-for birds. The room has an outlet which leads to the garden—the official aviary. And here are birds with which any aviculturist would yearn to spend the rest of his days. The garden gives the freedom of a forest, although, of course, it has its limitations, which are netted securely

It was in this aviary that the male Regent bird was bred and reared. For six years Mr. Phillips tended it, and later on its female friend.

When the male bird routed the nests of the new additions to the aviary or stole their eggs, or even caught the youngsters by the neck and dropped them unceremoniously, Mr. Phillips administered a severe caution and let them off—bound over! The rarity of the specimens—only in Australia are they found, though they cannot be taken—justified the tolerance of the indignant owner. Bananas were served up to the culprits in the usual way. Then the offences were repeated, and this time the winged hooligans were taken from their hall of freedom and put under lock and key in the house of detention for three months—without hard labour. There they pined, and looked miserable and repentful. These privileged birds, forsooth, are not used to confinement. They must, indeed, have the run of the whole garden, and be kept warm, and fed very carefully.

The punishment had the desired effect, it seemed, when the term of imprisonment was up. But what's born in a bird must come out. In a week the pair were on the old system of deliberate ruffianism. They were called to book again, and the sentence this time was fatal—importation for life to Regent's Park.

Now the other little birds in the school romp wildly about as any fag would when the hullying monitor is expelled. The effect of the ungentlemanly conduct of the male Regent bird was to leave an adulterated atmosphere behind, so that, it is regretful to relate, three of the little birds are undergoing lighter sentences for lesser offences. It should be added that the Regent birds left two children behind, but the disgrace which the parent birds brought to the homestead was the cause of their early deaths.

Random Notes on Exhibition British Birds.

By STEWART GRAHAME (London, S.E.).

Here are a few notes and impressions on my favourite hobby, British Birds. The remarks were jotted down in an idle hour, and are to be taken as such, not in the sense of dogmatic assertions.

The Ideal Linnet.

My ideal Linnet takes more after the Norwich type than the Yorkshire type. In the latter one rarely gets a good bold head, the head following the type, narrow and pointed. Also, I find the colour in these has a tendency to be more light and grey, the brown colour, to me, seeming to follow the bold type. Why this should be I have pondered deeply; but I am none the wiser at the moment. The work on the breast should not be so dense as to make it look like one brown patch, but distinctly mooned as far down the breast (without a break) as possible; at the same time the bird must be well pencilled down the flanks, its head broad (and not flat), well rounded and laced on top; the throat and eye-markings should be prominent, the tail close, and the wings well folded, well carried and showing the whites (the more white the better). Some Linnets have very good whites, but do not seem to show them like others, but keep them well out of sight. This often happens in the case of the bird which is ideal in other show properties.

A kind bird with a blue beak, steady and well-groomed, looking at you from a show cage, is a sight to enjoy and make one start thinking. Fresh-caught Linnets, I find, are liable to go wrong before the moult, more so than most British birds; they fluctuate in condition and health up to their first house moult.

Looseness of the bowels is another thing they are subject to, the excrement making an awful mess of their cage and plumage. I have tried numerous (supposed) remedies, dieting, etc., etc. Prepared chalk, I think, is the best, but I have found that more often than not if one tries to stop the looseness the birds quickly go thick and turn their toes up. At the same time, birds afflicted thus generally look to be in fine condition.

Condition and what it Means.

Speaking of condition, this is the crux of the matter in the showing of British birds. Condition brings out all the bird's colours which are not noticed at any other time. Condition is that sheen, polish, sleekness, quality of feather, and bold eye which one sees in a bird that is in grand fettle. A bird possessing these qualities often beats, and should in my opinion beat, a superior bird which fails in these respects. A Goldfinch in prime order swaggering and displaying his tail across the perch, at the same time calling for all he is worth, is about the best illustration of condition I can give to a fancier.

There is, I know, the "fake condition," but there is a difference which an experienced fancier can see in this; it is a long way off the natural condition. I have seen, and I know, fanciers who can put a bird down just like a hand-polished piece of furniture, but it fails in the experienced fancier's eye.

There are several other points I would like to refer to while on the subject of condition. Birds in an unnaturally high condition out of season are very apt to go wrong and die. The best remedy is a judicious, low diet. I liken them to an athlete getting over fit—he can do no good until he is rested and carefully dieted. If a bird is brought gradually and naturally up to the stage of condition there is not so much liability of its going wrong.

Temperament is another important thing in birds. There is the kind, or good, tempered bird, and the nervous, the sulky, the mad, and the bad-tempered bird, which one can rarely rely on ever making into a show bird; it is best for your own and his peace of mind to show such a bird the door.

The Type of Goldie Preferred.

In regard to the Goldie; here, again, I like the thick set type, a jonque—one carrying very little black between the eyes and the blaze; when they do carry much black there, they appear to have more blaze than they really have got. I prefer the square-cut blaze, but at the same time would not turn my nose up at a good round one. The forehead should be broad and well cushioned, the blaze going well over, and the whites well cut and distinct, showing a tinge of brown in them (my friend Mr. C. Botting last season drew my attention to a very unusual Goldfinch: it had no whites at all, the blaze running right into the cheeks close up to the black). The blaze itself should be rich and bright, having a velvety appearance about it. The breast should be very nutty, well up, prominent and even; and the wings should be well buttoned and mooned. All these points go towards the making up of an ideal show specimen. As regards the buttons and moons, in parts of Wales and the South of England I am told it is a big item, often overshadowing the blaze, head, etc.

With regard to feeding I humour them, some birds liking one particular seed, or seeds, some another; I diet them accordingly. A large bird, well tapered and well proportioned, with a rich salmon colour coming down his breast; with defined and regular ticking on the flanks, and even lacing on the head and back, rounded off with a well-cut mantle, makes one of the best of show birds.

Coming to the Chaffinch, I favour the bird which is rich in colours, the colour on the back to be distinct from the breast, the whites large and conspicuous, the body well thrown out, the under colour reaching well down to the vent, and the head bold, not narrow, but well rounded. The feathers on the head should be a lustrous blue, and the beak the same. These qualities go to make up an ideal show bird.

The Deceptive Greenfinch.

Greenies, although so cheap and plentiful, want a lot of finding; that is, show birds. They are very deceiving; one can look over many store cages-full, and pick what one thinks at the time are "stormers" for size and colour; but when the birds have been home for a week or two, and are weighed up in a show cage, they are found to be just ordinary Greenies. Greenfinches fail a lot on the head, it being a hard job to get a large, well-rounded head on a proportionate body; and if you do get one, more likely than not it is a buff.

They want very careful colour-feeding; if the feed is given strong, ad lib., as it were, they will come out a dark objectionable bronze green in colour, which I think is unnatural to a Greenie.

Once Heard, Rarely Forgotten.

The Yellow Bunting is my first favourite. It is a bird I like, admire in fact, and could do much for. He recalls to me those happy boyhood days in the country when we used to call Yellowhammers "Scribbling Larks," their eggs being scribbled all over. Their plaintive song of "A little bit of bread and no cheese" long drawn out, while the bird is sitting on the top of a hedge, once heard is rarely forgotten, it being so distinctive, standing, so to speak, out by itself from the majority of the other birds' songs one hears in the country.

The Yellow Bunting stands out well, also, as a show bird. He should be of good size, in colour a rich deep yellow all over. His skull should be broad, the lower part of breast a warm ruddy tawny colour, making a nice contrast; the back should be well pencilled and the head and throat perfectly clear, with well defined, thick and distinct V-markings running well over the back of the head. The cheek-markings improve the bird, to my mind, when they come right up to the base of the beak.

Greypates, after due consideration, are, I find, best left alone, more satisfaction being gained by waiting until they are in full colour. If you do prefer to show one, pick out the broadest-skulled bird you can.

Unhappy Without a Hawfinch.

Hawfinches have many ways, points and traits about them I like. They are birds one gets to like better the longer one keeps them. I should not feel happy without one.

Size and colour predominate in this case. The Continental ones have the size, but to my mind they do not always carry the colour that our English birds do. They are birds that want at least two moults before being exhibited with a chance of success; they should not be discarded, as they improve with age.

Another thing they are prone to is failing to moult in their first season, at which time many fanciers get tired and dispose of them.

They want careful handling when first caught and caged, being, I find, more nervous than any other birds. I have never yet had a bad-tempered Hawfinch. The twirling which a Hawfinch is very apt to indulge in is, I think, brought about by its nervousness in the first place.

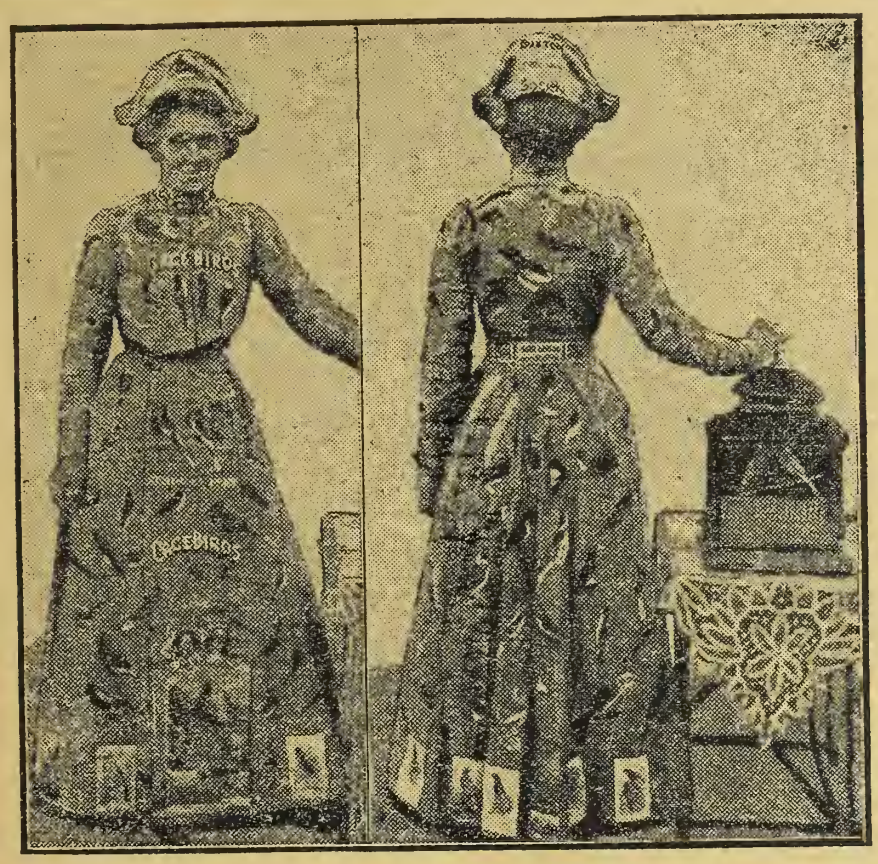
The U-shape bib is the one I lean to, the V shape sometimes being ragged, uneven and blurred at the point. The birds should have good wing bars, with dense rich auburn on cheeks, head and body; these points go to make a taking bird.

An Easy Second Favourite.

An all-round good Bramblefinch is my second favourite as a show bird; not for his ways, disposition, croak and such like, but for his plumage when in grand condition. With judicious colour feeding (the birds should not be choked up with it), they are as nice a bird as one could wish to see, either for exhibition purposes or as cage pets. Moreover, they are the easiest of Britishers to keep; their wants are simple, and many live on plain canary seed only. Mine get some insectivorous food—mealworms, spiders, and what insects I can get hold of.

"Fatty," the "Chatterbox."

The Siskin otherwise known as the "Chatterbox," and I have heard him called "fatty," of all British birds is perhaps the most prone to lay on an undue amount of fat. To put Siskins down in show form they want careful dieting and plenty of baths. The bird should be of good size and shape, a yellow, full of colour and laced cap extending well over the head, eye marks prominent, distinct flank markings. I also like to get him with ticking on the back, and he should be finished up with a nice-shaped bib, which appendage, by the way, is not always to be had, especially on a bird that has done a couple of moults.



The Twite, again, is a bird that has a tendency to get fat, but in his case, given the use of a large flight-cage now and again, one can keep him about right. Markings, size and colour are the chief items. I like them to be cobby, and nicely marked; the head should be broad, the back and body thickly and distinctly marked, giving the bird a mottled appearance all over; a nice coffee colour should start from the throat, and be well suffused over the body.

Lesser Redpolls are taking little birds, and are easily obtained. They keep themselves in lovely condition, one being able to show them within a few weeks of their being caught. They should, if possible, be of an even tone of colour all over, with well developed flank and breast markings, finished off with a large and well-defined bib.

The Soft-bills.

Of British softbills I have kept many from time to time. I am very partial to the Wagtail tribe. They are easily kept on a good insectivorous food, mealworms, etc. Much care should be exercised in the matter of giving them a suitable cage, as their feet and tails are very apt to go wrong. I advise sawdust (coarse), never sand, for the cage bottoms in the case of all softbills.

The Waxwing is another bird that one likes better when one understands his mannerisms. True, he is rather shy, and slow of movement; has little song, the song that there is being similar to the "breeze" of a Greenfinch; but for all that I find much pleasure in him. One I have at the moment is in fine form. The plumage of these birds alone is generally a great attraction. In selecting a cock, endeavour to get a large bird that has dense colour in the head. Great care should be given to the matter of their food, as, being rather of a gluttonous nature, they quickly get bound up, when they simply fall off the perch dead. I find that they do well in a large cage on a diet of sultanas and currants boiled and strained with a plain soft food, and a few mealworms and any ripe fruit in season.

A Handsome and Much-admired Carnival Dress.

Sir,—Thinking the enclosed photographs would interest you, I have much pleasure in forwarding same. My husband is a keen fancier of Norwich Plainheads, and, wishing to help the Burton-on-Trent C.B. Society, I took part in the Foresters' High Court Procession on Bank Holiday. The dress I made, and it is a pretty shade of green sateen. The birds are all cut out of Cage Birds Plates (about 200 birds), except the dozen post cards round the hem. The costume proved a great attraction en route. I have been congratulated many times since by my many friends on the pleasing effect of the beautiful birds, which speaks much for your talented artist, Mr. H. Norman. I wish your valuable paper Cage Birds every success.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Clever Mother Bird.

Among the birds we keep we have a hen Border-Fancy, and she has five young ones. One day one of the young birds fell from the nest to the bottom of the cage. To my astonishment the hen bird hopped down and the young one scrambled on her back. Then with slow and steady hops, after trying a great many times, she succeeded in getting the young bird back to the nest. Sent by Elsie Davis (age 12), 17, Adcroft Street, Trowbridge, Wilts.

*A Homing Canary.

A friend of ours has two Canaries (a cock and a hen). The hen got out of the cage a week ago and went off with the Sparrows, and my friend and neighbours went after it, but lost sight of it and came home disappointed. Four hours after, the Canary, to their surprise, returned home and came pecking the kitchen window. They went out and opened the cage door, and it went in and seemed very pleased to get home again.—Ethel Paul (age 12), 10, Newland Street, Barry Dock, South Wales.

A Knowing Chaffinch.

My father has a Chaffinch hen which he caught in September last. After having it for some little time he gave it to my grandfather, who lives a considerable way from our house. Not thinking it was worth anything, he let it fly. On going up into the garden father said, "Why, there's our Chaffinch," and it came down over the back steps calling "ping-ping." We put out the cage into which it soon went, seeming very glad to be back with its old friends again. It was then given to some one else who lived still further away, and after it had been away for about three weeks this friend also let it fly, and it returned to us again, once more calling "ping-ping." I was put into the birdroom, and it was not long before it had a snug little nest in a bush in one corner of the room, in which she laid five pretty eggs.—Sent by Gladys Hamlyn, 26, Bitton Hill, Teignmouth, S. Devon.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Going Light, etc.

R. Ward.—(1) Put the young birds that are getting thin on a staple diet of plain canary, and in addition give every day for a week, and every second day for another fortnight afterwards, a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, on which you have dropped three drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and sprinkled with maw seed. Every second day give also half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and twice a week on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give a morsel of banana or green food three times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a small pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a fortnight. (2) Yes, you may safely mate birds bred this season next April. Try to arrange it to mate 1910 birds with them in preference to mating two 1911 birds together. (3) The discovery of red mites running nimbly about your cages on the same night after you had disinfected and redistempered them is no new thing. I have known lots of such things occur. It is due to your not being sufficiently thorough in the initial operations of cleaning the cages, scraping out joints where mites are secreted, etc., and sometimes from overlooking the wall, etc., where the cages stand or hang. It is always best when possible to spread the operation over two or three days, and repeat the initial disinfection each day. See reply to "Red Mite," last week.

A Fruitless Season.

R. P. S.—In the first place, your method of feeding appears to have been very faulty, and in addition (though this may be only the effect of the moove) the birds do not appear to have been in proper breeding condition at any time. The cock not singing after being mated is of little moment, as many cocks act in this way. You say nothing about the eggs, but if you know or have good reason to believe that they have gone through more than one breeding season I would advise you to clear them out and start afresh next Spring with strong young healthy stock—that is, with birds bred early this season, or, better still, with a hen, or hens, bred this season (1911) and a cock, or cocks, bred in 1910, or vice versa. If you have more than one pair you may, of course, save some pairs made up with senior cocks and junior hens, and others with senior hens and junior cocks. This would be the best course. Feed during winter on a staple of plain canary, and give separately a pinch of summer rape about every second day, a small teaspoonful of egg food, or the equivalent of bread and milk or crushed sponge cake, once a week, and once a week a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape, and broken groats. Give a little green food when obtainable in good condition, and at other times a little sweet fruit, about twice a week. Get the parts of "Our Canaries" on "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and digest contents before next mating season.

Bad Foot (H. A.).—Keep cage and perches as clean as possible for the time being. Catch bird and bathe foot in a fairly hot solution of boracic acid once daily for four or five days—say a half teaspoonful of acid dissolved in rather less than a saucerful of hot water, and used nearly as hot as you can comfortably bear the little finger in. At the first bathing if there is a distinct "head" on the swelling on toe, not otherwise, prick the "head" with a clean needle and gently press out any contents that will come readily. After bathing, dry gently, and paint foot and leg all over with extract of wych hazel. Give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add six drops of glycerine and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece to the drinking water.

Inflamed Feet (A.C.C.).—Feed the birds as advised in first part of reply to "R. Ward," for a fortnight, and also give them the rhubarb and salts in water for two days. Treat the foot, or feet, when inflamed, the same as advised to "H. A.," except pricking, which is not at all necessary in your case. Also treat the birds for a week as advised in this reply, combining this treatment with the plan of feeding given in other reply. If you cannot get the wych hazel, use zinc ointment as a substitute. See that your sand is not the cause of the trouble by being too sharp and gritty. If very salt, wash it in fresh water before use.

Moulting (W. R. Pike).—It is the moult that is affecting the bird rather badly. Make yourself quite sure that it is free from all draughts and severe fluctuations, and also from the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. It would be very helpful to cover the cage over with a light cover until the feathers have ceased dropping. In addition to the staple diet of plain canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and also a morsel of banana or scrap of seedy chickweed or plantain stalks. On the alternate days for a fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, well sprinkled with maw seed, and during the first week slightly dust it each time with flowers of sulphur before sprinkling with the maw seed. Add 20 drops of whisky and a few blades of saffron to the water daily for four or five days. Give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, and broken groats twice a week.

Yorkshire Cock (J.C.M., Battersea).—You mention no ground for thinking the bird might have strained himself, and, in any case, I am inclined to think this supposition is wrong. Anyway, follow the treatment advised in last reply, and do not introduce the newly acquired hen to him before the end of next March or early April. The hen should for preference be a strong healthy bird which was hatched early this season. Do not give the cock apple continually when there is plenty of good wholesome greenstuff and wild seeds available in excellent condition. Give a little seedy chickweed, green plantain stalks, shepherd's purse, crisp young lettuce, flower heads of groundsel, etc., etc., for variety, and reserve apple for winter use, when greenstuff is not so available. Even then it is best to vary it now and again with a morsel of banana or carrot, raw or boiled.

Nothing Remarkable (Shropshire).—Thanks for card correcting my wrong impression about the length of time in which hen laid seven eggs. It was my mistake, due to the date being interpolated at the end of a line on which both the laying and hatching off were referred to, with no reference mark as to which period the dates referred to, and, of course, I interpreted them as belonging to the laying period. Sorry. The protracted hatching period probably means that you did not remove the eggs as laid and replace the first three on the evening of the third day, as is usually done to cause the whole brood to hatch out in a few hours and thereby get an equal start in life.

Mapy and Off Song (J.H.E.).—The bird is going into moult, and may perhaps be experiencing a little difficulty in breaking away. Cover its cage over for a few days, and in addition to its usual seed diet give a piece of bread and milk as advised to "Pompey" every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed and add to its drinking water the salts and potash mixture advised also in that reply. Beyond keeping it free from draughts and in a fairly warm equable temperature, nothing more should be necessary. At the end of the moult, when feathers have ceased dropping, add 20 drops of chemical food to its drinking water every second day for two or three weeks.

Hoarse in Song (Cromptonian).—You should have given some particulars as to symptoms and treatment. Hoarseness is usually the result of cold or chills, and is not generally so persistent as to last six months without developing into something worse. Just now a certain amount of hoarseness may be due to the bird going out of song for moulting. But, any way, see that it is quite secure from chills and cold draughts. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed and a spray of seedy chickweed. In the drinking water give six drops of glycerine, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece, and two drops of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week or fortnight as may seem necessary.

Symptoms, like Coughing (Pompey).—It is not unusual for some birds to be affected in this way just when they are dropping into moult, and to get all right in due course. If you are satisfied your bird is not in any draught I think that this is probably all that is wrong. The distance from the window counts for little if the position is not in the track of a current passing between two windows or door and window; this is what you must look after. Let it have as much pure fresh air as possible. For the present keep a light cover over cage to assist the moult, and in addition to the staple diet give a pinch of maw every second day, and on the alternate days for the next week a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with soft sugar. In drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash for two days. If the coughing continues after, say, a few days, get a chemist to mix you two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and six grains of iodide of potassium, and give 20 drops of this in the water every second day for a fortnight.

A Seed Mixture (T.H.S.).—Get parts IV. and V. of "Our Canaries," which will give you the fullest possible information on feeding at all seasons and for every object, and also on conditioning birds for show. It is not advisable to give hard seed as a regular, or even very frequent, item of diet after the moult is finished. An excellent seed mixture for bringing the birds into high condition is: Two parts each hemp and inga, one part each black rape and millet, a half-pint each linseed, teazle, maw, and gold of pleasure, and a sprinkling of yellow mustard and chopped sunflower seeds. A small teaspoonful once a week at ordinary times during the show season should suffice, or when wanting to bring a bird in condition quickly a half-teaspoonful every second day for a week or so. It is just possible that extra "polish" that wins is as much the result of careful breeding, and skilful washing and grooming, as of any particular method of feeding. A dash of Cinnamon blood in a bird is a capital giver, by the way, of that fine polish. These are points you must not overlook and you would find them all fully dealt with in the work to which I have referred you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

An Exhibition Redstart.

Fire-tail.—A great deal depends upon whether your Redstart has been house-moulted, for if he is in field-plumage, he will stand next to no chance should he have to compete against a first-class moulted specimen. Redstarts need to be colour-fed, and to have the best of insectile and live foods at the moult, so as to get them into spring plumage. Size and shape, of course, are essential points, and these you can only gauge by comparing your bird with other examples when on the show bench. Show Redstarts should be cobby (stout-built), with broad heads, and wide well-rounded chests, and perfect feet. The head should be bluish-grey, and the back, also, though tinged with red; the root of the tail should be as fiery a red as possible, and the region of the lower breast and flanks a deep, warm red; the cheeks, throat, and upper breast should be a rich glossy black, there being white fringes (or "frosting") hereabouts. There should be on the forehead, and extending round the eyes, a white band, and this should be of nice width and clearly defined (cut) at the edges. There only requires to be a very sparse mottling of white on the breast, by-the-way. The depth of the red depends largely on colour-feeding, which helps very much to attain it. A good Redstart, when in show condition, should shine like a piece of satin. Free bathing helps very largely to produce this "bloom of health."

About the Nightingale.

Bird Missioner.—As I have often stated, I have always found the Nightingale when kept in a cage to be affected by very cold weather—especially the raw, damp cold—and to need artificial heat then. I have kept a goodly number from time to time. Of course, a deal depends upon where the Nightingale-keeper resides. A bird would be wintering under very much more favourable circumstances down in south Devon or Cornwall, for instance, than it would in Cumberland or over the Scottish border. Be guided by the condition of the bird; if it looks slack of feather (puffy) and miserable during a spell of cold, then give it the benefit of a moderate artificial heat. Get one of the special softbill cages for Nightingales and similar small insectivorous birds, made by the large cage-makers advertising in our columns. All up-to-date makers will supply a suitable design. The stock food should be that which I recommend for small insectivorous birds, viz., powdered sweet biscuit, four parts; best ants' eggs, two parts; dried flies and powdered silkworm pupæ, one part each; meat meal, half part, by measure. Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold mashed potato, varying it frequently. Very good insectile mixtures can be bought ready made; see advertisement columns. Osborne biscuits are good; two parts biscuit, two parts crumbled stale sponge cake, will be even better. It is necessary, of course, to give, in addition, live insect food (flies, spiders, wood-lice, earwigs, smooth caterpillars, green fly, ants' eggs, etc.) one can obtain, as in season. To the above stock mixture I frequently add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or, more generally, part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and occasionally a little finely scraped raw lean mutton or beef. Ripe fruit should enter largely into the menu; banana, very ripe pear and apple, strawberries, grapes, elderberries, blackberries, raspberries, garden currants, etc., are all more or less appreciated—you will soon find out your bird's likes and dislikes.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

An Insect (Scotty).—I don't know why you should have found in an egg-drawer the insect you send, for it is not a kind of insect peculiar to birds, or, indeed, one usually discovered in such a situation—as a matter of fact it is a good specimen of those sometime domestic torments known by the not very euphonious name of "bugs." Unfortunately I have had no practical experience of these animals, so am not in a position to offer you any advice. I have heard that a blow carefully delivered with a coal-hammer is certain death to them. The mixture you mentioned would serve to exterminate any of the usual bird pests (red mites and grey lice).

Waxwing With Worms (Perplexed).—The following procedure should clear out the worms from the intestines. Leave the bird without food from 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon until about 8 o'clock the next morning. Then offer it a few pellets of food into which as much powdered areca nut (obtained from a chemist) as will lie on a threepenny-bit has been well mixed. Leave without food for 2 or 3 hours, also withholding water. Then give the following to drink: Three tablespoonfuls of water in which has been dissolved as much crushed sulphate of soda as will just cover a shilling. Change to plain water in the evening. This should bring about the evacuation of the worms. Of course, give the food as usual after the bird has had a good drink of the saline medicine. Repeat the treatment after an interval of two days. You must cage up the bird for a time.

Redpolls Nesting (J. B. Fletcher).—It is certainly very late in the year for birds to be nesting, but it is a peculiarity of Britishers in captivity to start domestic life at the end of June or in July. I have experienced many cases of this nature. It is somewhat doubtful whether the youngsters (assuming the eggs to be fertile) will get reared; there is just a chance that they may be. The period of incubation is 13 to 14 days, the same as with Canaries. You should supply the old birds with soft food daily. The ideal kind would be a mixture of egg-food (home made) and a high-grade insectile food (such as is used for delicate insectivorous birds), about two parts of the former to one of the latter. My own Redpolls which nested ate this freely. In addition give the ordinary seeds, with a separate dish of cracked hemp and sunflower (mixed). Then you must let them have the well-known seeding "wild feods" (shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, plantain, all very plentiful now) practically ad libitum. Summer rape soaked in water (changed daily) until it has sprouted is very much relished. Dry it as much as possible, say, in a towel, before offering it to the birds.

Selection of Birds, etc. (Drury).—If you desire breeding results, it is best not to crowd the birds. Even then probably only odd couples will go to nest. You would doubtless have more success with some of the Foreign seed-eaters, and our Mr. Page will give you a list of suitable species if you address a query to him, drawing his attention to this answer of mine, at the same time. You can safely add one or two pairs of Canaries, and a pair each of Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Linnets and Redpolls. Evergreens, such as holly, box, privet, fir, and the like, I have found the best for decorative purposes, whilst ivy makes an excellent background.

Maw Seed and Death of Birds (Postman).—I have seen samples of maw seed that pleased me better, so far as appearance goes. Still, I can discover nothing particularly wrong with it. I have even ventured to feed a young hen Linnet Mule freely with it for several days, and she is still "alive and kicking." So it is not easy to see how this seed could have killed your own seven birds. It is a fact that egg-food can quickly undergo putrefactive changes, and the same be imperceptible to one's sense of smell. This applies particularly during such very sultry weather as we have recently experienced, and when the egg used is not new laid. If you still doubt the maw seed, why not try it by itself upon one of your birds, letting it eat up a teaspoonful a day. This would settle the matter to your satisfaction. But you must not give egg or other soft food at the same time: seed does not matter. Glad to read your high opinion of the merits of CAGE BIRDS.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Bishops and Weavers.

Bishop.—If you refer to p. 31 of "Foreign Birds for Beginners" you will find this statement: "The food treatment, etc., given above will suffice to keep in health all species of Whydahs, Weavers, and Bishops." It was impossible to do more than deal with representative species of given groups in the scope of such a book. Bishop is a trivial name applied to certain members of the Weaver family, but they are just as often advertised as Weavers as Bishops, and the former designation is the better. The Orange Weaver is the Orange Bishop, and vice versa. In confined quarters some individuals are very pugnacious, but I have found the Madagascar (Scarlet), Napoleon, and Red-billed Weavers or Bishops fairly safe, providing they were not overcrowded. Plantain and any non-poisonous weeds may be supplied, and the birds permitted to take what they choose. Many species are very fond of seeding sprays of dock.

Bullfinches with Foreigners.

Aviculturist.—(1) The Bullfinches would agree with the Foreign Finches, but they will feed on all the buds they can get in the spring and ruin your deciduous plants and bushes, I fear. (2) Very difficult as to sex. The hen has the hind portion of the abdomen sooty; in the male this part is deep black. (3) Our Nutshell Booklet, "Waxbills," 2½d. post free from our Manager, will help you. At the moulting time catch a few small flies and spiders for them, and also give blighty sprays of non-poisonous trees and herbage. Personally, I have found the Golden-breast the hardiest of all the Waxbills. (4) Very difficult to sex, but in fully adult birds she is slightly less brilliant than the male, and a little more brown in her plumage. (5) They have been bred in captivity, but not frequently. (6) About 2s. 6d., but they are very improbable (not impossible) breeders in a moderate sized aviary with a mixed series of birds.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

D. Crook.—The diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, and plain biscuit; a pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seed mixture and a piece of clean cuttlebone be kept hanging in the cage. A little cooked vegetable (what happens to be going) may be given, but it should be unseasoned and without gravy. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you. Give occasional doses (as required) of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful added to the luke-warm water—so as to keep the bowels moving quite freely, but the voidings must not remain watery loose. When not giving the magnesia a little chemical food may be added to the drinking water. If there are any blue parts, anoint these, not heavily, with Spratt's Pennaknra. I should continue to use the quassia for a time, as this will help to make the plumage distasteful if the bird is addicted to feather picking. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever. Report progress about six weeks hence.

Illness of Birds.

Tavistock.—It is not easy to assign a reason, or to suggest treatment in the absence of definite data. It would be best to send the next body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination, as the trouble maybe, probably is, contagious. So far as I can gather, the birds had some septicæmic affection resulting in weakness and partial paralysis. They should be caged in the first stages and the bowels kept moving quite freely (but not watery loose) by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful in the daily supply of drinking water. When not giving the magnesia, add four drops of the tincture of perchloride of iron to the drinking water (one ounce). In addition to your present diet I should keep a small pan of crushed oats and paddy rice (mixed in about equal parts) in their enclosure. To the ailing birds give a little milk sop (rather sloppy), consisting of boiling water, condensed milk, extract of malt, and crumbled sponge. This sop has saved the lives of many Gouldians, and will do no hurt to the healthy birds (if they will take it), but is specially applicable to birds suffering from bowel trouble. The extreme dry heat may have set up trouble in first instance.

Aviary Queries.

F. S. Gardiner.—It is a well known fact that Canaries do not do well in a crowd, but I have had broods reared among a much larger series, though I only included one pair of a kind. Waxbills seldom breed unless in a natural garden aviary, but they may ultimately do so. Put up a couple of cocoa-shell nests and the same number of rush flask nests for these, and it may induce them to do so. Nuns and Mannikins: Except for Bronze and Magpie Mannikins these are not free breeders in captivity. Why, I cannot say. Java Sparrows will ultimately breed with you, and also Striated and Muling Finches. Likely species to breed in your aviary would be: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Silverbills, Bengalese and White Java Sparrows. Providing your aviary has a weather-tight and well lighted shelter, the birds can be kept out all the winter; but if you sent me a sketch of aviary with ground plan, I could give you a more satisfactory reply as to what to do and keep.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

"White Violet."—Canary died of pneumonia of contagious origin, brought about by a germ taken into the respiratory system. I am inclined to think that your aviary is infected, and that your repeated losses are due to this cause alone. There is no positive cure; any medicinal treatment you adopt would only be palliative, and would not eradicate the disease from your aviary. If you could possibly do so, I should suggest that you remove your birds,—that is, your healthy birds, to another room, and thoroughly disinfect the aviary, afterwards giving it a rest of several weeks before re-occupation. In the meantime you might give those ailing 30 drops of the following mixture night and morning in the drinking water:— Aromatic spirits of ammonia 2 drachms, tincture of squills 3 drachms, infusion of gentian Co. 1 drachm, syrup of prunes ½ ounce, water up to 3 ounces.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Tideswell Photograph (The Secretary).—We are pleased to receive this photograph, and shall hope to reproduce it in one of our special numbers.

An Address (S. Sykes).—Thanks for the address you sent us.

The Lancashire Canary (John Bilton).—The Lancashire Canary is fully dealt with in parts 10 and 11 of "Our Canaries."

A "Champion" Young Singing Linnet (A Visitor).—Your communication is too much of the nature of an advertisement to be inserted in our correspondence columns. Probably if you sent it to the owner of the Linnet in question he might like to utilise it as a testimonial.

A Club Notice (J. Lewis).—Your card was posted too late, reaching us after CAGE BIRDS had gone to press.

A Canary Matter (J. F. E.).—You had best consult "Our Canaries" (see advertisement on back page of this issue); you will find all that you require in Part 14.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects. Harmless to everything.

In the Courts.

A Dispute in the Woolston F. & F.A.

A "split" amongst the members of the Woolston and District F. and F.F.A. had a sequel in an action in the Southampton County Court on August 15, before his Honour Judge Gye, in the form of a claim, by James Levy, Frederick G. Etheridge, and David Stevens, chairman, secretary, and treasurer of the Woolston and District Fur and Feather Fanciers' Association, and certain members of the Committee, suing for the Association, against Charles John Musselwhite, of the London Hotel, Woolston, for £7 6s. 7d., which was alleged to have been improperly retained by the defendant.

Mr. F. G. Warne appeared for plaintiffs, Mr. E. R. Ensor representing the defendant, on whose behalf it was stated that he was prepared to pay money over to the proper person entitled to it.

On behalf of the plaintiffs it was stated that when the Club was formed defendant, who subscribed a guinea, became treasurer, the inaugural meeting being held in the Assembly Rooms, which adjoined the defendant's hotel. At the end of last year the Association desired to remove its headquarters from defendant's house to the Alexandra Coffee Rooms, and the matter was discussed at the annual meeting and adjourned till a later meeting convened for the purpose, and at which, said Mr. Warne, there was dissension among the members on the point, one of the objections raised being that formal notice in writing of the meeting had not been circulated. The decision to change headquarters was finally come to by eleven votes to seven. At a later meeting the present defendant was thanked for his services as treasurer and requested to hand over the moneys of the Association then in his hands. There was no reply, and personal application also failed, 48 hours' notice to return the Association's money being given by the Secretary.

The Judge (to Mr. Ensor): Are you in the position of an innocent holder of money, and you don't know whom to pay to?

Mr. Ensor: Yes.

The Judge: And all you want is the direction of the Court, which will relieve you of liability. I can give you that now.

Mr. Ensor said his case was that the meeting at which the decision was come to was convened only among the supporters of the change. At the present time some of the members met at defendant's Assembly Rooms and some at the Alexandra Coffee Rooms.

The attempt at settlement having failed, the case was heard out.

Frederick George Etheridge, secretary of the Association, said that at the annual meeting the defendant, previously treasurer, was not reappointed, and the question of a change of headquarters arising, a special meeting was called to settle the matter, and at one such special meeting the decision to change was come to. Cross examined, Mr. Musselwhite was not re-elected as treasurer at the formal annual meeting.

Explaining the case to the Judge, Mr. Ensor said that the meeting of the Association was perfectly legal, the officers being then appointed; the second and later meeting when the appointments were made again was illegal and unnecessary.

Called for the defence, Archibald McKeller, chairman of the Association in December, 1910, said that at the first-mentioned meeting the balance sheet was passed and officers were appointed, including Mr. Musselwhite as treasurer, and his name ought to be in the minutes. As a matter of fact the Society was split in two, and the money in Mr. Musselwhite's hands included the subscriptions of all the members.

The Judge said that the case was nothing but a petty quarrel, consequent upon the decision of the members to remove their headquarters from defendant's house. It had been a wretched quarrel, which he was extremely sorry to see, because such a Society was very beneficial in many ways. Judgment would be for the plaintiffs forthwith.—"Hampshire Independent."

Huddersfield O.S.'s New Headquarters.

Will all members of the Huddersfield O.S. please note that the Society have changed their headquarters from the White Hart Hotel to "Ye Old Hat Hotel," West Parade, Huddersfield? writes Mr. F. Sykes, the Secretary.

The Thrush Family.

The Thrush family appears to be one of the largest among birds, so many species being closely related to it. The common Flycatchers reveal their affinity to the Thrushes by the mottled character of their plumage, although they have broader and flatter bills.

The Nightingale.

The following verses upon "Nature's sweetest chorister" are taken from a poem which reaches us from Mrs. Phœbe Ball, of Shotton, Flintshire.

Sing on, sweet bird, the night is fine
And lovely as the notes of thine;
Thy sweet sad "Tiu" has forged thy name
A stronger link to world-wide fame.

Sing on, sweet bird, take not thy flight
Amid the dews this shady night—
Stay, raise that harmony divine,
Which charms my heart e'en more than thine.

Wild-Bird Life.

Young Starlings.

The majority of the bird books tell us that the common Starling is single brooded; that is, he only assists in the rearing of one brood of young ones each season. But occasionally observers find late nests that cause them to think there are exceptions to this rule. No doubt many of our single brooded birds construct another nest lay, and hatch the young when the first nest has been rifled or destroyed either by human beings or birds' natural wild enemies. The writer recently came across a case in the month of July of several pairs of Starlings nesting under the eves of some old houses in the West of England. These, in his opinion, would undoubtedly be second nests, if not third ventures. The Starling generally speaking is not by any means a late breeder; in fact, isolated nests may frequently be found in the month of February, although April is when the majority make a start at housekeeping. In the South-West of England, where the climate is certainly milder than further North, these birds would not delay their nesting operations, and so if they started early in April they would have plenty of time to be rearing their third broods now. Flocks of various sizes can be seen feeding on every available field and meadow, and of these the majority are certainly birds of the year. The writer carefully watched a gathering of about 50 or 60 feeding in a quiet meadow, and through the glasses it was easy to identify the young birds, as they differ from the old ones so much in plumage, being brownish or mouse-coloured, and wanting the gloss and spangling of the parent birds. Of all this flock there were not more than twenty adult birds. Some of the youngsters were getting well on in the moult, and at first glance looked like old ones, as they were quite as large; but a closer scrutiny revealed the baby feathers upon the head and neck—the last place for all birds to finish moulting. It is a general rule for wild birds to retain the wing and tail feathers until the following autumn, but the large feathers of the wings are undoubtedly shorter than in the adult bird that has had a second moult. In some species this difference is much more marked than in others.

Aberdour C.B. etc., Society's annual show held Aug. 16. This society has been dormant for 11 years, but thanks to a splendid working committee and the untiring efforts of a worthy secretary it has been re-started. The show was a great success in all sections, but owing to the birds being thick in moult many entries were held back from the section, although some really good birds were staged. The secretary was the Rev. E. V. Kessack, and the judge for cage birds Mr. Wattie (Elgin).

A White Norwich Plainhead Canary Bred.

Sir,—Having read of white Canaries being exhibited at the Crystal Palace, it may interest my fellow-readers to know that I have bred a pure white Norwich Plainhead this season from a heavily-marked yellow cock and a buff hen. Last season this pair of birds bred two pure white ones, but both these died at ten days old. If any fancier would like to see it, it can be seen at any time on Sundays. It is a month old. I have, I may say, been a reader of Cage Birds for this last four years. I wish C.B. every success.

One of the Last of the Fen Cage Makers.

Sir,—While on a recent holiday I saw an old man sitting at the steps of his van hard at work, and as his fingers moved in and out over the cane framework, he crooned the formula of wicker cage-making to a couple of children, his grandchildren, who looked on with half open eyes. "One in two out, one in two out" hummed the old man as he twisted one strand under the framework and two over it. He was a gipsy bird cage-maker, and the fruits of his labour were piled up on the ground near by. The locality was in the Fen country between Downham Market and Ely, and the cages, when completed, were sold in King's Lynn, Norwich, Downham, and other neighbouring towns. The number of cages he could turn out in a day depended on the size and variety. "I make five different sizes of cages," said the old man, "and I could make, I daresay, if I wanted to, ten different kinds of each cage; but there's no need to. The cheapest kind is a shilling, with one perch and one drinking 'cup.' The most expensive is 6s., but I don't make them unless they're ordered beforehand. Half-a-crown and three shillings is the usual price I make, and they're well worth it, too." The old man was alone to-day. There was a fair on near by, and his wife and daughters and the residents in the two other vans that stood close by had gone over. The making of cages was at one time common amongst the Fen gipsies, as these nomads are called, though they are not of pure Romany blood; but it has to a considerable extent died out of late years. "I used to deal in birds, too," said he, "but I gave it up. I had too many accidents with them. You can't do things properly unless you've got plenty of room, and there's no room in a van. This time of the year is dull for me. When the winter commences I get busy. It's harder work than you would think. Women can't do it. It hurts their hands; their flesh is too soft. I'm the only one of my family doing it. My daughters do the selling." The old man obtained his cane from London, through a business man in Downham. His working outfit consisted of a pair of sharp scissors, some rough emery paper, and a bottle of "home- made" varnish. "There's nothing in that bottle could hurt a bird," he said; "it's my own invention"—and he held the bottle up to the light.

The Feeding and Exhibiting of Goldfinches.

Sir,—The Goldfinch rears on the average two broods a season, and the young, as all bird fanciers know, are called Greypates until they have moulted out into the proper colour. The best time for procuring Goldies is about the end of October or the beginning of November—just when the frost has nipped the ground, as then, if they are clean-moulted birds you are almost sure of their being early ones, which is a great advantage, as the late-moulted birds are rarely sufficiently up in colour until half the season's shows are over. When the birds are caught the best plan is to put them into flight cages for a week or so, giving crushed hemp, a little inga, teazel, thistle and maw; also tufts of thistles or groundsel, and water on the bottom of the cage. It is advisable to have a house-moulted, steady bird in with them; and with the usual seed hoppers and drinkers full, the young birds will be soon following the old one's example. As soon as they are observed feeding and drinking cage them off, when they will soon settle down to indoor life. After a while the following will be found to make a good stock mixture: teazel, canary, linseed, rape and hemp. When the birds have become pretty well settled, they should every other day or so have in season chickweed, dandelion and a host of other seeds if they can be got at, as these make up their food when they are wild, and help to keep them up in colour. The bath is also welcomed occasionally, and is a great help towards bringing them into condition for mule breeding. Some fanciers say that the Goldfinch won't breed unless he is house-moulted, but this is not always the case. A field-moulted bird will breed quite as readily if it is caught early in the season and well looked after till the time comes. The male bird pairs readily with a hen Canary, a Bullfinch, etc. The best kind of cage for Mule breeding purposes is a compartment cage, so that the birds can be parted off if they quarrel. The latter end of March or the beginning of April is time enough for pairing up. When paired they should be watched as sometimes he plays havoc with the eggs and so destroys a nest. Some fanciers separate the two after the eggs are laid, as they think the hen manages the young ones better by herself. The Goldfinch cock paired with a Canary is the most common as the general run of fanciers crave after light Mules. But light Mules are scarce, as the young ones generally turn after their male parent, and are known as dark Mules; thus it is which makes light Mules very valuable. Two or three is the average number of nests a season. After the breeding season comes the moulting season, which is a trying time for our Goldie. He should be well looked after; give him plenty of his own natural food and a frequent use of the bath; and a pinch of Epsom salts in the drinking water will do no harm. We hear a lot to-day about the colour feeding of the Goldfinch, but this I do not hold with, for if he has a good colour to commence with he requires no "feed" to improve it. For exhibition the Goldfinch must, first of all, be steady, as tameness is an important point. He must have a good large head, the blaze should be square and clean cut, and of a rich colour. The cap must be of nice width, clean cut, black and tapering down each side of neck. The wing bars must be clearly seen and bright, and the buttons must be very distinct, running down evenly to the end of wings. The breast colours must be clear and pure with nice even markings, and tail and feathers short, nicely folded, showing three white buttons on the tips. Shape, condition and length are also taken into account. He must be lively and his colours glossy, and not dull looking. There are, what are called the Cheveral and the Peathroat Finches, but these are only mismarked birds. The Cheveral is known by a pure white mark running clean through the centre of the blaze under the bill. The Peathroat has a white spot in the same place in the blaze under the bill. In other respects they are same as the ordinary Goldfinches. With these few remarks I will close by saying that the Goldie is a general favourite with most bird lovers, and that it is a very fair songster.

Wasps' Nests and Food for Insectivorous Birds.

Securing the Grubs for Winter Use.

Sir,—Never can I remember such a year for wasps as this year has been. These are about us in their thousands. Nearly every one about here (Ramsey) complains of being stung; some have been stung badly on the face, and one on the tongue. The children have particularly suffered. The fruit in the orchards before it is even ripe is being attacked, and little will be left to gather. I have in years gone by taken some hundreds of wasp nests to prevent the wasps from taking the fruit, being paid at the rate of 6d. per nest; and the taking of the nests being quite an easy matter I will tell my fellow readers how to do it, as it will benefit, no doubt, a good many keepers of soft-billed birds who, by this means, could lay in a good stock of insect food at little expense—enough to carry them over the winter months. Wasps are also a good food with which to meat off birds. The first thing you do is to find the nest in the day time, and put a stick near to it, so that you can find it easily in the dark. After the wasps have all gone to the nest, and when it is dark, go with a lantern, a spade and a bucket, and insert a squib (made of gunpowder and sulphur; you mix this up into a paste with water, and make it something like a cartridge; then wrap it in paper about the size of a cartridge). You then apply a match, and when it goes off you push it into the hole and then place a sod of earth over the hole and allow a few minutes for the smoke to suffocate them. Then the nest can be dug out, and the dead wasps brushed from the comb or cakes. The cakes or combs should then be put into an oven and just baked a little to kill the grubs; or boiling water may be poured over them. In this case they must be dried. Keep them in a cold place for use. Another way of taking them is to saturate a piece of rope with cyanide of potassium, but as this is a very deadly poison, it is best not to adopt this method. Another way still is to use carbon bisulphide on lint, and placed in the hole, covering the hole with a turf. Neither of these chemicals have I used personally, but I have seen them used. I prefer the old squib as the safest method. I have taken some hundreds of nests, and I can say that I was only stung once, and that was through not being able to find the nest in the dark before they all came out. I am quite aware that persons living in towns have not the chance of taking these pests, but anyone in the country districts can do so, for anyone would give him permission to rid him of them. I hope these few lines will enable lovers of Softbills to lay in a winter stock of food. I saw a nest which was taken last Wednesday night; it had nine layers of comb. I have also twice in my experience taken hornets' nests, both in old willow trees. This was a very ticklish job, as they were so awkward to get at. Hornets' nests and combs are similar to the wasps'. Although wasps' nests have been a nuisance this year, I have not as yet seen a hornet's; it is now some years since I saw one.

Information Wanted on Lark Catching.

Sir,—Being a lover of Larks I should like to know if any reader could help me out of a difficulty. I should like to know three things: 1st, the best size of net to use; 2ndly, the best nights to go out; and 3rdly, the best places to find them. I have been out a few times with a friend, but the Larks seem to fly up a few yards in front of one.

Was it a Case of Suicide?

Sir,—As a regular reader of Cage Birds, I write to know if any other breeder has met with a similar case to the following. A young Border Fancy Canary about two months old I found drowned in the water glass; the whole bird was, in fact, in the glass, except its tail. As is usually the case, the bird was one of the most promising young ones I have bred this year. Some neighbours suggest it was a case of suicide!

The Successful Handrearing of Grasshopper Warblers.

Sir,—it may interest readers of Cage Birds to know that I have this season successfully handreared a nest of Grasshopper Warblers, which were taken from the nest in June and successfully reared on live ants' eggs, and then gradually accustomed to Trower's insective food which is now their principal diet. Like other birds, they are fond of mealworms, but I am afraid to supply these except in the most frugal manner, as my experience teaches me that they are most dangerous food when given for any of the tiny Warblers. Garden insects and house flies are the best and safest tit-bits to supply. As exhibition birds Grasshopper Warblers, will doubtless render a good account of themselves if given a good moult.

An Afternoon Ramble Amongst the Birds in the Midlands.

Sir,—Leaving Rugby behind us let us follow the dusty white road for a mile or so. While we are still close to the town our friend, the ubiquitous Robin, flits out from the ditch at the side of the path. We stop, and after a minute's search a little nest, half hidden by a dock leaf, is revealed, containing five dark-spotted young ones. Soon we are confronted by a reed-fringed pond. As we walk round the pond along a rough pathway, enclosed on the one side by the hedge and on the other by a steep gorse-clad slope, a cock Linnet in all the pride of his crimson-splashed summer plumage flits about in the branches above us. Low down in the hedge is a mud-lined nest containing three beautiful blue eggs, spotted with black; they are those of the sweet-voiced Song Thrush. When we emergo into the open field once more a wide stretch of ploughed land spreads itself before us. Over it are sweeping some vociferous Lapwings uttering their tireless "pee-weep, pee-weep." Were they to allow a near approach, we might hear, as we have often done, the musical whistle made by their wings as the birds sweep over the fields; now almost on the ground, now high in the air. But they see us, and with a shrill "pee-weep" fly off to the farthest corner of the field. A harsh chatter comes from a neighbouring tree; it is answered from an elm on our right. A glimpse of black and white among the green of the elm shows us a Magpie. This species is unusually numerous in this district, for very little game-preserving is done, and gamekeepers, their worst foes, are few and far between. We force our way in among the thick furze and a little brown-backed bird flies hurriedly off its nest in a gorse bush. It is followed by two smaller birds hardly able to fly. We look into the hair-lined nest and there is one left—a little bright-eyed creature that views us suspiciously, and then follows its brethren as best it can. A pace or two farther on is another nest with eggs, and then another, for where there is sufficient gorse the Linnets form little colonies; the writer has found six nests in a comparatively small area, and might doubtless have found more had there been time enough to search. "U-tick, u-tick," came from what proved to be a little brownish bird with a white eye-stripe, and bright fawn-coloured breast. It is a cock Whin-chat. As we make our way through the gorse another little bird flies from a thick low bush; it is like the first, but much duller. We bend down and search the bush; at first it was in vain, for few birds conceal their nests better than the Whinchat; but at last a cunningly hidden little nest of grass and moss at the end of a tiny tunnel-like passage through the grass is exposed. This therefore was the cause of the cock's excitement. In it are five green-blue eggs which closer examination shows to be thinly speckled with rusty-brown at the larger end. Half-an-hour's walk across the fields brings us to the head of a narrow lane, one side of which is covered with thick undergrowth. A dry ditch runs along by the hedgeside hidden from the road by wild-rose and hawthorn bushes and brambles. We get into it and walk along, keeping an eye on the undergrowth and nettles on the bank. We stop as a little ash-brown bird slips quietly off its nest; we would have passed it by but for its bright, beady eye, which caught our glance as we passed. The nest, though frail, is deep, and contains four greenish white eggs, blotched with violet-grey—the eggs of the nettle-loving Whitethroat. Further on are several Whitethroats' nests, containing from two to four eggs each, for, whenever there is undergrowth suited to their skulking habits, Whitethroats abound. Then we put a Yellowhammer up from her nest in a thick low thorn bush. There were three eggs curiously marked and scrawled with purple-red on it. It is these markings that give rise to the quaint name of "Writing Lark," which is applied to this bird in some districts. Meanwhile, the weird laughing cry of the Green Woodpecker is heard, and in an ash tree we see a neat circular hole cut into the tree at about twenty feet from the ground. As we approach, the old bird, who is not so handsome as her scarlet-crowned mate, slips out of the hole and flies off, dipping down every few yards as all Woodpeckers do. In this part of the country (Rugby and District), where the Green Woodpecker is comparatively abundant, it almost always, as far as the writer's observations go, chooses an ash as its nesting site, though he has seen their nesting holes in oaks and poplars. Often the holes are occupied by the noisy chattering Starling, who shows a great deal more anxiety than the Woodpeckers about their eggs or young, for they sit within a few feet of us, squawking and scolding until we have placed some distance between ourselves and their nest. Let us go now in another direction and follow the path that runs through the fields by the hedgeside. Soon an old ash lichen covered stump comes into view; it contained, a week or two ago, a little black-headed Marsh-Tit's nest. The birds had bored a hole downwards from the top of the stump, which is ten or twelve feet high, and at about a foot's depth had made a cosy nest of rabbit's fur. It is invisible to anyone walking along the path, but the sprightly little birds' anxiety when the stump is approached, and the tiny chips of wood, like sawdust, scattered about it, betray the site to the observer. Climbing a gate we get into the fields, and make our way along the side of a thin copse that contains a miniature Rookery. There are only five or six nests, for it is an offshoot of a larger colony a mile or so away. The Rooks breed later than the majority of their relatives, for they had only just laid their full complement of green olive-blotched eggs in a big nest at the top of an elm towards the end of April. Standing in the middle of the field are two giant elms; one of them contains a Jackdaw's nest, but for some reason the grey-headed birds have left their stronghold, and the only visible tenants are a pair of intruding "cheeping" House Sparrows, who have built a nest (under the Jackdaws' place), which contains one egg with a few brown spots on it. In the corner of the same field stands a barn which is regularly used by one species or another for nesting. The writer has found in it in one season a Pied Wagtail's nest, containing five whitish eggs thickly covered with ash-grey spots; a Blackbird's, a Wren's, and a Swallow's, with five long white eggs, speckled all over with brown and grey. In an elm in the hedgerow a Bullfinch has built a nest. This is cunningly placed among a little bunch of twigs about six feet up the trunk, and the grey-backed hen lets us almost touch her before she flies off, leaving five pale blue eggs speckled and streaked with purple—grey at the larger end; these are in a dainty nest of twigs lined with fine rootlets. A babbling stream, almost blocked in places by the wealth of rushes, flows past the barn. It is the haunt of several pairs of Moorhens, most of which build their nests among the rushes and reeds in mid-stream, but one pair, at least, prefers a thorn bush that is growing a foot or two from the water's edge; and as we approach the hen flies off with a great clatter, and plunges headlong into the water, exposing a reed-built nest containing eight eggs. Following the course of the stream we put up a couple of graceful Yellow Wagtails, that fly off uttering their shrill "chit-up." We pass an old apple tree that last year was occupied by a pair of Great Tits; this year it is being used by some Starlings. Now we come to a picturesque bridge of red brick, covered with dark green ivy. In a space left by a broken brick two little Spotted Flycatchers have built their nest, made of moss and lined with hair. A few minutes' walk past a lofty elm, in which a pair of long-tailed Magpies reared a brood this year, brings us on to the road once more, and now we make our way homewards for evening is drawing near, and we have a good three-quarters of an hour's walk before us.

Canaries at Batheaston Show.

Sir,—I entered two Canaries at Batheaston Show (near Bath) on August 17th, in the Any Variety Class. The Canary judge was Mr. T. Tayler, of Bath. I was under the impression, and was told, that a Mr. Trickey was appointed to judge Canaries. On arrival at the show in the afternoon, to my surprise, Mr. Folwell's three birds were awarded 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, and the judge awarded my birds two very highly commended cards, both being previous 1st prize winners, one being awarded 1st on July 27th, 1911 (under a Bristol judge), here beating two of Mr. Folwell's birds, the other being awarded 1st last season (under a different judge), again beating two of Mr. Folwell's birds. I have beaten Mr. Folwell's birds every time I have met them for the last five years in succession. I should like the judge, Mr. Tayler, to inform me through your paper on what points he awarded 1st, 2nd, and 3rd over my two exhibits.

Bath. G. E. Lanham.

An Excellent First Attempt.

Sir,—My first attempt at breeding may interest and encourage some of your amateur readers. This is a record year in many things, and it seems to me I have a record little family of Canaries. The parent birds I purchased at the Crystal Palace Show of February of last year, but I have forgotten the name of the breeder. They are Yorkshires, of good stock, each having a silver band round the leg with the date of birth thereon. I could not mate them early, as I was not at home, but on July 18th I put them in the breeding cage. The next day I was surprised to find an egg, another the next day, and so on until there were four. I left them all there. The hen sat most devotedly for a fortnight, when the first chick was hatched, another each day following until there were three. The fourth I found on the bottom of the cage; evidently the others had been too much for it. Now they are a few days only over a fortnight old, and really the honniest little family possible. They are mostly out of their nest, sitting on its edge or on the platform, preening their feathers, so big and fine I can scarcely tell them from their mother except by their tails. The cock has always been with them, and is most good in helping to feed them. I have always kept a small open wire cage adjoining the breeding cage, with doors open between the two. I shall be glad to learn if this is an unusual case of eggs to be fertilised so rapidly, also of chicks being so precocious and strong. I put it down to the abnormal summer we are passing through.

The Alleged Faking of Exhibition Linnets.

Sir,—With reference to the correspondence appearing in your columns respecting certain portions of my lecture re a Linnet said to be faked and stained, I can only account for it being a case of "Lapsus calami," or an error on the part of the short-hand writer. The report in question should have read: Mr. Mortlock started the subject by stating some years ago (not two years, as printed) a Palace winning Linnet to his idea was a clear case of faking and staining, and tackled the exhibitor of the bird on this point, who replied that he thought that it was just as legal to put the colour on outside as to put it inside. Then again, the shorthand writer omitted to include my name with this question, when I quite agreed with him over this particular bird, thinking it to be the bird of two years ago, whereby I stated that two years ago a Linnet was awarded first at the Palace, a London judge adjudicated, and to my opinion the bird was faked and stained right and left. The next year the same bird came out under another owner and stood cardless, the colour being quite conspicuous by its absence; and I am firmly convinced to this day that the bird was certainly stained, withal it being tested in the presence of another judge, as the best of judges are not infallible, and everyone is entitled to his own opinion. Still, I take rather an exception to Mr. Weston's suspicious remarks, which throw rather a doubt upon the verity of my report, and would ask him to remember the old Latin phrase: "Honi soi qui mal y pense." Neither do I desire any of his feeble attempts at sarcasm re my developing champions in his letter of August 5th, and also criticising the vulgar term that was used, "faked right and left," as I can only retaliate by requesting readers to gaze over a few of his choice epithets frequently in your advisory columns, and although I am well aware there is no love between us, I think it would have been much more to his credit, as one of your staff, had he allowed Mr. Mortlock or myself sufficient time to correct the aforementioned error, and not have rushed into print like an hysterical Suffragette the very same week the question was in print. In conclusion, I feel very sorry indeed that Mr. Mortlock's name should have been dragged into this matter, as I have always found him as straight as a gun-barrel, and apologise for the annoyance it must have caused him, but as regards the general tone of Mr. Weston's remarks about myself I take them with "Cum grano Salis."

A. J. A. Marley.

[The above letter was accompanied by a request to print it exactly as written. We have had pleasure in complying. We have no desire to interfere in this matter, but it seems strange to us that Mr. Marley should attack the credit of a member of our staff on the ground of not giving him time to correct the error, seeing that he himself (Mr. Marley) supplied us with the report in question (at our request). It is not unreasonable, we hope, to express surprise that Mr. Marley when penning this report should have overlooked the fact that he was putting his own remarks into the mouth of Mr. Mortlock.—Editor.]

Sir,—I am afraid the precise meaning of Mr. Marley's phrase about there being "no love between us" is lost upon me. I know of no reason why I should love him or why I should bear him ill-will; and so far as I am aware I do neither. Why he should be angry with me for correcting something which he himself admits to be altogether inaccurate I cannot conjecture. In fact the whole affair is something of a puzzle. For instance, I did not use the word "vulgar" at all; nor did I notice any "vulgarity." Mr. Marley is apparently content to label his own language "vulgar" in order that he may have the pleasure of exposing the "choice epithets" I myself use when answering querists on another page. I have no doubt his censure is well deserved—I must try to mend my ways—just as I have no doubt that he himself could answer the questions far better than I am able to do. He speaks of my "feeble attempts at sarcasm" when I mention his ability in developing birds into champions. Mr. Marley himself has told us of his own ability time and again; and the show reports bear him out. Therefore this is not "feeble sarcasm;" it is only the solid truth. I am, I think, as ready to admit my mistakes (they are numerous enough) as most people; infallibility is a privilege reserved, it would seem, for one or two exhibitors.

G. E. Weston.

The City of Glasgow O.A.

Sir,—I have been lying low in connection with the recent quibble—I use that term advisedly, because it is given out openly that a large stock of young birds has been bred by one of the expelled members, and that these will take part in the competition of the City of Glasgow in spite of the expulsion. Present the opportunity of showing good birds, and plenty are ready to act. Where old and young are mixed in the same classes, as at the City of Glasgow, it is impossible to say whom the exhibits belong to beforehand. It may come out afterwards, but that is too late to be of practical utility. The president, Mr. Black, is a gentleman full of resource, and I ask him thus publicly, how he will meet what is almost certain to arise? The effort to keep them out of the shows will give rise to no end of quarrelling under the existing rules; and, in the end, where are the members? I do not mention this to stir up animosity, but simply want to warn members, so that they may be prepared for eventualities. Now is the time to discuss the pros and cons of the position.

A Member.

The "Champion" Singing Linnet

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Green, I am greatly surprised at his letter. He knows very well that my champion never sang in the contest which he won. Had he sung I have no douht in the least what the result would have heen. My champion Linnet has won every contest he has been entered in, with the exception of two, and on both these occasions he did not sing. He has only sung once in Leeds, and easily won first prize. After that contest a Leeds gentleman, well known to Mr. Green, offered £8 for him. I offered to sing Mr. Green on his own terms; also another Leeds champion. Mr. Green's hird has been placed third several times. If Mr. Green would like a match, I will sing him £6 to £4, the winner to give the amount won to the Leeds or the Hull Hospital. Should Mr. Green not accept this, I would kindly ask him to omit my name from any further challenges and letter writing, and seek notoriety elsewhere.

Fred Allen.

Sir,—Re Mr. Green's letter regarding the "champion" Linnet singing in the Whitsuntide contest at Castleford. If your readers refer hack to your paper with the report of the sing, they will find that Mr. Towers was placed first, but it was with Mr. Green's hird, which he had hung previously in the same contest himself. It did nothing for Mr. Green. Our members had also heard them say in Leeds since the contest that Mr. Nelson (one of our members) ought to have been first, hut was placed third. The judges for quality, for which Mr. Towers got first with Mr. Green's bird, were both Leeds men, as we do not understand quality singing in Castleford.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

The Yorkshire :: :: Canary. The Pride of the Fancy.

By E. J. CUNDALL, Halifax.

The beauty of form, the graceful carriage, and the lovely quality of feather of the present-day Yorkshire Canary appeal irresistibly to the bird lover. North, south, east, and west, throughout the United Kingdom, hath the Yorkshire set his sway. Here, there, and everywhere have his subjects formed societies for his advancement, and our cousins across the seas have acknowledged his supremacy. And the Yorkshire bird must know it, else why that proud and confident carriage?

Do you remember the fancier from Australia—I forget the gentleman's name—who visited the Crystal Palace Show of 1908, or was it '07? Well, his vocabulary was sufficient until he came to the Yorkshire classes, when he was struck speechless and straightaway fell down and worshipped. He had, he said, seen birds of other varieties in his own country that compared favourably with those of the same varieties here. But the Yorkshires!!

The Aspect of the Room.

It is not my intention to lay down the law as to which aspect the Yorkshire breeder's bird room should have. The vast majority of the fanciers are working men who have to make use of the spare attic or bedroom without regard to the question as to whether it faces any particular point of the compass; and besides, it is not an essential point. I have found fanciers on opposite sides of the street who have done equally well; and a friend of mine who faces due north invariably breeds a good number.

The same applies to cages and the general paraphernalia of the bird-room. Most of us have built up our stock as we have progressed—from the season when someone persuaded us to try "just an odd pair." So that uniformity is not necessary for the successful breeding of the Yorkshire. It looks better, certainly, but it is not within the province of this article to deal with these matters. Let me here recommend to the novice (we have some old-fashioned novices here in Yorkshire) that book of Mr. Claude St. John's, entitled "Canary Breeding for Beginners."

Neither shall I lay down hard and fast rules as to diet. Clean seeds, good food, plenty of grit, and pure water are essential; and remember the old saying, "Cleanliness is next to Godliness."

What a Yorkie Really is.

Before you can breed Yorkshires you must have in your mind's eye a true conception of what a Yorkshire is. The ideal, to my mind, is to be found on the plate of Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires issued by Cage Birds some time ago. Keep that ideal impressed on your mind when you are selecting stock and pairing up, and just as surely shall you get birds as good.

I remember visiting, some years ago, a well-known breeder's room to buy a yellow cock. I was afraid I should have to come away without the birds I was seeking. None of the birds he showed me suited, until he fetched one from the flight, and as I sat by the table where he was staging them, I got a view of the profile of the bird, and I knew I had found what I was seeking—a long, well-drawn bird of good condition, compact, and having plenty of swagger. Unfortunately I soon had him claimed, as I was exhibiting in the novice classes of the Yorkshire Union.

A Yorkshire, remember, is all of a piece—not a body with a head, wings, legs, and tail stuck on, as it were. These parts must harmonise and make up as a symmetrical being.

How to Get Position and Outline.

How are we to get position and a clean-cut nicely tapered outline bred into our birds? Briefly, the secret is: use Belgian blood with discretion. A second or third cross is best. Remember that when using the Belgian you have to guard against flat backs, sharp fronts, thin necks, snaky heads and poor feather. You must see to it that the birds which you are pairing your Belgian bred birds to have none of those grave faults, but possess nice round heads, well filled-in necks, clean fronts, nicely rounded backs, and short feather of extra good quality. Thus you will get birds that will be "all there," whether in the show cage or in the box cage. You will always find them in that position—upright and fearless—so essential to the Yorkie, and your birds will have that delightful bit of "swagger" that marks the high-class Yorkshire.

Not Made in One Season.

A strain of Yorkshires that will throw exhibition birds is not made in one season. Even after much study and careful selection two or three breeding seasons will pass before you get a good grip of the possibilities of your birds, and can confidently pair up with the certainty of breeding one that will hold its own in any company. The successful breeder of this or any other variety must have the gift of foresight, which may best be summed up as "intelligent anticipation."

While colour only counts 5 points in the official scale of the Yorkshire Canary Club on the show bench, it has more weight. Good colour on a Yorkshire does not cover a multitude of faults, but certainly it is a great help to successful exhibiting, and you will get it by using Green blood of the right sort. There is Green blood and Green blood, but what you require is the "bronze green," and not the washed-out kind. The same applies to Cinnamon markings; they must be rich cinnamon colour. I know a breeder who has bred self-greens and self-cinnamons from his ticked and variegated birds in one season, but he never gets a good colour on his Yorkshires. It is a sort of washed-out green and cinnamon. So when you introduce Green or Cinnamon marked birds, see that they have a rich depth of colour.

Avoid Chopping and Changing.

The breeder who is always chopping and changing, introducing fresh blood from this, that, and the other room, and pairing up without regard to the stamp and pedigree of the birds, is not likely to be successful. The breeder who is content to plod on for a year or two with a knowledge of the possibilities of inbreeding will arrive at his goal far sooner.

From good stock pair up cousins, uncle and neice, aunt and nephew. But I do not recommend going nearer than half-brother and sister. If your strain of birds is all right, in three or four seasons you will be able to pair up and know what to expect. In all your pairing up avoid that abomination—the drop tail.

Double-buffing and double-yellowing are often questions of debate when Yorkshire breeders meet. So far as double-buffing is concerned, I would remind you of the famous advice of "Punch," viz., don't. Double-buffing has been extensively tried in the past to increase size; and it may have been successful. But it has tended to increase feather also. The fact that most fanciers breed more buffs than yellows can, in my opinion, be put down to forebears, which were bred from double-buffs. No, don't double-buff.

Double-yellowing, however, I recommend; but don't do it indiscriminately. If you have a pair of yellows on the strong side, then you can pair them up to advantage; but never pair up finely-drawn breedy birds that are somewhat scanty in feather. You will get birds too sharp, stilty, and scanty of feather.

The Best Results.

I certainly think the best results are obtained by running one cock with two hens. Of course, you have to watch them to see whether the hens will feed without the cock, but as a rule take the cock bird away when the hen has sat a couple of days. She will be found to hatch the young ones out all right, and will bring them up by herself. If the hen does not take kindly to feeding, then put the cock back.

Budgerigar Breeding IN Outdoor Cages.

By C. T. HUMPHREY (Kingstown).

Of all the many fascinating branches of the hobby of bird keeping, I doubt if there is one that is more interesting or that requires so little attention as the breeding of that delightful little Parraquet the Budgerigar. To successfully breed these birds it is not necessary to erect an extensive aviary; I have found that they are quite ready to rear a family when kept in a fairly spacious cage.

A Suitable Cage Described.

A very suitable cage is one measuring five feet in length, two feet in height, and about two feet from back to front. This would accommodate two breeding pairs, and if it is made perfectly weather-proof by means of covering the roof, back, and sides with good felt, the birds can be kept out of doors all the year round, as they are very hardy; they will, in fact, keep in better condition if housed in this manner than if kept in a small cage indoors.

Two husk nests should be fixed at each end of the cage, so that the hens may have a choice of a nesting place, and so prevent as far as possible any quarrelling between them. The best husks are those with the entrance at the top, which to some extent will prevent the hen from accidentally throwing out her eggs and young.

Although when they once make a start Budgerigars are very free breeders, they do not always settle down to nesting at once, some birds taking several months, while others will commence breeding in a few days.

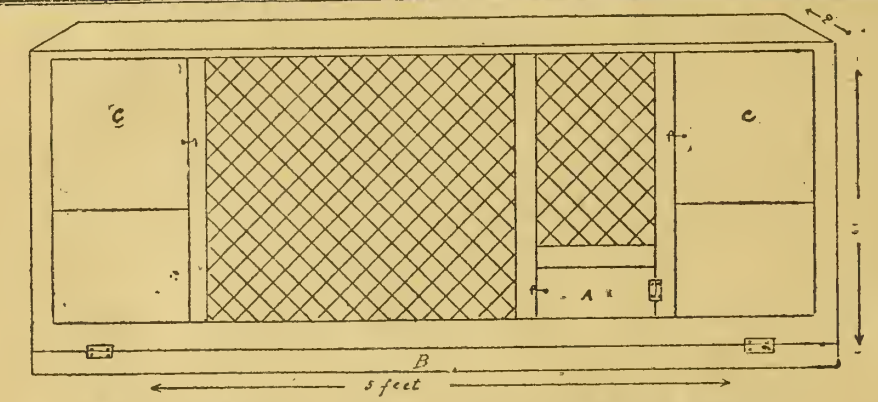
Quite Hardy, But ——

Do not allow your birds to rear more than three broods in the year, and although I have had young leave the nest in January when the snow was on the ground without suffering any ill effect from the weather, it is not advisable to begin breeding operations until the beginning of April.

They should be removed to a fresh cage as soon as they are able to look after themselves, as they are apt to interfere with the old birds, which will have commenced nesting again by that time. A large cage should be provided for them, which should be well furnished with perches, swings, etc., which will afford them means for exercising, and give great amusement both to themselves and to their owner.

They Soon Become Tame.

Cage-bred Budgerigars soon become very tame, and if accustomed to it will allow themselves to be lifted from their perches into the swing by means of a thin stick put through the wire; and the more violently they are set swinging to and fro the greater seems to be their enjoyment.



If a casual glance is taken at a group of Budgerigars they appear to be exactly alike in every respect, but on closer inspection each bird will be found to have some distinguishing mark, either in manner or expression, and it soon becomes quite an easy matter to pick out any particular bird.

Although when in their wild state these birds are said to bathe by rolling in wet grass, I find that my Budgerigars have no objection to bathing in the usual way, and will splash about in a shallow dish of water with evident enjoyment.

Their Diet is Very Simple.

The diet of the Budgerigar is very simple; Canary seed and white and spray millet are its chief food. Flowering grass should be supplied always when obtainable, especially when young birds are to be fed, and a few white oats given occasionally will be much enjoyed, while a piece of cuttle fish bone should be hung always within their reach. A hen Budgerigar I once possessed was very fond of catching any small moths which found their way into the cage, and would devour them with great relish.

There is one thing to be avoided if your birds are to be kept in health, and that is overcrowding. It is certainly much better to have a few birds in perfect condition than a large number of unhealthy-looking specimens. Budgerigars are lively, cheerful little birds by nature, but if too closely confined they will soon become dull and uninteresting. So for his own sake as well as for the birds' sake, the fancier who wishes successfully to breed Budgerigars in cages should make sure that they are able to obtain all the exercise essential to their well-being.

A BREEDING CAGE FOR BUDGERIGARS.

This very suitable type of cage can easily be constructed out of a strong packing case.

A: Small door for use when feeding, etc. B: Hinged flap for cleaning purposes. C: Large doors for use when removing husks, etc.

It is very interesting to watch the hen Budgerigar as she pops in and out of the husks selecting one to her fancy, and then busying herself in shaping the interior to her liking and removing all hard pieces of fibre. The cock meanwhile follows her about evidently much interested in the proceedings.

From four to eight, or even nine, eggs are laid, but I find that the usual number of young birds reared is about four. Incubation, which lasts about three weeks, is undertaken entirely by the hen; but as soon as the young birds are hatched the cock enters the husk and assists his mate in feeding them.

A Most Careful Housekeeper.

The hen Budgerigar is a most careful housekeeper, and gives her nest a daily cleaning, which does not, however, seem to be greatly appreciated by the members of her family, who give vent to their disapproval with loud squeaks and grunts as they are unceremoniously hustled about by their industrious mother.

The young birds do not leave the nest until they are five weeks old and fully fledged. They are the most delightful little birds imaginable, with their beautifully sleek little bodies and large shining black eyes. When in their nest feather young Budgerigars do not have yellow foreheads like their parents, the pencilling being continued to the base of the beak; the green of the breast is of a lighter hue; and the markings on the wings are not of so deep a black as those of the adult birds.

Bird Organs.

How to Adjust and Repair Them.

By TOM ROUTLEDGE (Stockport).

"I wonder what is the matter with the organ? Just when I want it it will not go." This was the remark which was passed in a county town in Lancashire. Being interested I was asked to look at the organ, and I came to the conclusion that a good shake would do it good, as the notes were working all right, only they were not vibrating or trembling. I gave it a good sharp tap with the palms of my shands simultaneously on each side, and the organ began to do its duty at once—the beautiful schookel-like trembling was resumed as it used to be.

"Well, I never," said Bill. "Who'd a' thought o' that?" I explained to them that probably they had kept it for some time without working it and the vibrator had cemented up. I left them in the highest glee.

Small things that matter.

These are the little things that stop the working of the bird organ. If the notes are clear but do not vibrate, it is the vibrator that has stuck, or sometimes it is something worse when the vibrator becomes unfastened at the hinge. This latter is a far more serious matter, as the machine requires pulling to pieces to allow one to get at the vibrator. The vibrator will require cementing to the wood flap. This is a very tedious job, as you must keep trying it to see that it will work all right before putting the organ together again, or your labour will have been in vain.

Sometimes you will find that the notes are all rumbling. To alter this you must see that the strips or canes on the barrel are working in rotation, and see, too, that the valve rods are not stuck; these are easily strained and every care is required in working the valves, as they are the most particular part of the organ. Try all the valves with the mouth first.

Clearing its Voice.

To undo the Queck organ, take out the tube through which the air passes. This is a tight fit, but it is only just pressed in. After taking out the tube, lift the organ out of the tin case. Then blow down the tube and through the organ, at the same time turning the barrel round with your hand. This will clear all the passages in the notes and will clear your organ, too, and do it good.

In the case of the Buhl organ, unscrew it from the bottom, where you will find three screws. After this lift the organ out of the wooden case and blow through the organ just the same as in the case of the Queck, at the same time turning the barrel round with your hand. Sometimes in the case of the Queck organ you will require to adjust it, as you will notice the levers work differently from those in the Buhl organ. Try adjusting it by unscrewing the two screws that fasten on the bridge—a little turn either way will make a great difference, as it puts your adjustment on your valves. These require careful attention, as the least turn will undo all your work at once.

Keeping it going.

Always work your organ once a day; that is, let it run down once. If you do this you will not be troubled by your organ being out of order very often. In most cases it is the owner's fault when the organ is out of order. I have had organs that a sharp tap has set going; others have had to be pulled to pieces, and I have had to go over them many times before I have discovered that the defect has been a crack in the wood through which the air has been escaping. In the case of one of them I found that the bass would not work. I was in sore trouble; I tried all ways with it, but it was no use. I then came to the conclusion that the hammer was too heavy for the pressure of air to lift it. I therefore nipped off a piece of lead from the hammer and that did the trick. The bass worked beautifully. Always watch the hammer if anything is the matter with the bass. If the bass is not working right it may require a little adjusting by pressing the hammer so that it beats right on the drum. If not right, then try by bending the wire of the hammer down until the lead weight rests on the drum.

Always try to leave your organ at rest; that is, always leave it at starting point when all the valves will be at rest. By watching these little points there will be less complaints about organs, and those that have them will make themselves acquainted with the working parts, which will be far more satisfactory than having to send them over to Germany to be adjusted.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

THE R.S.P.C.A. AND RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Notes by the Secretary.

Members will have noticed that in the first extract taken from the "Animal World" and published last week there occurs a statement which is very far indeed from the truth. In their anxiety to make a case for themselves the professional humanitarians do not scruple to say whatever occurs to them at the moment, but that is no reason why we should allow misstatements to pass uncontradicted. I therefore thought it my duty as your secretary to write to the Editor of the magazine in question, and as the "Animal World" may not be read by all our members I reproduce my letter in these columns. It reads as under, and the answer, if any, will also be republished.

Our Letter to the R.S.P.C.A.

Sir,—I should be obliged if you would allow me a few words in direct reply to your leaderette in the News and Notes columns of "The Animal World" for the current month. In your reference to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE you make a definite statement that "the appeal for better treatment seeks to obscure the real issue." The real issue is whether or not those who wish to keep under proper treatment birds of any kind in captivity shall be allowed to do so without molestation, and I would say emphatically that this issue has never been kept out of the forefront of any statement made by CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The main raison d'etre of the LEAGUE is to oppose undue interference on the part of those who would abolish altogether the hobby of bird-keeping. It is the contention of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE that, in proper conditions, birds may be kept in captivity not only without cruelty, but in such manner that their lives are spent in perfect contentment, free from the vicissitudes to which they would be subject in a state of Nature. It is admitted that some people err in the treatment of their pets, not from intent, but from lack of knowledge of their requirements, and to supply this knowledge, and so improve the lot of badly kept birds, is an object, and a perfectly legitimate object, of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, one which seeks neither to obscure the real issue nor to beg the question whether or not discomfort, amounting sometimes to cruelty, is occasionally inflicted upon captive birds. Your "grave suspicions as to the value of this LEAGUE" may be left to yourself. We who know something of our subject know its value, and with that knowledge we are content. Those who know neither its value nor its strength will show both as circumstances develop.

The interesting article entitled "A Monkey Tea Party," in the same issue of your magazine, is particularly apropos. If the writer will alter "monkeys" into birds, "hair" into "feathers," and will favour me with a few minutes' interview at any bird show, say the forthcoming exhibition at the Horticultural Hall, Wesminster, or that at the Crystal Palace, I will undertake to convince her that every word of her three introductory paragraphs may be written of any exhibition of cage birds, and that a "revelation" awaits her equal at least to that which she experienced at the Monkey Tea Party.

In conclusion, a word, with your permission, on your review of the pamphlet, "The other side of the Bars." To put it bluntly, this pamphlet is a gross and unwarrantable exaggeration. There is the slightest possible foundation for some of the statements made therein, and upon this flimsy basis has been built up a gross diatribe of which not a single paragraph is justifiable. A full and complete answer to its hysterics was published in CAGE BIRDS of June 3 last, and I beg to enclose a reprint of this for your kind perusal. I shall be pleased to support in fair and open argument any or all of the refutations contained in that reply."

How Caged Birds "Suffer."

I commend to the notice of those who apply such epithets as "an outrage on Nature," "an acted blasphemy," and the like to the keeping of birds in cages, the extract quoted below from a letter received from a patient in Sunderland Royal Infirmary:

. . . Worse still, I am in the infirmary with a lame knee. But I have something to interest me at the head of my bed. The Sister has the wisest Goldfinch I have ever seen: it will come and kiss her, and take tit-bits out of her mouth. No matter how many people pass up and down tho room, it takes no notice until Sister herself passes, when it chirps and sings to her, and is disappointed if sho takes no notice of it. The Sisters have plenty of work and not many amusements, and this one takes a real pleasure in looking after her bird. The sight of tho affection existing between the owner and the bird goes a long way to ease my pain as I lie upon my bed.

Fence Houses, Durham. D. HANN.

This letter, of course, is only a sample of hundreds of cases which may be cited to prove the fallacy of the hysterical arguments advanced against bird-keeping. But as the bird mentioned is one of our own native "feathered fellow creatures" which are especially chosen by these people as the basis of their attacks, I have quoted the caso as being particularly apropos.

A Move at Nottingham.

I have received a letter from a Nottingham reader containing the information that the R.S.P.C.A. inspectors of that town have gone to the extreme of warning the booking clerks that they are liable to prosecution if they receive for transmission any British bird, whether scheduled or not, or whether in or out of the close season. I have heard something of this before, and mention it here only to show the activity of those who mean if they can to abolish the hobby of bird-keeping. Whether the directors and shareholders of the railways concerned know that their clerks are thus refusing revenue I am not aware. Three railway companies serve Nottingham—the Midland, Great Northern, and the Central—and I am taking steps to ascertain whether the action of the booking clerks, under the pressure of the society inspectors, is a matter within the knowledge of the authorities of these three companies.

My correspondent says he has often wondered if the R.S.P.C.A. knows or cares of the methods prevailing in the hatching of Pheasants' eggs under poultry, and goes on to describe some of these methods. He says that the sitting hens are confined in verminous boxes about a foot square for twenty-three and a-half hours out of the twenty-four, and that during the remaining half-hour they are tied by the leg with a string about a foot long attached to a peg driven into the ground.

The Obvious Remedy.

As cage-bird keepers we have nothing to do with poultry, but it would certainly seem that here is an outlet for the energy of the humanitarians which would do them infinitely more credit than their unwarrantable interference with a hobby which affords instruction and recreation to thousands upon thousands of working men with an absolute minimum of discomfort to the birds themselves.

An interference with the sport of the monied classes would be quite a different matter from the prosecution of the working man in the pursuit of his hobby, and it is not likely that the professional humanitarians wish to have their attention called to any cruelty contingent upon the sport of the well-to-do. Much rather would they prevent an individual householder from keeping a pet Canary. This seems to them an easier as well as a more politic proceeding, and we can only face them by an enormous combination. As I have said repeatedly, it is in the power of the readers of CAGE BIRDS to form this combination in a week. When the blow has fallen it will be too late. Prevent the possibility of the blow by joining CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE at once. The League is already of a strength which would surprise our adversaries, but it rests with every individual reader of these lines to make that strength into impregnability. It was said last week, "To-morrow never comes." Don't put off your joining until "to-morrow." Join to-day.

The Oppression at Millom.

I have received from Mr. Park a letter of thanks for the interest taken by members in this case, and for the advice already tendered him by our worthy Editor. Enclosed with the letter is a copy of a local newspaper referring to the case, and I trust next week to be able to report progress. I think every member of the League will be pleased to hear that we are taking action in the matter, especially as Mr. Park and a number of other Millom fanciers have now become members. In his letter Mr. Park says, "The only thing I regret is that we did not join before this trouble came upon us. I hope it will be a warning to others, for they may at any time be sprung upon with the same surprise as myself."

The Rolled Gold Badges.

Since the introduction of the rolled gold badges nearly every member joining has applied for one of these in preference to the 6d. ones, and the demand for one pattern (that in brooch form) has been so great that the stock has completely run out. A large order for a fresh supply is in course of execution, but the new brooches will not be ready for a few days, and I ask the indulgence of those about to join, and who wish for this particular form of badge. I have plenty of all the other forms mentioned in our list. New members joining and applying for the rolled gold brooch will receive their membership receipt by return post, and the badge as soon as delivered by the makers, who have been delayed in the execution of the order by the Strikes.

Our New Seals.

These pretty seals have given great satisfaction, and orders are coming in by every post. The price is eightpence per hundred, post free. Smaller quantities at the hundred rate, but with one penny extra for postage. They are an ornament to envelopes ,notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc., and all members should use them.

More Local Hon. Secs.

It gives me great pleasure to publish the following additions to the list of names of gentlemen who have kindly undertaken to act as local Honorary Secretaries to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Pamphlets explaining the aims and objects of the LEAGUE may be had of these gentlemen who will also be glad to give any other information that may be required. Previous lists of local Honorary Secretaries appeared in CAGE BIRDS, issues dated August 5, August 12, and August 19. It is hoped that fanciers in all the towns mentioned in these lists will join the LEAGUE through their respective local honorary secretaries.

Dalton-in-Furness: F. Houldsworth, 68, Cobden Street.
Taunton: W. H. Grant, School House.
Northampton: J. Fisher, 63 Newland.
Kettering: J. Roberts, 114, St. Peter's Avenue.
Peterborough: H. Popple, 51, Alderman's Drive.

OUR FREE BOOKLETS.

I have still some of each of the sixpenny pamphlets on British Bird Culture and on Canary and Hybrid Culture, and, as long as they last, one of either will be sent gratis to all new members applying for a copy at the time of joining. Those of the old members who have not yet had a copy may receive one of those reserved for them on sending a penny stamp for postage. Only one copy of either book can be sent free either to new members or old, and when the stock in hand is exhausted I may not be able to get a fresh supply, so that those who would make sure of getting one of these useful pamphlets should send on their application with their membership fee without delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AND BADGES.

The subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is one shilling annually, and the badges sixpence or one shilling. The sixpenny badges are in three forms: (1) a button for coat lapel, (2) a pendant for watch chain, (3) a brooch for lapel, cycling cap, or for lady's wear. The badges at one shilling each are mounted in 9-carat rolled-gold, and are in two forms only: (1) a pendant for watch chain, (2) a brooch for a lady or for cycling cap or coat lapel. Members should distinctly state which form they prefer.

JUNIOR BRANCH.

The annual subscription to the JUNIOR BRANCH, for members under fourteen years of age at the date of joining, is sixpence. Price of badges as above.

PATRONS.

Ladies or gentlemen who are in sympathy with the objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE may give practical expression to that sympathy by becoming PATRONS of the LEAGUE and either making a lump sum donation to its funds or subscribing an annual amount of a guinea or upwards. One-half of such donation or subscription may be allotted to any individual object of the LEAGUE.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The qualification for Vice-Presidentship is an annual subscription of not less than half a guinea, and one-half of this subscription may be allotted to either the Literature Fund, the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be given at any show nominated by the subscriber. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the LEAGUE, to advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

See the point? Unless you get entire satisfaction I don't get a penny for my goods. I make no idle boasts, but I do claim to give better value than any man in the trade. Shearer, jun., of this town, leaves at an early date for New Zealand, and recently we met at his house and presented a small souvenir to him as a reminder of the fancier friends he leaves behind in the old country. Our worthy Vice-President (Mr. J. Braidwood) in a few well-chosen words made the presentation, and at the same time conveyed our appreciation of our departing member, referring especially to his successful career as an exhibitor of evenmarked Borders, and judge of all varieties of Borders; also to his upright character and sterling worth as a man. Mr. Shearer, who was feeling keenly the parting from his loved ones (his wife and family do not go out with him yet), replied in very suitable terms, and stated he would always remember us, and no matter in what part of the world he might be, he would always remain a member. He hoped to be able to continue in the Fancy in the land of his adoption. If his wish bears fruit, he will be an acquisition over there, and our loss will be their gain. Afterwards a high tea was disposed of and all present wished him prosperity, good health, and a pleasant voyage. This terminated a very happy gathering, one that will always remain a happy memory.—For Wm. Shearer, President, A.C.

Club Reports.

SITTINGBOURNE & DIS. F. & F.S.

Committee met August 21st, when business connected with the annual show, 25th and 26th October, was dealt with. The schedule was approved and passed, showing a wide range in classification which should attract all branches of fanciers, and a highly successful show is in prospect. The judges are Messrs. G. Gardiner, London (cage birds, etc.), and J. N. Harrison, of Belper.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held Swan Hotel, Fountain Street, Manchester, August 26, Mr. A. Foulds in chair. There was a nice turnout of members. After the business of the meeting, Mr. Massey (Bolton) gave us an interesting lecture. This was very cordially received. There is an interesting item to bring before the members at next meeting; all the members that can are requested to attend.—Tom Routledge.

FIFE AND KINROSS N.P.C.

Meeting held "Masonic Arms," Cowdenbeath, Mr. A. Dickson in chair. Decided to grant patronage to Lochgelly, Kelty, Cowdenbeath and Bowhill shows. A handsome challenge silver cup, 3 silver medals, and a host of valuable specials are to be given for competition at the four shows. All Fife fanciers desirous of becoming members can be enrolled by paying 2s. 6d. for membership, which entitles them to compete for club's specials and thus bring the Norwich Fancy still more to the front.—Gilbert Fisher, Sec.

PENTRE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a poorly attended meeting (Mr. G. Lewis presiding) the following resolutions were passed: "That Mr. J. H. Payne be appointed judge for our next half-annual open show, to be held on Oct. 12th"; "that all fanciers wishing to become members can do so by paying the 1s. 3d. entrance fee and 2s. 6d. annual contribution," and "that all members wishing to retain their membership and secure the privileges offered by the society to members at our next show must not fail to comply with the above within 28 days from above date, or they will forfeit their claims to same." The usual vote of thanks was passed.—Geo. Lingard, Sec.

LOCHORE AND GLENCRAIG C.B.S.

Meeting held Mr. R. Johnston's room, 26th Aug., Mr. J. Donaldson in chair. There was a fair attendance of members present. Sec. read over classifications for show to be held 25th Nov. All classes were passed without any comment. We are giving following: Scotch Fancy 9, Borders 12, Crest and Crestbred 6, Yorks 9, Norwich Plainhead 14, Common and Gift 1 each, Mules and Hybrids 4, British 12, Foreign birds 3, making a total of 71 classes. Sec. also instructed to get samples of prize cards, and get 100 members' cards printed. The aims and objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE were discussed at some length, after which Sec. enrolled seven members' names; he has hopes of adding a few more.—H. Grant, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW, QUEEN'S PARK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held 25th August, Marie Stuart Halls, Crosshill, Mr. Richard Thomson presiding before a large number of members. The third annual show has been fixed for 28th October, and this to be held in the Victoria Rooms, Victoria Road. Classification was given for Norwich, Crest and Crestbreds, Borders, Yorkshires, British, Mules or Hybrids, and Foreign Birds—53 classes in all. Four open classes for Norwich Plainheads were also agreed to, entry fee in the open classes to be 1s. each exhibit, and after deducting expenses for cards, etc., the balance to be divided up proportionately between 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th. The judges appointed are Mr. Smeaton (Musselburgh) and Mr. R. B. Gibb (Ibrox).—Robt. Heggie, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held headquarters, Aug. 21st, when the classification for the open show, to be held in November, was arranged. Norwich have 6 classes, Yorkshires 6, British 6, Mules 3, Foreign 2, Selling 2, A.O.V. Can, 1, Novice Nor. 4, Novice Yorks. 4, and twelve members' classes. Mr. T. Turncock (Fenton) was elected a member. Also decided to have a ramble on Sunday, Sept. 3rd., the venue being Moddersall. Meet at Red Lion Hotel, 1.15 p.m. Members will be photographed before starting, so that it is desirable that all should attend who can make it convenient to do so. We go by train to Blyth Bridge. It was also decided to hold a club show on Boxing Day, when the cup competition will take place. This will be held at Newcastle-under-Lyme, and as it is many years since there has been anything of the kind there, the venture should prove both popular and successful. Next monthly meeting, Sept. 10th.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting held 15th August at 71, London Street, Glasgow, Mr. Penman (President) in chair. The Secretary read applications for patronage from nine open shows. Unfortunately, however, two of these clashed in October, and three in the New Year week. After a general discussion it was decided that, under the circumstances, we grant our patronage to five shows only, instead of six as had originally been intended. The following were the successful applicants, viz., Lochgelly, Ayr and Dis., Kilmarnock, Lochore and Glencraig, and Glasgow and Dis. Our club show is to be held at the last-named fixture. The President pointed out the necessity of having a special prize subscription list opened. This was agreed to, and in a few minutes the sum of 25s. was subscribed by those present. I would respectfully draw the attention of our members to this list, and trust that all will endeavour to send on a small donation. Mr. Penman then intimated that he intended presenting the sum of £1 to the club funds, and Mr. Bowman offered to give a special for most points in the young bird classes at each of the patronised shows with the exception of Glasgow. Needless to say, these kind offers were gratefully accepted, and both gentlemen cordially thanked. The following new members were enrolled, viz., Messrs. T. Reilly (Buckhaven), D. Aitkenhead (Partick), J. F. Park and J. Cargill (Glasgow), and J. Sloan (Ayr). Members who have not already done so might let me know at once how many show cages they require, as the order is now on hand. Will show secretaries and others please note that I am presently on holiday, but will attend to all correspondence, etc., immediately after my return on 4th September. —R. B. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

The beautiful nest of the Long-tailed Tit is begun and finished in a fortnight, from the first layer of moss to the last feather of the lining. The entrance is at the side. Twitterings.

Mr. T. Barker will, we hear, judge the Eastfield Side C.B.S. annual show on November 4th.

Allow me to wish CAGE BIRDS every success. It is very helpful indeed to fanciers.—L. J. Weeks (of the Swanage and Isle of Purbeck F.S.).

Our show date is fixed for October 28th, and Mr. H. Seely, of Choppington, is engaged to judge, writes Mr. Jas. Barrass, secretary, South Shields Cage Bird Society.

I regret to say, writes Mr. A. Cant, late secretary of the Hamilton (Cadzow Oaks) O.S., that our worthy secretary, Mr. G. Marlin, has met with a slight accident in the pit which will incapacitate him for a week or two.

We have extended our radius to sixteen miles from Newark Market Place, writes Mr. W. Lidgett, chairman of the Newark and District Cage Bird Society. Will fanciers in the neighbourhood please note and join the society?

You will be interested to learn, writes our local representative, that the Market Drayton Agricultural Association have this year included a cage bird section (13-mile radius) at their show to be held on September 21. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood (Newport, Salop) is judging in this section.

The Aylesbury and Dis. F.S. have engaged Mr. Geo. Gardner to judge cage birds at our next show, to be held in the Town Hall, Aylesbury, on Oct. 26, writes Mr. F. Rayner, sec. Our membership radius is now extended to 25 miles.

We have received an order for a copy of "Aviaries, Birdrooms and Cages," by Mr. H. Norman, from Mr. William James, but before we can send him the book we require to know his address, which he omitted to give when writing us.

Members of the Lancaster and District C.B.S. are earnestly requested to attend meeting next Saturday, September 2nd, at 7 p.m., at the Market Hall Coffee Tavern, writes Mr. W. H. Winder. The business is the reading of a special letter of apology.

We have arranged to hold our annual open show on November 22nd, writes Mr. W. Colyer, hon. secretary of the Swanley and District F. and F.A. This year we are adding cage birds to our schedule, for which we have 34 classes Mr. C. A. House is judging this section.

The Council of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies has elected Mr. H. W. Cook, 4a, St. Dunstan's Alley, Great Tower Street, E.C., to the position of show secretary for the show which is to be held under its auspices on October 27th and 28th next, writes Mr. James Bray, jun., the hon. secretary. All letters relating to the show should be sent to Mr. Cook.

The next meeting of the Edinburgh Norwich Canary and Mule Breeders' Society, writes Mr. James Finnie, the secretary, will be held in Rooms, 142, High Street, on September 7th, at 7 p.m., when Mr. Steel (Dalkeith) will give a lecture on "Foods and Fallacies," and show specimens of wild seeds and live insects in relation to the feeding of British birds; at the finish of the lecture he will answer questions, all questions to be submitted in writing. All fanciers are invited to attend.

Kindly accept my thanks for the many useful hints I have had from CAGE BIRDS from time to time, and I wish your paper every success. I could not get a copy for three weeks, as it could not be had in this out-of-the-way district, but I have arranged with the newsagent now to have it ordered on his list every week, so I hope to get it regularly now. I felt so lonely without it.—A. WILLIAMS (Trefriw, North Wales).

We have, write Messrs. Danysz Virus, Limited (52, Leadenhall Street, London), just brought out the Virus in liquid form, which is sold in bottles of about one quart each, and which need simply be poured over 2½lbs. of stale bread or flaked oats, and the bait is ready for use. The liquid Virus is harmless to other animals and human beings, shows visible results, and has a most sweeping effect on the rats. Practical trials have been made in this country with most gratifying results.

Mr. Winter has resigned his position as secretary of the Guisborough and District Priory C.B.S., and I have been appointed his successor, writes Mr. S. H. Lambert, 25, Gill Street, Guisborough. I hope exhibitors will note, and give their continued support to this society.

The third outing of the Sheffield C.B.S. is to be held on Saturday, September 2nd, the place chosen being Strines, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assistant secretary. Wagonettes leave Hillsborough Bridge at 2 o'clock, and go via Rivelin Valley and Hollow Meadows. The fare is 2s. All friends are cordially invited.

We have removed our headquarters from the Red Lion Hotel to the Shoulder of Mutton (Girlington), writes Mr. F. Western, sec. of the Bradford West C.B.A. Our next meeting is on Sept. 9 at eight o'clock. Very comfortable rooms have been secured for our meetings, and it is the committee's desire that all members should attend this meeting.

Our open show has been fixed for Nov. 11, writes Mr. Jas. Robertson, jun., the cage bird sec. of the Darvel O.S. In order to try and increase interest in the cage bird section, we have appointed a judge for each section, as follows:—For Norwich, Mr. W. G. Muir (Kilmarnock); for Borders, Mr. J. Smillie (Riccarton); for British birds, Mr. A. Hoyle (Musselburgh). We have also secured the patronage of the Border Fancy Club. We trust fanciers will rally round and support our efforts to increase the interest in our hobby in this district.

The services of the following well-known fanciers have been secured for judging at our show on October 20th and 21st, writes Mr. Alex. Macdonald, secretary of the City of Glasgow O.A.: Scotch Fancy, etc., Messrs. Joseph Higgins (Hamilton), David Low (Dundee), John Hannay (Dumfries), A. McLachlan (Govan), James Watson (Glasgow), and James Fleming (Glasgow); Norwich Classes: Plainheads, Messrs. Allan Chambers (Kirkintilloch), A. Cant (Hamilton); Crests and Crestbreds, Mr. Geo. Arnott (Kirkcaldy); Mules, British, and Foreign Birds, Messrs. James Mason (Peebles), and Samuel Ward (Glasgow); Borders, Messrs. W. S. Clarke (Irvine) and J. Bruce (Coldstream).

A Rare-feathered Robin.

It may interest fellow-readers of CAGE BIRDS to know, writes Mr. A. W. Fullwood (Wolverhampton) that I recently secured a cock Robin that has snow white wings and a bill as amber in colour as a Blackbird's; he seems quite "at home" already with me.

London Federation Show.

As show secretary of the London Federation of C.B.S., writes Mr. H. W. Cook, I have pleasure in announcing that the Council have decided to hold a show, which will take place at the St. Marylebone Institute and Club, Paddington Street, W., on October 27th and 28th. Judges: Mr. C. A. House (Canary Sections), and Mr. John Frostick (Hybrid, British, and Foreign Bird Sections). This show is, I may say, being held solely for the benefit of members affiliated to the Federation. The hall in which the show will be held is a very fine one, and we are hoping that the affiliated members will rally round us, and make this, our first show, a huge success.

Welsh Cage Bird Club.

The Welsh C.B.C. will hold a committee meeting at the Ship and Bell, Merthyr, on Sept. 16. Will any member who has anything to place before that meeting forward it either to the secretary or to myself, and it shall have due consideration? We welcome new ideas appertaining to the uplifting of the club. At the annual meeting it was suggested that we should solve the question how we could assist financially the clubs which applied for our patronage, and at the same time do justice to our own members. We want to make this year a marked one in the Fancy, so come along and help us to do so by your suggestions and subscriptions, which latter are now overdue. Will clubs requiring our patronage apply for same at once? I am pleased to say that Mr. A. E. Brown, 66, Clive Street, Merthyr Tydfil, will take up the office of hon. sec. at the committee meeting. I ask all fanciers in Wales to support him on behalf of the committee.—D. H. Tedstone, chairman, Brynter, Brecon.

On Behalf of Another.

It is with the sincerest regret, writes Mr. Alf. Hitchings (Swansea), that I beg to invoke the condolence and sympathy of South Wales fanciers for Mr. E. M. Evans, the well-known Border exhibitor, in his great misfortune. Mr. Evans has for a considerable period suffered with a diseased leg, but with the indomitable courage and fortitude which so characterises a Britisher he never complained or bemoaned his misfortune. About a fortnight ago he decided to have his practically useless member removed, and, consequently, underwent, at Swansea Hospital, an operation, which I am pleased to state was successfully performed. I am positively sure that not even the most casual observer could doubt the inestimable value of Mr. Evans to the Fancy. He has long been a successful exhibitor, a zealous and staunch club member, an indefatigable co-worker, and a valued friend. Though he is so greatly incapacitated, and, as a result, debarred from taking such an active part in the welfare of the Fancy, I trust I express the wishes of all Welsh fanciers, in not only according him sympathy in his misfortune, but in hoping that he may still see his name in the forefront during the forthcoming show season.

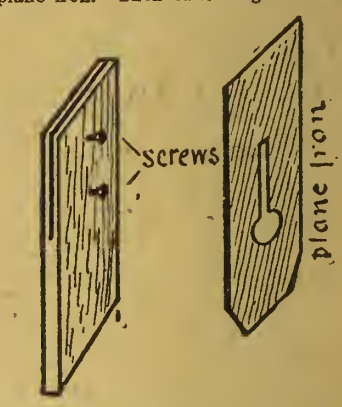
No. 536.
A Cage-making Device.
Sent by Mr. W. Milligan, 16, North Main Street, Wigtown.



The following may be useful to readers of CAGE BIRDS for making cage doors, etc., where only a certain distance has to be drilled. Get a cork and cut it to the size required; put the brogue through, leaving just the size of the brogue required. In this way all the holes can be drilled the same depth.—W. Milligan.

No. 537.
A Cage Scraper.
Sent by Mr. J. W. Conkey, c/o Mr. J. Binks, 62, Kitchener Street, Darlington.

Enclosed is a drawing of a handy cage scraper which I find very useful for different purposes. First get some joiner you know to get you an old plane iron. Then take length of wood required according to depth of cage, say, 1ft. long, ¾in. by ¾in. (pitch pine). Mark five inches down the centre of ¾in. edge and saw down. Then take your iron and fit same in; put in two small screws, and you have a very cheap scraper for cages, walls, etc. I think the sketch will explain the idea.—J. W. Conkey.

*A Blackbird's Bravery.

Recently a Blackbird built her nest in a hedge, and soon she had a brood of young ones. One day a rat was climbing up to the nest. The Blackbird flew down and pecked the rat so much that it had to retreat.—Sent by Gordon Taylor (aged 10), Tean, Staffs.

*Playful Sparrows.

Last week we hung our Canary out, and a lot of Sparrows came on to its cage. They stayed round about trying to fly in. The Canary, too, kept on trying to get out, till at last it broke a wire, when it got out. The Sparrows flew at it, and pecked it till it flew in the house. Then we put it into its cage, and the Sparrows sat on the cage trying to make friends.—Sent by Wilfrid Mather (age 13), Market Street, Rainhill.

"Darby and Joan."

Four years ago a poor frightened little Dove flew in my bedroom window. Her feathers were all ruffled, and the poor little thing dropped exhausted. My brother put her in a cage and fed her, hardly thinking she would live; but she soon began to revive, and in about two weeks was quite strong again. It has been in its cage ever since, till about two months ago we bought another Dove and built a smart little house for them, with creeper growing over the top. They looked such a quaint little pair that we called them "Darby and Joan." There she laid two eggs—such small ones! We watched them day by day until one morning, after a fortnight had elapsed, two funny little objects appeared with fluffy white feathers and peculiar long beaks. The parent Doves are ever so proud of them, and they actually put feathers in the nest for the little ones' comfort. They are growing beautifully now, and can nearly feed themselves.—Sent by Ada Tonkin, 20, Kennington Park Road, London, S.E.

New Series by this popular Author.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR

No. 12.—My Mealy Rosellas.

As Master Mobbs' double-bladed knife with a corkscrew in it was sent by his step-mother to the missionaries; so an inconvenient or superfluous article can always be utilised as a wedding present or a Christmas gift. I suppose it was on this principle that I got hold of my Mealy Rosellas. A friend wrote and offered me his pair, as they were so spiteful that nothing could live with them. I found out later on that the poor things had been imprisoned in a small enclosure about 4ft. square, which was dignified by the name of aviary; that in the same enclosure a number of quiet little birds like Zebra Finches had been confined; and that the Rosellas, no doubt annoyed by their fussy ways, had occasionally told them to move on, and on their failing to comply had used what Mr. Winston Churchill would describe as "a little necessary force" and had nipped off, no doubt quite unintentionally, a leg or two.

How could one expect birds to behave properly under such abnormal conditions? Who, in the first place, would dream of keeping Rosellas at all with little birds, and who would do so at a time when the said Rosellas wanted to go to nest?

What is Tact?

Of course, it required a good deal of tact to accept a present under these conditions, and yet not to speak unadvisedly with one's lips. Most of my readers will have heard of people who want tact. An admiring visitor said to Archbishop Langley, when he went to stay at Addington, "Dear Archbishop, everybody knows that you have the most wonderful tact in the world; how would you define it?" This was his Grace's answer: "Not long ago a priest wrote to me soliciting a Living. He began his letter thus: 'Knowing your Grace's advanced age and increasing infirmities, I can no longer delay to put my wishes before you.' That," said his Grace slyly, "was not tact."

If I had told my friend that nobody but a fool would have put Mealy Rosellas with Zebra Finches, I should undoubtedly have lost a friend for life. I therefore concealed my knowledge, and wrote back that it was exceedingly kind of him to think of making me such a valuable present, and that practically what the Rosellas wanted was a course of solitary confinement, then, as St. Paul says, they might "learn to behave themselves." This, I felt sure, would please my friend, and was clearly non-committal on my part. The consciousness of intellectual ripening tends to produce in unchastened natures that tendency to "sit alone on high tower," which the son of Sirach condemns. In keeping birds you want to sit on no towers, high or otherwise; but to make yourself agreeable—if you can!

A Difficult Task.

I was not long, after the offer came, in going to fetch my new possessions. There was not much bother in catching them, as the place was so small that it left no room for spacious evolutions. The only difficulty was to get into the place without the Rosellas getting out. It seemed so unlikely that my big body could get in before they could pop out, that I determined not to risk it. To prevent any possibility of accident I bought a big length of string netting, and placed it in front of the door behind my own person, and then slipped in quickly, and the first danger was over. The rest was comparatively simple. It was only a question of quickness of eye.

In Parrot catching it is the first to get hold that matters. I always like it to be myself. I should'nt advise a beginner to catch Rosellas, as it would undoubtedly lead to shedding of blood on the amateur's part. In this case discretion is the better part of valour, and I should advise him to have recourse to the ignoble plan of throwing a big cloth over the victim. In the case of the inexperienced there is nothing to do but to get the Rosellas to fly against the wires, and take hold with his beak; then go quickly up behind him, and with one swift grab get him by the back of the neck and shoulders, when he is yours to do what you like with him. But bear in mind, if you miss, you will be exceedingly sorry. In my case, there was no miss, and my two friends were quickly conveyed to a soap box, and carried off to their new home. They used, I am afraid, very bad language; at any rate it sounded so to a mere human, like myself.

When I got home it was May, and Mays have nearly always been disagreeable. Matthew Arnold notes a dull first of May in 1863, and in May 1869 he writes that in the vile east wind everything looks harsh and gloomy. May 22, 1867, was Derby day, and "Hermit" won his famous victory with snow lying on the course. In May 1873 Bishop Wilberforce wrote: "The marks of the frost are very sad; large oaks with every leaf shrivelled up, and black as if they had been burnt." I determined, therefore, to give my Rosellas no opportunity for making fools of themselves by nesting, till the weather improved. I know it says in books that Australian Parrakeets go to nest at Xmas. Well, they don't with me, because I can't afford to lose my hens with eggbinding. I therefore did nothing to encourage the birds, but everything to disgust them, by withholding nest boxes in any shape or form.

June came in nice and warm, and after a few days I put up a big nest box, which they soon began to pay attention to, by eating great bits out, round the entrance hole. This I did not mind, although it rather spoilt the look of the box, yet I knew that it meant the beginning of the nesting season.

Now, I do not propose to go minutely into the operations of every day before the eggs were laid. Rosellas are seldom in a great hurry, and like to do things their own way; and if I were to relate my hopes and fears as each day came round, you might think me tedious. Boswell, you will remember, was careful to tell us that "it was a dull country magistrate who irritated the doctor by a long and tedious account of four convicts whom he had sent to transportation, and drew down upon himself the dreadful response 'I heartily wish, sir, that I was a fifth.'"

Eggs and Young Rosellas.

Now I shouldn't like you to feel like that about me, so I will skip the preliminaries, and confess that eggs were duly laid, and Mrs. Mealy disappeared into the box for the usual time. Her husband spent his time on the travel outside, and gave vent to a plaintive sort of whistle, if anybody came near. Sometimes, by careful watching, I would see Mrs. Rosella appear with head and shoulders just clear of the hole in the box, and then Mr. Rosella would begin to pump half-digested food into her until she bade him stop. Then, with a few muttered remarks she would drop back into the box, and nothing more would be seen of her for 24 hours, the cock spending the interval as best he could in dozing and thinking. It was well he had plenty of rest during these weeks, as it was very little he got afterwards.

One day, I suppose in response to some communication from his wife, I saw him eating as if there was no hereafter, at the seed tray. Then he flew up to the box, and after a given signal Mrs. Rosella appeared at the opening, and was duly pumped full of food. Down she dropped, and no doubt commenced feeding though I could see nothing. Still, by standing like an image below the box I could hear a scrambling of tiny feet, and knew that once more I was the undoubted owner of some newly-hatched Mealy Rosellas.

As my Mealys are very friendly, I thought I would put their friendly feelings to the test; so about a week later than I am writing of, I got on a chair and opened the lid of the box, and peeped in. I know I ought'nt to have done it, but one can't always be circumspect. It is not only women that are curious. There in the hollow at the bottom of the box I beheld six little yellow balls of fluff, with heads weakly wagging about, and with voices feebly complaining. I must say that, as Mr. Folair said, they looked "pernicious snug." However, I did not spend much time in gazing, as I knew I had done wrong, and when people have done wrong they know it. Adam and Eve were the first, but they have not been the last to hide behind the trees of the garden!

I am thankful to say that in this case nothing happened to punish my temerity. My conscience has long since given up communion with me on birdy matters, in consequence of the many snubs it has received.

One day, on going to the aviary, I was surprised to see a third Mealy Rosella, where formerly there had been only two. It was the first of the nest to come out. It was marked very much like its forbears, only in rather paler tints; but it was only about half the size. After a very few attempts it could fly perfectly, and had a most fascinating way of sitting on a branch, and half dozing through the long hot hours of noon, with one eye closed in a way that reminded me of Victor Hugo's "Quasimodo" in "Notre Dame."

An Unfortunate Youngster.

On succeeding days various brothers and sisters emerged from the box, until I counted five. I afterwards discovered an addled egg in the box, so that I knew the clutch had numbered six. All, I am sorry to say, were not so fortunate as No. 1; for one of the youngsters dashed so fiercely against the wires that, like Abimelech, when the lady dropped the stone on him, it alto broke his head; and I had to put the bird out of his misery. As I felt the broken skull afterwards I could not help being reminded of an Irish story I once heard. Said the aggressor, "I did not hit him very hard, and why the deuce did the Government make a ganger of the man that had a head no thicker than an eggshell!"

The old birds seemed very much upset by the catastrophe, and before their reproachful glance I felt like a Sunday school child taken to task for not being able to give the Kings of Israel and Judah in their right order.

The other four youngsters did nothing to shorten their days, and I found no difficulty in finding new homes for them. Unfortunately there was only one hen amongst them. There is not much difference in sex, except that the hen is decidedly smaller and more rounded in skull than the male, and her colours are paler and less sharp.

These are not birds to be trusted in a mixed aviary, but if placed with suitable companions such as Budgerigars or Cockateils they will behave admirably, and all will nest in peace side by side.

Before another season came round, the cock bird passed peacefully away. I fear he was old when I got him. I felt like country folk do when a neighbour dies. They take a last look at the breastplate of the coffin to see how old he is, and some shake their heads as if even in the grave this old friend was not quite candid about his age. That was how I felt when my friend dropped off his perch, and attained immortality. Had he been quite candid about his age?

A friend happened to call the day he died, and told me how very sorry he was at my loss. I quite loved that man. There is, I suppose, no quality so winning as that which enables a man, in the Apostle's phrase, "to rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." I made a virtue of necessity, and incidentally gained a reputation for splendid generosity, by giving my old hen to a friend who had bought one of my young cock birds.

Let me close with a bit of advice about catching Parrots. Captain Boler of Bonny says: "Never be afraid of a Parrot if you can help it, but never show it, anyhow."

The Training of Roller Canaries.

A Lecture given by Mr. MASSEY, Bolton, before the Provincial Roller C.C. (Manchester), on August 26th.

As soon as the young birds are ready for separating I place them in cages. The best time for separating is, I consider, when the young cocks are moulting their neck feathers. I train them with the organ and schoolmaster; I rely mostly on the schoolmaster, providing he is a good bird. Now is the time I watch for the impulsive birds, and when I perceive any singing too hard I check them by changing their cages. It is highly important that all faulty noises be kept away from the birds at this period, as they are particularly apt to pick up sounds which will result ultimately in serious faults.

Hard Singing a Fault.

The young birds must be kept from singing too hard on account of the habit making them loud, this ruining their tone. To check too hard singing I darken them. I take care not to bring the old birds on song too soon, but to rest them as much as possible. If they have a tendency to be forward too soon, I change their cages, thereby giving them a check, because if they do not rest they are apt to contract hoarseness. The young birds must be kept from too loud singing and from over-singing, as these are liable to bring about an Auzfug.

As the birds proceed in their training a sharp look-out must be kept for those with faulty notes. The birds with the deep tone will be the best when further trained.

Steadying the Birds.

To judge the abilities of a young bird I place it at the side of the old one, and keep a judging sheet in my hand; this steadies them, and trains them to be accustomed to the presence and actions of the judge. I have known some birds which would only sing when closed up. To check this, keep the cage doors open until the birds do sing; then gradually close them. This eventually gets them to sing when the door is opened.

I give the young birds egg food, and at the same time put the seed in uncrushed, so that they can pick it when they like; that is, when they are in the flight.

I am now prepared to answer any questions on this subject.

Mr. Tomlinson: At what time do you put the young cocks into the cages?—Answer: About a week before they finish their moult; that is, when they moult their neck feathers.

Mr. Kremner: Why do you change birds when they are moulting?—I only change those that are singing in their moult, so as to check their singing.

Mr. Wareing: Why do you object to the bird singing in its moult?—If the bird is allowed to sing whilst in moult it is, in my opinion, weakening to it.

Mr. Lyons: Why do you place the old bird above the young one when teaching?—Because in my opinion the sound travels better from above.

Mr. Mawhood: Why do you darken the cages of the young birds in training?—To keep the young birds from singing too much.

Mr. Foulds: Is it not your opinion that the Glucke birds have the most tendency to Auzfug?—Yes.

In keeping your birds closed up, does it not delay them in their song?—I do not think it makes much difference.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Massey for his most interesting lecture.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Mites or Vice.

Ted.—I am inclined to think the bare and sore backs are due to the young plucking each other, and have nothing at all to do with red mite. Still, the fumigation of room would do no harm, and might have done much good at this season. If you find mites really troublesome, deal with them as advised to "Red Mite" a fortnight ago. Keep a sharp watch over the bird, and if you discover any pluckers, cage them up separately until the moult is quite over. From the time of plucking until the new feathers are fully grown will be nearly six weeks, though they will be well grown and cover the body nicely in a month. There is no necessity to put on anything to assist the growth. If the skin is still sore, smear it a few times at intervals of two days with zinc ointment or Lanocyllin until the quills appear. If you are not colour-feeding them give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut to each every second day for three weeks, and slightly dust this with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkle it with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. It will help to keep down red mites if you add a few drops of quassia essence to the bathing water twice a week for a time.

A Seasonable Moult Desired.

Moonracker.—It depends largely upon the length, extent, and also the cause of the soft moult which you say has been going on all the summer and has now ceased, whether the birds will moult again this season. The chances are greatly in favour of their not doing so, and I doubt the wisdom of trying to force them to moult, or of such an attempt proving successful. Add two ounces of hot natal to a pound of pure tasteless in making up your colour. Then cage up the birds in twos and threes and keep them in a fairly warm place for a few weeks. Meantime give a small quantity of soft food with a little colour food added three times a week, or five times in a fortnight. Every second day give a quarter teaspoonful of maw per bird. Let the staple consist of plain canary. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky and a few blades of saffron twice a week. If the birds commence to shed feathers cover over the cages, begin giving colour food regularly every day, and otherwise continue the same general treatment. On the other hand, if they do not start moulting in, say, a month from now, move them to a distinctly colder room, for a week or so, and then back to the same temperature as before. If neither of these changes starts the moult, then you had better leave things as they are, and hope for better luck next year.

A Screw Loose.

Pit Laddie.—There is certainly something radically wrong with your general management, and until this is discovered and remedied I fear you will have but little success. You would he well advised to get one of our handbooks, House's "Manual," or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and study the subject generally and see if you can discover what is wrong. For one thing your feeding is at fault, and you almost certainly keep the birds in a draughty position, or one where the temperature fluctuates violently—perhaps through being overheated by day and correspondingly cold at night. Keep cages well strewn with clean, gritty sand. Give a staple of plain canary seed only. Give a pinch of summer rape separately every second day, and on the alternating days, if not colour feeding, give twice a week a small teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with maw, or the equivalent in bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake; and on two other days give half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "T.H.S." last week. Give a spray of green food three times a week. If colour feeding, you must give the soft food with colour daily, when once a week is sufficient for the seed mixture, and add a pinch of maw every second day. At the end of the moult add 20 drops of chemical food to the water daily for a fortnight. Give the Yorkshire cock that coughs badly six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards the mixture advised at end of reply to "Pompey" last week. You ask if you keep something by you if it should be corked or exposed to air, but I regret I cannot decipher the all-important word. Please repeat this query. The query about coloured plate is also very vague. You will find a list of them, with prices, given in the advertisement columns frequently. If you will tell me definitely what plates you want I will endeavour to help you. You should write to CAGE BIRDS office for these things.

Bald Patch and Cause of Death.

Amadis.—(1) The theory of the skin hardening is quite fanciful and far-fetched. It is far more likely that the moult has received a check, and will right itself, or that the bird is a debilitated specimen, which will not reproduce this lost plumage. Quite a number of weakly and closely bred specimens are thus permanently disfigured. Give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for two or three weeks, and on the alternate days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed, and add to the drinking water six drops of glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece. Slightly moisten the skin once a week with carbolised vaseline. If this is not effective, write again at end of a month referring to this reply, and I will advise further. (2) I have not the slightest doubt this bird succumbed to an attack of pneumonia. Probably nothing would have saved it, but keeping it out of the window would have prevented the attack. Thanks for good opinion about CAGE BIRDS. Glad you find it so helpful. As you are a beginner, you could not do better than get "Our Canaries," which you would find invaluable.

Another Bald Head.

L. M. Nicholls.—(1) In a sense you are quite right in concluding that Crests are subject to a bare place at back of Crest, but far from its being of so little moment, it is a natural physical defect, and one which it is very difficult to breed out once you get it in a strain so that whenever possible a bird so affected should be totally discarded for breeding purposes, and if any particular bird is so affected and bred off parents similarly affected, the necessity for weeding them out is increased immensely. Therefore, if you were to breed again from these youngsters, the chances are all in favour of their progeny being, without exception, far more badly affected in the same way. I strongly advise you to discard them for breeding, even if you can only replaced them by a single good bird with a well-feathered and nice smooth back, showing no sign of bareness or break. Get Part XIII. of "Our Canaries," which deals with this and all Crest matters far more fully than is possible here. It is just possible the inflamed appearance may be the forerunner of more or less new feathers coming. Moisten the part three or four times at intervals, of a few days with a feather dipped in strong malt vinegar. (2) Gold of pleasure, a small brown seed similar in size and shape to maw, is a rich, oily, stimulating seed. Its chief value is to give a pinch in the same way as you would give maw, to birds down in condition, or backward in coming into breeding condition, when it acts as a pick-me-up and stimulant. Glad to hear bird with weak legs is now much better.

All thoroughly practicol and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Badly Feathered Young.

Sigma.—You do not say what was the composition of the colour food upon which the parents were fed by mistake whilst these young were in the nest, and unless it was largely composed of hot pepper I should seriously doubt its having anything to do with the scantiness of plumage. Even if largely composed of hot pepper I should be inclined to doubt its being the direct cause, as the parents would most likely have refused to feed with it. As a matter of fact these young show distinct signs of being weakly, debilitated specimens, such as may result from the mating of weakly, unhealthy stock, or too closely related specimens, or may even arise in weakly nestlings from semi-starvation through the parents being bad feeders. If you treat them as follows they will come through the moult in a greatly improved condition, though the constitution may be permanently impaired. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight and twice a week afterwards until end of moult give a little bread and milk with cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it (allow a piece the size of a hazel nut and two drops of emulsion to each). On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful per bird of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, linseed, black rape, millet, and broken groats. Give a green plantain stalk every day or two as long as obtainable, and keep a piece of cuttlefish handy for them to peck at. Catch those that have quills adhering to the feathers twice a week and gently rub off between the thumb and forefinger as much of the quill as is quite dry and will separate readily from the web of the feather, until the whole feather is released. Give twelve drops of syrup of hypophosphites in the water three times a week for a month. When they start moulting keep them on the warm side until it is over, and slightly dust the bread and milk with flowers of sulphur now and again.

Feeding for Song (Nexite).—A staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, mixed together, and for the rest the same as given in the Nutshell booklet, is how I would feed Norwich for song. See insert of list of books in this column. (2) The best strain of Rollers for singing is very much a matter of taste, and depends also very largely upon the nature and thoroughness of the tuition they have undergone. For general purposes a so-called Seifert Roller is the most satisfactory all round. The price of a pair again depends wholly upon the efficiency of the training, and the singing abilities of the cock. About 25s. should purchase a decent pair. The hens range from 2s. 6d. to 4s.; the cocks from about 10s. 6d. to 30s., the higher prices representing the most proficient performers. Glad to hear the treatment for grey lice proved so successful.

Lump at Vent.— (R. C.).—I cannot tell what this substance is without seeing it. It is most likely a small tumour or cyst, and I would not advise you to interfere with it in any way. If you painted it with iodine, the only external treatment likely to be useful, the bird would probably peck the part into a sore, and make matters worse than they are. Therefore, leave it severely alone. For the bad plumage when the bird is starting to moult give her the bread and milk with sulphur and potash in water, also the maw seed, as advised in reply to "Amadis" in this issue for three weeks. Keep her in an equable and fairly warm temperature, and she should come through the moult in good feather.

Young Crests.—(H. James).—(1) Give the young that are shelling the seed, and leaving the kernels a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition to this, give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight. On the same days also give a plantain stalk or seedy head of shepherd's purse, per bird. On the alternating days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed, and a morsel of ripe banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. In the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day. (2) You should have described appearance of swelling more definitely. As it is, I cannot venture to guess what is wrong. Give a diet of plain canary seed only, with a little green food daily for a week, and in the water give the rhubarb and salt as above daily for three days, and every second day for the remainder of week, and in the next week the gentian mixture as above. If not better, then write again and give more particulars.

Questions about Young (CAGE BIRDS Admirer).—(1) Yes, all young bred so far this year will in normal circumstances breed next year. It will, however, be advisable to mate them with birds a few months their seniors in age, and those just leaving the nest should not be mated before next April at the earliest. (2) Give a staple winter diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape; twice a week a small teaspoonful of mixed seed as described in several replies in last two issues, and twice a week a little egg food, or some equivalent. For fuller details, get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our manager. (3) Give a fair amount of exercise, proper feeding, and freedom from draughts and damp; the cold room will be no drawback whatever. (4) It does not necessarily follow that every bird that has started twittering will prove a cock, though this is possible. The best test is to cage them up separately as soon as they have moulted, when in the case of the cocks the twitter will soon develop into a sustained song with very plain swelling and throbbing of the throat. Those that do not begin to twitter before, say, next March, may fairly safely be marked down "hens," though exceptions will occur. (5) Full details for distinguishing sex are given in the above-named book, and also in "Our Canaries"; in the latter you would find an art plate which shows the sexual appearances very clearly.

Scaly Feet (G. J. F. Y.).—This is one of the usual accompaniments of age, which may possibly account for the bird keeping much to the floor. To remove the large scales, get a saucer of fairly hot water—as hot as you can comfortably bear the little finger in for some time. In this you may dissolve a little borax, but it is not essential. Catch the bird and immerse the feet for a few minutes in the hot water, occasionally lifting them out at the beginning to wash away any dirt that may be adhering. After soaking for, say, ten minutes, lift them out, and very gently press the end of the thumb-nail, or a match stick, against the raised edges of the scales, one after another, when the scale will probably lift up quite readily, and may be easily removed. If the scales do not readily respond to gentle pressure, continue the soaking for a time, and try again, repeating this until they raise quite easily. Use only quite a slight amount of pressure, and strictly avoid making them bleed. Finally, gently dry the feet and smear slightly with zinc ointment. Better do one foot first, and the other a few days afterwards. See if the claws are overgrown, and, if so, trim them back during this operation.

Norwich Hen (E. T.).—See that the hen is not exposed to temporary chills, and keep in an equable temperature. Do not allow her to bathe until she is well able to preen, and dry her plumage, and then, for a time, only allow her to do so in quite warm weather. See if the kernel of the hemp is quite sound and sweet, and, if not, reject it. Keep a supply of plain canary (dry) available, and, in addition, supply daily in a separate vessel half a teaspoonful of summer rape, soaked for two hours in cold water, and then drained and wiped dry. As a staple food for the next fortnight, give a daily supply of bread soaked in cold milk (a piece the size of a cob nut will suffice), drained, three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and well sprinkled with maw seed. Give no green food until well, but a morsel of ripe banana every two or three days will do no harm. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and five drops of laudanum for two days, and afterwards dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a small pea and a crystal of sulphate of soda half as big in two tablespoonfuls of water, add five drops of dilute sulphuric acid and give this instead of plain water for drinking daily for three days, and afterwards every second day for a fortnight.

What Disease (C. Bland).—I cannot venture to dogmatise from the few particulars you give, but it looks uncommonly like a non-virulent type of septic fever that is among your stock. If the deaths have mostly occurred in one or two particular cages, as may be the case, by all means remove those cages, together with any birds that may now be in them, right away from your other stock. Put the birds in some temporary cage or cages (an old affair which you would not mind burning afterwards for preference), and keep them isolated for a month. If they keep quite well through this time you may return them to your other birds. Meantime thoroughly disinfect the cages they now occupy. The Nutshell booklet on "Disinfection" would give you all details for doing this, and you would also do well to get the handbook on "Septic Fever" and study its contents. If another bird dies soon, get a post-mortem on it to set all doubts at rest. See that your egg-food, in particular, is quite above suspicion in freshness and purity, and prepared from fresh eggs from healthy fowls. If you are not colour-feeding you might with advantage discard egg-food for a time and substitute bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake, now and again.

Deformed Toe (F.C., A Novice).—If, as I suspect, the deformity existed when the bird left the nest, I very much doubt whether you will be able to remedy it, as it has now been neglected too long. These things require very early attention if they are to be done any good at all. In nearly every case when the deformity is firmly established it is by far the best and kindest method to leave it severely alone, but as the case in your bird seems likely to he continually inflicting additional injury the best course would be to get a vet. to amputate the toe. I will not advise you to attempt this yourself, though I consider it the best and only really serviceable remedy. The usual rubber would almost certainly prove quite useless besides inflicting great punishment upon the bird.

Losing Young (J. Williams).—First of all see that you are not overcrowding the cages with birds, and keep both floors and perches as clean as possible. Keep floors strewn well with clean, gritty sand or sawdust, but in the latter case give grit in a shallow vessel in one corner of cages. Keep food and water vessels scrupulously clean, washing them out daily before replenishing them. Cut the egg-food and bread and milk down to a little of one or the other, but not both, twice a week after the first fortnight, and for the first fortnight feed as advised to "Sigma" in this issue. Limit the quantity of green food to one plantain stalk, or spray of seeding chickweed, per bird about every second day. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for two days, and afterwards give four drops of tincture of gentian and two of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. If deaths still continue after this, follow advice given to "C. Bland," and take the first opportunity to get a post-mortem opinion concerning the deaths.

Sneezing Sound ("What Is It?").—It is not unlikely the bird might have got a chill in its change of quarters. One would scarcely expect this to be the case in this brilliant summer, but it is nevertheless a fact that many birds are, and have been, so affected, and the close packing for the journey would render the birds peculiarly liable to it. The moult also always aggravates these little weaknesses. See that the birds are kept fairly equable, in a bright, well-ventilated place, away from fumes of burning lights, but still free from draughts. Give a staple of plain canary, a pinch of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for one day, and afterwards twenty drops of whiskey, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Moulting (E. D., Glasgow).—The bird is just commencing moult in a perfectly normal way, so it would not have moulted before you bought it. The approach of the moult also accounts for its not singing much, and also for the depraved appetite. It will not sing now until the moult is finished. Keep it fairly warm, free from draughts, the air equable as possible. A light cover thrown over the cage is useful to prevent draughts, and tends to hasten on the moult. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed give half a teaspoonful of rape every second day, on the alternate days a pinch of maw, twice a week a pinch of the seed mixture, and on two other days each week a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut. Give a spray of green stuff three or four times a week. For the first week, only, give the bread and milk every second day and slightly dust it each time with flowers of sulphur, and on the alternate days add twenty drops of whiskey, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, and six or eight blades of saffron to its drinking water.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Most of the appended replies have been kindly supplied by Mr. H. J. Fulljames, in the absence of Mr. Weston on holiday.

In a Box Cage.

Normandy.—Your cage, as I presume you know, is suitable for one pair of Finches only. If you put in more, then your chance of breeding dwindles to vanishing point. As regards likelihood of breeding, I should place the species mentioned in the following order: Linnet, Bullfinch, Goldfinch, Siskin. Cage-bred Linnets, however, are very wild, disappointing birds; in my opinion not worth bothering with. Hen Bullies, too, are very easily obtained young, when they get extremely tame and are easily induced to nest, therefore also seem hardly worth while. A "strain" of house-bred Goldfinches, for muling purposes, would be distinctly worth having, however, especially if bred from an English cock and a Siberian hen (or vice-versa). Probably you would have to rely upon a hen Canary to rear the young Goldies (the first year, any way). Feed as recommended in the "Nutshell" booklets (this applies to all the species). The only essential cage fitting, other than the usual ones for seed, etc., is a sheltered nest-box, such as has been frequently illustrated and described in CAGE BIRDS for the use of Hybrid couples. A cock Reed Bunting would be a good mate for a tame hen Yellowhammer. It is quite possible the latter might sit; and I think she would rear young if given live ants' eggs freely and some good prepared insectile food. It often happens that birds are seen to pair, yet have unfertile eggs. I do not know of any special French species; the birds there (the breeders in cages) are similar to our own.

Feeding Yellowhammers & Larks.

Lover of Bird Song.—Your Yellowhammers will do particularly well exactly as you have been feeding them; this for as long as you care to keep it up. As they get older supply them with plain canary as a stock food, still offering them the soft food mixture you are now giving them. To the latter you might add a little dried silkworm pupæ or some "dried flies" and some powdered biscuit. Silkworm pupæ is a comparatively recent introduction in the feeding of British birds; it has long been used by Continental fanciers and is a very useful food. "Dried flies" also are a good food when obtainable of good quality, but this is not always. A mealworm or two occasionally will be relished. You will not need to colour-feed your young birds this season as they will, of course, not be required for exhibition. Next year begin just before the moult, and continue until the birds are quite through. The process is one which requires a deal of judgment, or you may get the birds too "hot" in colour. About a quarter of the strength recommended by the vendors would be enough for a Yellowhammer. As for the Larks, you may feed them upon soft food similar to that upon which you have reared your 'Hammers, with the optional additions mentioned above. They should have some canary seed (shelled for preference) and some crushed oats in a separate vessel. I don't like mixing the seed with their soft food as sometimes recommended. You must be careful that they are feeding well for themselves before entirely giving up the hand feeding.

Identity of Wild Seed (A. E. Bone).—The seed-heads you send are of the Marsh Plume-Thistle (Cnicus palustris). The seeds are very useful as food for any of the British Finches.

Another Seed Query (C. G. C.).—It is not easy to say definitely from the seed alone, but I think your seed are from the common dock. If you would send me a spray I could tell you for certain.

A Linnet-Bullfinch (Leonard Davies).—A Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrid makes a very pretty exhibit, and is one with quite a fair chance of getting to the top of the class. The cross is not particularly rare, yet it is far from a common one. A really good specimen may be worth anything up to five pounds. You would scarcely have a chance of winning with your young bird at an autumn show unless the competition was limited. Far better keep him at home until next season.

An Elderly Bullfinch (A.H.B.).—It is not uncommon for a very old bird to go somewhat bald about the head. We do this sort of thing ourselves. All the same, I think the feeding has been altogether too monotonous and unsatisfying. The packet mixture upon which it has had to exist may be of any sort of quality, or no quality at all. A Bullfinch requires much more than the same kind of food year in and year out, no matter how good it may be. The Nutshell on the Bullfinch, No. 11, treats fully upon the proper feeding, and I would advise your friend to get this from the local bookseller, or direct from the office for twopence-halfpenny. It is much too large a subject to be properly treated in a short reply.

Identity of Stuffed Specimen (A. G. Lewis).—Your bird would appear to be one of the Herons; probably either the Lesser White Heron or the Night Heron, both very rare as British birds. Has it long, soft feathers hanging from the lower end of the neck? I am answering this query with all diffidence, as the bird certainly does not come within the category of cage birds, and is, therefore, somewhat out of my line. If you could send me a rough sketch I could probably help you further.

Freshly-caught Birds Dying (R. H.).—You say nothing of what kinds of birds they are which die soon after being caught, nor of the season in which you have been catching them. Speaking generally, if they are seed-eaters they should at first be fed upon seed which has been soaked till fairly soft and rubbed dry in a cloth. When soaking the seed the water must be changed daily. Of course, it is hopeless to expect birds to live if taken in the breeding season, to say nothing of its being contrary to law. If you will tell me what birds you mostly take I shall be glad to advise you more fully.

Sample of Seed (W. J. Hawes).—The mixed seed you send is just the ordinary packet mixture, and contains much that would be wasted in an outdoor aviary of British seedeaters. About all that is of any use in it is the Canary and the few grains of hemp seed. It is far better to give the principal seeds, Canary, hemp, rape, etc., in separate hoppers, with an extra hopper for mixed wild seeds. Millet is of no use for British Finches.

Young Bird Query (Inquirer).—Your bird is evidently a young cock Bullfinch. It should be in good colour before Christmas, but will improve materially next year with proper feeding. You say you have the Bullfinch Nutshell. You cannot do better than closely follow the instructions therein as to feeding. Especially do not forget the autumn berries, of which you should soon be able to get plenty. These are the whole secret of good colour. Be careful with the hemp; Bullies are very fond of this, but too much is not good for them; half a dozen or so once a day is quite sufficient. The proper berries for a Bullfinch are mentioned in the Nutshell you have, and you may give any of these as convenient. You are not likely to have much success in teaching the bird to pipe tunes, unless you are possessed of an infinity of patience and the ability to always whistle to it in absolutely the same key.

An Outdoor Aviary (A. Williams).—The birds you mention will agree nicely together. You might have them in pairs, but not more than one pair of a kind, or there will be trouble. All that is absolutely necessary is a snug shelter for roosting and an open flight covered with ½in. wire netting. Of course the more space you can give the better for the birds, and you may make the shelter or the flight as plain or elaborate as you choose. Plenty of perches should be provided, and in the outdoor portion nothing is better than twiggy shrubs or small tree branches stuck in the ground and renewed when soiled. A useful article on the subject was published in CAGE BIRDS of 11th March last. Our publisher will send you a copy for twopence. Mr. Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms and Cages," 2s. 3d. post free, is full of practical hints.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Indian Ringnecks.

J. B. Barnett.—The pair of birds are Ring-necked Parrakeets; the larger bird is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. As regards the pair the all-green bird is the hen, and I am inclined to advise the cock bird being caged separately till its plumage is decent; it can be treated better, though its cage should be kept in close proximity to the hen bird, so that they may converse and caress through the wires. I should put him on a course of Byno-phosphates, and keep his bowels well regulated with Dinneford's Magnesia, and also give him a weekly spraying with quassia solution. Diet: Seed mixture (half hulk to be Canary and white millet, the other half to be oats, maize, hemp and sunflower seed in equal parts), green food, ripe fruit, nuts and plain biscuits. A piece of clean cuttlebone should be continually in the cage, and a pinch of grit (not sand) added to the daily supply of seed mixture. The Ring-necks will not have the red wing patch.

Birds for Aviary.

Drury.—I am assuming that you have a well lighted and weather-proof shelter attached to your aviary. In such case you could keep any of the following: Ruficauda and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Common and Green Avadavats, Zebra and St. Helena Waxbills, White Java Sparrows, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Cuba, Ribbon, Zebra, Striated, Spice and Chestnut Finches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Silverhills, Chinese Painted Quails, and a pair of small Doves, Diamond for preference, but any small species obtainable will meet the case. So as to secure as many breeding results as possible I should only put in 12 or at the most 15 breeding pans, though the aviary would accommodate about 60 birds the size of a Norwich Canary. A perusal of my reply to J. S. Gardiner in this issue should assist you. The open part of your flight should be planted as a wild garden, with a few evergreen shrubs dotted about such as Enonymous, Box, Laurel, Berberis, Fir, etc. If your county is a very northern one some of the birds would have to be taken indoors in winter.

Treatment for Parrot.

H. Atlay.—Your supposed Parrot is the Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. The treatment, etc., given in our booklet, "The Grey Parrot," will meet your case fully, with the addition of a little maize (one portion) to the mixture advised therein, and you will find the booklet helpful. I presume, after such a period of cage life, the bird is quite tame, and it should certainly talk a little. Train it as advised to "Abertillery" in this issue. Make a chum of your bird, and as soon as it has got over the neglect, and is thoroughly at home in its new quarters, it should prove responsive, at any rate, to the extent of a word or two, mimicking sounds and cries, and also entertain you with its acrobatic ability. In their native country they have a good reputation as linguists, but over here the talent of the majority in this respect rules rather low. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Indian Parrot.

Abertillery.—This species needs careful training. It is among strangers, and I expect much of its screeching is caused by fear; and I must regretfully add some remain screechers to the "end of the chapter." You must overcome this by steadiness and quietness of movement when attending to its wants, cleaning out, etc. See that your young people do not scare it by sudden movements in its vicinity; tempt it by offering it such items of its diet as it most favours with your fingers. When it is quiet and restful talk to it quietly, and teach it by constant repetition of, at first, a single word till this is mastered, and then try it with a sentence of two or three words. When it has once made a start it will soon make progress and pick up what it hears promiscuously as well as what it is taught. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Aviary Queries.

Freda.—Cockatiels are usually quite safe with small Finches, etc., but other Parrakeets, large or small, are not. Do not include them, moreover, in the open part of flight. You should not have growing evergreens and deciduous bushes; Parrakeets would soon ruin these. In addition to what you have, add the following: Grey and Green Singing Finches, Silverbills, Long-tailed Greenfinches, Zebra Finches, Golden-breasted and St. Helena Waxhills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Paradise Whydah, Red-billed, Madagascar, and Napoleon should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Weavers, Diamond or Picui Doves. You can also include the Indigo Buntings, but I cannot advise the Rosella Parrakeets. All those named above can be kept out of doors all the year round, provided there is a well-lighted, weather-tight shed attached to your aviary. If your county is a northern one you had better send me a rough sketch of the aviary, and I can then definitely advise. Given proper accommodation all the species named above should be safe out of doors in the Midland, S., S.E., and S.W. counties. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d., post free, from our Manager, should help you.

Aviary Queries.

F. S. Gardiner.—Your aviary is none too large as a flight as it is, and it will be a pity to curtail it by turning part of it into a shelter shed. It seems to me there are two courses open to you, the more preferable being to turn the space between the aviary and greenhouse into a shelter shed, the front of which should be 3ft. of match boarding and the other part glass, covered on the inside with ½in. mesh netting, and the roof boarded and felted. You would only need a front and roof and a few holes cut in the end of aviary for the birds to get in and out. The other alternative is to have a wood and glass shutter or shutters to close up the front of aviary during the winter season and cold spring and autumn nights. You must, of course, make provision for ventilation without draught, and there must be sufficient glass in shutter to leave the aviary quite light. So arranged you could keep out of doors all the year round Green and Common Avadavats, Ruficauda and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Zebra Waxbills besides in addition to those named in my previous reply. It would help you if you got our "Nutshell" booklet, 2½d. post free from our Manager—dealing with the birds named above, also "Foreign Birds for Beginners" from same source. The back of the aviary should be well furnished with twiggy branches, and rush, coco-nut shell, Hartz travelling cages and boxes should be placed about as nest receptacles. A narrow border inside the aviary (along front) should be sown with grass and cereals, and the same outside the aviary, planted with such annuals and plants as flourish locally to attract flies and other insects.

(The Club and Society Notices will this week be found on page 127.)

A Garden Aviary.

Claude.—In the first place I should cover in (north end) 10 ft. of the roof of aviary with boards and felt, and under this in north corner form a shelter shed 8 by 6 ft., entirely closed in, thoroughly damp and draught proof, yet well lighted. The latter is really important, as birds will not use a badly-lighted shelter. The remainder of front (12 ft.) of roof (10 ft.) and south end to be covered with half-inch mesh wire-netting, the netting when stretched to have a coat of Brunswick black; the whole of the woodwork, before wire-netting is stretched on, to be coated with "Solignum" (brown), a good preservative which also looks well. The roofing felt should be well tarred. This will fill in all seams and make everything weather-tight. I advise the whole aviary to be span-roofed, and 6 ft. high at the eaves and 9 ft. at ridge. The portion of flight under open netting to be planted with laurel, fir, hox, berberis, and ivy or wild clematis on back. I have had individual pairs of Parson Finches that did not do any mischief, but the majority are quarrelsome. Why not keep Long-tailed Grassfinches? They are similar in plumage to the Parsons, quite as beautiful, and are amiable. Diamond Sparrows, though interfering at times, I do not think will do any damage (possibly they are rather crowded at present). The Ruficauda, Zebra, Parrot, Long-tailed Grass and Diamond Finch ought to agree together. It is too late to purchase newly-imported birds and turn them out now, especially as I presume it will take you two or three weeks to fix up aviary. If you tell me how and where you have been keeping the birds, I can give a definite reply. Note: All glass must be covered with netting on the inside.

Bird Books (A. H. B.)—Should get the books advertised in this column and also on back page of our issues, so far as they refer to the species he desires to keep. Illustrated books are costly, and often none too comprehensive, and it means getting several to cover a given group very often. If A. H. B. will send me a stamped addressed envelope, per Editor, and state what ground he wishes to cover, I will try and give a fuller reply.

Red-crested Cardinal (Mrs. Kerry).—Canary and millet in equal parts should form the staple mixture, with a few sunflower seeds and very little hemp as extras. They must also have greenfood, ripe fruit, and a few live insects—anything you can capture almost—smooth caterpillars, beetles, spiders; and when these are unobtainable, say three mealworms per bird daily. Grit, cuttlebone, and water must also be supplied. These are active, restless birds, and should have a roomy cage, fitted preferably with twiggy branches for perches, and a bath which fixes outside the cage, over the open door.

Small-billed Toucan (J. C.).—Small-billed Toucans or Toucanettes are simply miniature Toucans, requiring similar treatment, viz., soft food, ripe fruit and live insects. They have not yet mated in captivity, but they should do so if placed in a roomy outdoor aviary for the summer months (May to Sept. inclusive) and then taken indoors for the winter. I cannot describe, as plumage varies with almost each species, and they are legion. Re Olive Finches: In addition to the usual seeds (unhulled spray millet) treat as Jacarini Finches. The accident to young Jacarini was most vexatious. Olive Cuba Finches is a fancy name—properly they are merely Olive Finch, both the Olive and Cuba Finch belong to the same genus, viz., Phonipara.

The Persian Nightingale (D. Lafizi).—The food, general treatment and winter housing given to other gales will meet the requirements of this species. The species is if anything hardier than the common Nightingale, and a more powerful songster, and also has a much longer tail. Its song, however, is not so sweet as that of our bird. In the past the species used to be fairly free on the market, but now seldom comes to hand. Its present value would be about 50s. to 60s., possibly more according to the condition and ability of the bird. On the contrary, if a fair consignment came to hand price would drop materially at once.

What Parrot? (P.H.C.).—It is a Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo, a handy Australian species, which has not a good reputation for talking in this country, but most individuals talk a little at any rate; they become very charming, and are good acrobats. A reply to another correspondent in this issue will help you as to treatment and training to talk. The red pods enclosed are chilies, and most parrots and cockatoos are very fond of them, and when the bird has a cold they tend to check sneezing. The diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, greenfood, nuts and plain biscuits. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage.

Moulting of Parrakeets (E.V.H.)—(1) It is not easy to tell the age of these birds, but if its head is full coloured it is about two years old at least. Apart from this judge by the legs of the bird; if the scales are very hard, coarse and horny it is an old bird. (2) The moult is about usual, unless an individual gets a check and out of tone. As a rule the first moult in this country is the most difficult, though a really aged bird often fails to reproduce its plumage properly. (3) The bowels should be kept moving freely (not watery-loose), and chemical food or Byno-phosphates put in the water. A spraying occasionally with a weak solution of quassia would tend to keep the plumage clean. Canary and white mill should form the bulk of its seed diet, with a few oats, paddy rice and sunflower seeds; also nuts, ripe fruit, green food and plain biscuit. A pinch of grit (not sand) should be mixed with the daily supply of seed.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

F. Boxall.—The sample of seed you sent me was a very indifferent one, and although I could not detect the presence of the black sand, yet on washing and straining there was a large amount of foreign matter and gritty deposit. The latter would be quite sufficient to produce the impaction, and would long retain a blackened appearance. I should advise you to discontinue its use.

Highlane.—Yorkshire cock died of congestion of the lungs.

Quick Death.—There was acute double-pneumouia; otherwise the bird was in a quite healthy condition, nor was there any evidence of existing disease. It is difficult to define the cause of same, as your birds appear to be well housed. Possibly the recent damp weather following on a long period of heat may have been the exciting cause.

Hursthotme.—Your birds are dying of a contagious disease, viz., contagious pneumonia. In both birds the lungs were inflamed, solidified, and in parts were necrotic. Remove those birds which appear healthy to other quarters, and disinfect as far as possible.

Country Rambles

HALIFAX O.S.

A good number of members and friends had an enjoyable ramble on August 26. Meeting our leader, Mr. E. Roberts, of the Ovenden Naturalists' Society, at the Fountain, King Cross, we proceeded by car to Luddenden Foot; then along Luddenden Lane to Wade Wood. It being rather late in the season, we did not meet a lot of bird life, but the Grey Wagtail was to be seen, also Jenny Wrens, Yellow-Hammers, and a few members of the Thrush family. After a good substantial tea, which we all enjoyed, we decided to make our way home; the rain came down rather fast.—F. Burdeken, assistant secretary.

THE BIRD-LOVER'S LIBRARY.

"Bird Protection and the Feather Trade," price 6d. A pamphlet bearing this title has just been published by Messrs. Sampson, Low, Marston and Co., Ltd. (Southwark, S.W.). It is written by Dr. A. Menegaux, assistant in the Department of Ornithology at the National Museum of Natural History, Paris. Dr. Menegaux tells us, on the authority of the Hon. Walter Rothschild, that in less than 500 years at least 140 specimens of birds have disappeared; 63 of them are only known by their bones, feathers or eggs, and 77 by sketches or stuffed skins. In addition to these, he adds, 47 species are well-nigh extinct, and 51 species are threatened with extinction in the near future. Dr. Menegaux holds that it is possible to safe-guard the world's bird-life by the following methods: 1st, developing the breeding of certain species; 2nd, domesticating others whose plumage has a trade value; 3rd, creating reserves; and 4th, instituting international protective laws to serve agriculture, commerce and science equally. The causes of the diminution in bird-life are, we are left to conclude, mainly two, viz., the feather trade, and the hunting of birds for food purposes; but nothing is said of the "natural" cause—the simple dying out of very many species in the ordinary course of events. The pamphlet is written by an expert ornithologist, and offers a capital study for those who wish to see bird-life not only maintained but considerably extended.

Random Notes on Exhibition British Birds.

A Correction.

Sir,—In my notes on exhibition British birds published in your last issue, an error has inadvertently crept in. The printers have made me say that when Goldics carry much black between the eyes and the blaze they appear to have more blaze than they really have got; whereas what I meant was exactly the opposite, viz., that the blaze appears larger in those birds which have very little black.

STEWART GRAHAME.

Where are the Starlings?

Sir,—In reference to the query in CAGE BIRDS of August 26, I may say that Starlings are here at Taunton in their thousands, our lawns having flocks of them daily. They feed with the Sparrows, and are on the best of terms with them. Blackbirds, here, are conspicuous by their absence.

The Northern Border & Scotch Fancy Club's Patronage.

Sir,—I see it is stated in "Twitterings" of last week that the Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. have received the patronage of the Northern Border Club. This is not so. Our patronage has been allotted to Chopwell, Newcastle, Blaydon, and Gateshead. We have still two vacant dates, however, and secretaries should apply at once if they desire the patronage of this flourishing young society.

Methods of Bird-catching.

Sir,—Having read from time to time various fanciers' experiences, I should like to give my fellow-readers mine as an amateur bird-catcher. I dare say that very many of your readers are, like myself, working men, and cannot afford the cash to buy expensive appliances. The nets I use are the self-acting spring net traps, which, in my mind, are the best nets for the fancier who catches a few birds for his own use. The first thing I do is to go out for a few times and find where the birds are feeding, not forgetting to throw plenty of food about, the same as I am going to bait my nets with. When I set my nets, I put them in a circle (six in all), with my call birds in the centre; this I find is the best plan. I have found out several good points by using these nets. They do not take long to set. I can go away and leave them, as they are self-acting; and they are not so bulky to carry about as the large nets. I have several good British birds by me at present, all my own catching, and I am looking forward to a good moulting season. As regards catching softbills with these nets, I put them singly down hedges baited with mealworms or earthworms, which are very effective for Thrushes and Blackbirds. I should be pleased to hear other fanciers' opinions of bird-catching, as it will be very helpful to many of us.

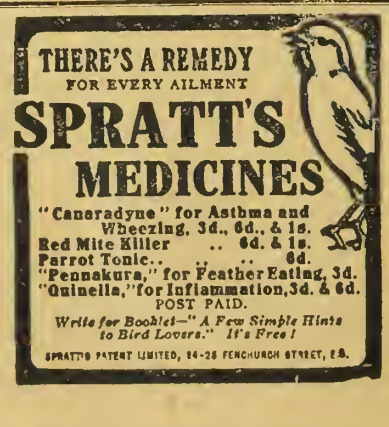
Canaries at Batheaston Show.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a space in your valuable paper to reply to G. E. Lanham's letter. This exhibitor at the late Batheaston Show, held August 17, seems to have been greatly disappointed that a fur judge was not appointed to award the prizes in the cage bird section, and was surprised on going to the show to find that a cage bird judge had been secured. The 1st prize exhibit of Mr. Follwell's was an unflighted yellow Norwich cock, a far superior bird to the Crest-bred, having a nice bold head, with a short, thick-set neck, good chest, short compact flights and tail, and nice quality feather—a real good Norwich, which, with a satisfactory moult, will do its owner great credit during the coming show season. The second bird was an unflighted buff Norwich, very similar to first bird, but it lost a little in head. The third bird was a good ticked yellow Yorkshire of nice length and shape, one of the real Bradford type, the like of which are seldom seen in this neighbourhood and when through its moult will be heard of again. The vhc bird was a Crest-bred and had a very small head (a great failing in this variety), and was also wanting in substance. The other vhc bird, a so-called Yorkshire, I do not need here to describe, and if it has ever won a first prize I should say it was shown either under a rabbit judge, a poultry judge, or a pigeon judge, certainly not a cage bird judge. The remaining part of the letter I treat with contempt. Mr. Follwell and his birds are quite capable of taking care of themselves in the future as they have done in the past, as all good fanciers know, and in conclusion, as Mr. Lanham doesn't seem to know the value of his birds, let him take my advice and send them out to some of our leading shows under specialist Canary judges; then perhaps he will be a sadder but wiser man.

Bath. T. TAYLER.



Sir,—In your last week's issue I read with much dislike G. E. Lanham's letter re the above, in which he states that he has beaten my birds every time that he has met them for the past five years. In the first place, he has never met my birds under a specialist Canary judge. The only shows that he has met them at have been the local horticultural shows, which are usually held during the months of July and August in the neighbourhood of Bath, most of which have a live stock section in which there are usually a few cage bird classes, including an "any variety Canary" class. The cage birds at these shows are invariably judged—or "judged at"—by either the pigeon, fur, or poultry judges, and I think there are not many cage bird fanciers who have had any experience of the above judges but what will agree with me that it would be more to their credit if they refused to judge in these classes on the ground that they do not understand cage birds. Then the officials of these shows would be compelled to have proper judges for the cage bird classes or strike these classes out altogether. At the recent Batheaston Show there was an exception to this rule, the cage birds being judged by Mr. T. Tayler, of Bath, who has for many years successfully bred and exhibited the Norwich Canary, and I am certain he has forgotten more about Canaries than some people ever knew. Now let me take Mr. Lanham back to the year 1908, to see if he can remember the Weston Show, where my wife, with three birds, won 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, while his had to follow on behind? Also at the Batheaston Show in the same year how my wife won 1st, and he had to be content with the 2nd place? During the season 1909 my birds did not meet his, but in the following year they met at the Larkhall Show, where his birds were awarded 1st and 3rd, while my two birds (one of which was my well-known winning Buff Norwich hen, whose portrait has appeared on the front cover of your valuable paper, and the other a clear yellow Norwich cock then unflighted, which in the same year won 1st at Gloucester, Frome, and Cheltenham, 2nds at Cardiff, Bristol, and Bath, both being my own breeding) were placed back in the honorary cards. I admit they were beaten, but only on condition, as they had both started moulting. Can Mr. Lanham truthfully say that the Yorkshire or the Norwich that he was awarded 1st and 3rd with at this show has such a record as this? Can he say that he has ever won a prize during the past six years either with them or with any other Canary that he may have, in open competition under a specialist Canary judge? I say no, he cannot. Perhaps he will say he has never sent them out to our leading shows. Why? Because he knows only too well what the result would be. I think it will be quite soon enough for him to start "swanking" about what his birds have done when he breeds or buys some that are capable of winning as much as mine have done. And the two I have mentioned are two out of a number that I have that have done well on the show bench under our leading judges. On July 27 last our birds again met at Larkhall Show. He exhibited a Crest and a Crest-bred, while I put down a yellow Yorkshire cock and the same clear yellow Norwich that I exhibited at the show last year, both being in tip-top condition. The judge (a fur judge) placed the Crest-bred 1st, the Norwich 2nd, and the Yorkshire 3rd, but why he placed them thus I am at a loss to know. On August 17 our birds again met, this time at Batheaston, the judge being, as before stated, Mr. T. Tayler. Mr. Lanham again exhibited his Crest-bred and a Yorkshire, the birds I staged being the same Yorkshire that I had at Larkhall and two 1911 bred Norwich in nest feather. The result of the judging was that my two young Norwich were 1st and 2nd respectively, and my Yorkshire 3rd, the latter having started moulting. Since beating Mr. Lanham's birds the above-named youngsters and a stable companion have won for me 1st, 2nd, and 3rd at Stapleton Road, Bristol, where the Eastville and Bath fanciers competed for the challenge trophy on August 26. Mr. J. Houghton, of Gloucester, judged. Perhaps that gentleman will kindly state whether he thinks these birds are, as I believe Mr. Lanham would like the readers of CAGE BIRDS to think, third-raters. Now, Mr. Lanham, as you appear to have such a high opinion of your Crest-bred, be a sportsman and send it up to the coming Cheltenham Show, so that other fanciers, as well as the Bath fanciers that know a good bird, may have a laugh.

Goldfinches Breeding in Cages.

Sir,—A friend of mine has bred Goldfinches in an ordinary breeding cage. He had to put the eggs under a Canary, as the Goldie cock broke the first egg. Four were laid. The other three hatched out, and the young Goldies are now ten weeks old and fine healthy youngsters. I may say that the Goldies were caught last October—"Greypates."

Siskins and the Rearing of Young.

Sir,—Having seen in CAGE BIRDS that a fancier states that the Siskin will not rear young, I would like to give my experience. I put a pair together at the commencement of the present season. The first nest of four eggs were all fertile; but only two hatched. I was greatly disappointed the next morning to find the two young on the bottom of the cage dead. The second nest, other four eggs were laid, and being a bit dubious of the Goldie cock, I took him out, and left the Siskin to incubate. Another two young were hatched, which she has reared safely, giving them more care than many a Canary. They are now eight weeks old and beginning their moult. They show both parents well.

The Alleged Faking of Exhibition Linnets.

Sir,—Whatever value attaches to Mr. A. J. A. Marley's opinions on the staining and faking of Linnets, he rather runs past himself when he almost spitefully invites readers to "gaze upon" the "choice epithets" employed by Mr. G. E. Weston in your advisory columns. If Mr. Marley's idea in directing attention to the said columns is to discount Mr. Weston's conducting of them, he has loosed a shaft which will never find its mark. Mr. Weston himself could scarcely wish for a more complete vindication than the perusal of the "Answers to Queries" column will afford him. Personally, I have never read them without being struck by the soundness and usefulness of the replies, as well as the tact and ability with which Mr. Weston handles his difficult weekly task. I do not believe, however, that Mr. Marley intended to be spiteful, and I also doubt not that he will himself be the first to acknowledge that in this matter he has displayed some haste and not a little heat.

Information on Lark Catching.

Sir,—I see Mr. J. Ansell wants to know three things on catching Larks with a net. In answer to his first question, he wants a net from 18 to 25 yards long and four yards deep, so that he will have plenty of trail; secondly, he wants to go on dark nights, and not when it is moonlight; and thirdly, the best place to find them is on a clover root field or old pastures. When you start to trail the net you must keep it as tight as possible at the front, and about two feet from the ground. If the birds get under the net at your end just pull the line, and the man at the other end will let it drop, as he might not have heard them; of course, he will do the same should any get under the end nearest to him. When there are any birds under the net you must go behind to get them. First put one hand on the bird; then with the other hand you must lift the net and get hold of the bird's body, allowing its wings to be free. Lift the net off it, as you will always find the bird's head is through one of the meshes of the net. If you will go about an hour before dark where you intend trailing you can pick the fields out, and see that they are not bushed, for if they are you will have no net left for a second attempt.

Northampton St. Crispin C.B.S.

Sir,—Being a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS, I read a report of a new cage bird society being formed to be called the St. Crispin Cage Bird Society, and also that it was decided to hold a nest feather show in July, the date of which was duly published in CAGE BIRDS. The result of the show was naturally watched with interest by the fanciers here generally; but up to the present I have not read any report of the show, and the fanciers of the town have been kept in the dark as to the progress or otherwise of the St. Crispin Society. The news leaked out through a report of a meeting and ramble of the St. Crispin Society which was published in CAGE BIRDS of August 12, over the name of one of the members of that society, in which it was stated that, owing to lack of interest, it was deemed necessary to wind up the St. Crispin C.B.S. Then, on taking up CAGE BIRDS of August 19, lo! and behold! another letter was published over the name of Jno. Nason, hon. sec., that the previous week's report (signed T. Gammage) was a misleading report of the doings of the St. Crispin Society, at the same time inferring that the writer was a member of another society. Now, sir, as a member of the only other society in Northampton devoted solely to cage birds (the Hand-in-Hand C.B.S.), I consider this uncalled-for remark of Jno. Nason does no credit to him, for if John knew the writer, whether he be a member of his own self-formed society or a member of any other society, he has his own remedy, without throwing suspicion on another society: and knowing personally each member of the Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. (which has a membership of about sixty) I do not believe one of them would lower himself to hit either Mr. Nason or the St. Crispin Society below the belt in the way the writer of the letter did. But I doubt not, John, that any member of the Hand-in-Hand would give you every credit if you could bring this new-found blackleg of yours to book, and I should advise you to look well over the nest of hornets you have given so much time and trouble to hand-feed. It would be interesting to know, John, if your blackleg fledgling was on view at the St. Crispin's nest feather show.

Another White Swallow.

Sir,—As I have read of several White Swallows being seen this summer, perhaps the following will be of interest to the readers of your most interesting paper. While walking along by the river Trent near Stone, Staffordshire, on August 26, I was quite surprised when I saw a pure white Swallow flying up and down the river along with several ordinary coloured ones, among which it looked quite conspicuous. I have since been told that it has been in this vicinity during the last week.

A Question for Border Fanciers.

Sir,—Can any of your readers explain the following: I had a nest of five young Borders, which have done very well until lately I noticed some of them getting red and swollen-like at the feet. Latterly I noticed that two of them were to lose their centre toe-nails; these just seemed to rot off. Yet the birds are as healthy as one could wish to see. Another thing I wish to ask is, would a bird without a claw be thrown out by a judge at any of our shows?

BORDER FANCY.

An Excellent First Attempt.

Sir,—Referring to Mrs. Tingle's letter, I may say that I also experienced a very similar case to hers, this year being my first in bird breeding. I paired my birds up on May 12, and the first egg was laid next morning (the 13th). I had three more eggs—one each morning following—but I did not leave them there as Mrs. Tingle did; I removed them as they were laid, and replaced them on the fourth morning; all four hatched out on the thirteenth day within a few hours of each other, and all are now doing well on hard seed. I also let the cock bird stay with them during the process of rearing, which he did almost entirely, the mother not feeding after the second or third day. Yet they were the healthiest youngsters one could wish to see, leaving the nest at seventeen days old. The second nest was better still. Five youngsters hatched out on the twelfth day of incubation, the cock again doing the "lion's" share of the feeding; these also left the nest at seventeen days old. I have had three nests—one four and two fives (fourteen in all)—and every egg hatched, but unfortunately the last nest of five were lost by the heavy thunderstorm last Saturday week, causing the hen to lay on them, they then being only three days old.

ARTHUR FORREST.

The Food of the Chaffinch.

Sir,—The following, which I came across in "Country Life," will probably interest fellow-readers:—A pair of Chaffinches built last summer, and again this, in a flowering shrub in my garden (says the writer of the letter). Last summer two nestlings were found dead below the nest, probably taken by a cat, but the old birds managed to get one safely away, and when they had started her or him in the leafy world they returned to partake of canary and hemp seed, which I threw out on walls below the dining-room window. I have a little Redpoll in a cage in the window who is always charmed to see the Chaffinch, and, as a rule, he does not bring his wife with him. This summer the same pair built in the same bush, but, as if warned by experience, placed the nest a yard or so higher up. They came several times daily for canary and hemp seed, always joyfully greeted by the Redpoll, until the young were hatched. But they then gave up coming for seed, and I watched them constantly catching flies and insects on the wing, which they carried to their young. I concluded that they did not think bird seed suitable for tender digestions, and sacrificed their own fancy for it for the good of their nestlings. In due time I watched the young family leave the nest one fine morning and disappear with their parents into the woodland below. I felt sure the Chaffinch would return when the young were able to look after themselves, as he had done last summer. In about ten days he came and greeted the Redpoll and picked up seed from the walls as before. Almost at the same minute a Yellow-hammer appeared with two young ones. The latter were quite able to fly, but the elder bird fed them with canary and hemp seed, which they seemed fully to appreciate. The Chaffinch made a show of driving them away, but they persevered in remaining, and came again several times. I may add that I have never seen such beautiful specimens as these Chaffinches and Yellow-hammers. The female of the latter has a rich yellow-striped head. I think the climate and the iron in the soil of North Devon produce a redundancy of colour observable in birds and flowers.

Canaries, etc., with Air-distended Skin.

Sir,—In reply to "Reader and Breeder," I have had such on several occasions during my experience of many years as a bird fancier. Some of the birds reminded one more of a miniature balloon. I have found it more so when hand-rearing. I put it down to weakness and inability to digest the food. I have also pricked the skin (I avoid penetrating a vein), but it has come again with next feeding, and I have seldom met with success in rearing the birds thus affected.

F. J. Weaire.

Sir,—I thought it might interest your correspondent, "A Reader and Breeder," to know that young Greenfinches, when hand-reared, often suffer from distended skin in the way described. They generally die when this occurs; but this year I had a very fine nestling brought me "in a nest of three." He showed signs of this ailment, if I may so call it, about two days after I had him—as soon as he began to call for food. It appeared to raise the skin from the roof of the beak to the joining of the wing. It had the appearance of a child's toy balloon with a little stringy neck in the middle, and every vein was stretched to its utmost. My greatest fear was that one of the veins would burst. I used to press it back, and the wind escaped through the mouth. I held the neck firmly while I fed the bird. I also tried a thin elastic band sown round, but it was no good. Then I began to prick the little air cells with a needle; the swelling would go down for a bit, but as soon as the bird began to call "chicket, chicket" for food the swelling would come up as badly as ever. I had not the heart to kill the bird, although that is what I thought I ought to do. At last I found that the air seemed to escape from the lungs just above where the left wing join the body, so there I put the needle right through, and made a little slit that could not easily fill up again, and this treatment proved successful, as the bird was, in the end, the only one that lived. (I find that Greenfinches are hard to rear.) It is now such a bonny bird that I have to look twice to be sure which is the old Greenfinch and which the young one. I am hoping to mate him to a young Roller hen next spring. I have read that some birds have the power of filling the bones with air when about to take flight. I have thought that probably the same thing applies to the inner skin, and that this sort of "indiarubber" skin is due to an abnormal number or size of the air cells. I also thought it would interest "Aviator" to know that I have taken the measurements of my young Cuckoo (that was taken from a Wagtail's nest in England), and is only now just beginning to feed himself a little. They are as follows: From tip of beak to tip of tail, 12 inches; from wing point to wing point (when fully stretched for flying), 20 inches; round body, over tightly closed wings, 8 inches. I have seen a specimen of an old Cuckoo (caught in England,) in our Victoria Institute, that could, I am sure, compete for size with any pigeon. I am told they are often shot in mistake for such.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1911 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address

Sunderland C.B.A.

The breeding results of the Sunderland fanciers during the past season may be regarded as fairly satisfactory, for although some of the members have had only poor results, others have done very well. Instances of clear eggs have not been very numerous, although a number of fanciers have had a good many youngsters dead in shell. But the principal complaint has been bad-feeding hens. Taken all through, however, the results have been much better than those of the previous season, and this can doubtless be put down to the grand summer we have had. I am giving you the results of sixteen of our members, the aggregate of these being just 500, made up as follows:—W. F. Swan, 130 (Crests 30, Yorkshires 17, Lancashires 6, and the rest Borders); J. Farrar, 50 (Crests, Yorkshires, and Borders); J. Snowball, 46 (all Norwich); A. Walker, 48 (40 Borders and 8 Lizards); T. Davidson, 30 (Borders); T. Bainbridge, 30 (Borders); W. Reid, 30 (11 Norwich, 13 Lizards, 4 Borders, and 2 Mules); J. Jeffrey, 28 (Lizards); J. Riseborough, 26 (17 Norwich, 5 Yorkshires, 2 Lizards, and 2 Cinnamons); R. Newcombe, 25 (Borders); C. Waters, 14 (10 Canaries and 4 Mules); T. Gray, 14 (all Yorkshires); R. Haswell, 12 (Lizards and Borders); J. A. Murray, 8 (5 Mules from Mules and 3 Canaries); J. Machin, 5 (Norwich); and G. Davidson, 5 (Lizards). It may interest readers of Cage Birds to know that the Mules from Mules bred by Mr. Murray this year are bred from the same cock Linnet Mule and hen Canary that produced the youngsters I have previously written about, this year's birds being bred before I sent the old pair on to a well-known muling expert who now has them in his possession, of which more anon.

My Experiences as a Fancier.

By J. SHEPHERD.

The following lecture was delivered before the members of the Northern Border and Scotch Fancy Club on August 14.

Mr. Shepherd said it gave him the greatest of pleasure to give an account of his experiences to the Border and Scotch Fanciers present. To make a start he should have to go a long way back—to the year 1866, in fact—when he lived in a colliery village called Colliery Dikes, or, as it is now known, Dipton. Here he lived for a number of years with his grandmother, and from Grannie received his first lessons on bird keeping.

A Nestful of Sparrows.

His Grannie was fond of birds, and was always pleased to tell him all she knew about a case of stuffed birds that had come from warmer climes. There were about 25 birds in the case, but all Mr. S. remembers of them was a Rock Mynah and a cock Goldie. But their grand colours did not entice him, and he longed for a Sparrow, and many a pinch of salt he ran out with to put on their tails. But at last a friend who was pulling down a house gave him a nestful—nest and all. Mr. S. ran home to Grannie in high glee, only to get a lecture on his cruelty, until she understood how he had got them; then Grannie told him how they were too young to feed themselves, and showed him how to chew up bread with a drop of milk, and how to feed the young ones. She also put them out in an old cage so that the old ones could help feed them; this they did. At last they were full-fledged, and one morning, before Mr. S. got up, Grannie let them go, much to his sorrow. Grannie promised him another bird, one that would sing, which consoled him.

After a few months a friend gave him a Greenfinch, and as the old cage could not be got one had to be made; so Mr. S. went to the nearest grocer, got a box, and put strips of wood up for wires. Greenie was put in there, and it was more like a rabbit hutch than a cage.

When Halfpennies were Scarce.

Greenie became a great favourite and was carried about all over Dipton. It hardly ever had a half-pennyworth of secd, it was fed on green food and oats and on whatever scraps could be had. Halfpennies were scarce then. A friend took a fancy to it as it was such a size and such a grand colour, and Mr. S. sold it at the then enormous price of 2s.. and a pair of Canaries, and he believes that up to that time it was a record price. The friend sent him, as promised, a pair of the then "wee gems"—Cumberland Fancies—and for three years Grannie and he bred with them. During that time he had always a Linnet or two and some Greenies.

A trade was then to be taken up, and owing to his always pottering among rabbit hutches and cages it was decided to make him a cabinet maker. His first place was at Consett. His master here was a fancier, and encouraged him in the Fancy. He was only a short time with him, and then came to Newcastle, where his new master also encouraged him in the care of feathered friends. Mr. S. also met, and enjoyed the company of, other fanciers. Finishing his time here, he was advised by fellow workers to get to Scotland to learn a better style of work, and it was a good day for him when he left for Edinburgh, as when he arrived he found he had a lot to learn.

With "The Shamrock."

Here he was bench-mate with one Jimmy Bradley, one of the finest workmen he has ever known, before or since, and he owes everything to him. Jimmy was a bird fancier, but Mr. S. did not know it until one day the shop-boy caught a Chaffie, and said he would take it to "the Shamrock," explaining that "the Shamrock" was Jimmy Bradley, and that he got the name of "Shamrock" because he had said he had a Blackbird that could whistle "The Dear Little Shamrock." They soon went to lodge together, and had some birds. But after some time they went to Dundee, leaving their tools in Edinburgh. Jimmy, being well known, got a job at once, tools or not. But Mr. S. was not so fortunate, and walked the streets for some days, Jimmy sticking to him and going to see him through. Mr. S. saw an advertisement in a window for a male polisher, went in and got the job, having learnt the art of polishing from an old hand at Consett in his spare time at nights. This master was a fancier as well, and carted Mr. S. all over the place. One day he asked Mr. S. if he knew of a good cabinet maker, as he wanted one very badly, having got in a big ordor. Mr. S. was in a fix, but told his master, with the result that he started again at his old trade on the Monday, thereby doubling his wages. Then "the Shamrock" and he went off to the Granite City, but the work was not up to the mark; as Jimmy said, when his master asked him what he would call a sideboard, "Shure, an' I would call it an ould coal box."

Mr. S. and he returned to Glasgow. They stayed some time in Glasgow and lodged with a rare old fancier; and it was here Mr. S. saw his first "Glasgow Don," the now Scotch Fancy. Several fanciers were met here, and Mr. S. and Jimmy had a room to themselves. It was half birdroom and half bedroom.

A Sad Parting.

Sickness among Jimmy's old folks in Belfast here caused a parting never again to be repaired. On Jimmy's advice Mr. S. came on to Liverpool, and getting work across the river at Seacombe, lodged there. In his lodging here he saw his first living Goldfinch. His landlord was a real fancier, and gave Mr. S. a Goldie, and from him Mr. S. learned how to keep Hawfinches. Adult Hawfinches are, he said, hard to moult, and are best fed on green peas during the moult.

A friend used to visit the house, and used to be much more interested in Mr. Shepherd's birds than anyone's, and this friend asked him his opinion regarding their Bantams; he said they were a tip-top pair, and when they were sent to a show a few weeks after the Judge confirmed his statement, and they came home with the coveted first and special. That clinched matters, and the friend is now Mrs. Shepherd, as they were married not long after, and from then till now they have never been without a bird in the house.

At Liverpool he came in contact with Mr. Hadwin, and took up at this time the breeding of Yorkshires. About this time, too, he sent a Greenie to Earlston show, and Mr. Houlton was judge. Mr. S. thought the Greenie had a good chance, but it was out of it. He fought for the common Greenie, and has fought for it ever since. Then he was some time at Cloughhold among the Lizard fanciers, and later at Rochdale among the Lancashire Coppies; and there he had a interesting experience. Sent to a job, he was at it some time, and on going into the village near by he went to the barber's and then found out he had been shaved by the Farnworth hangman, the famous Billington. He lived in and about Liverpool for a matter of 14 or 15 years, and 10 years ago he took the fancy and came back again to Newcastle.

A Stroke of Bad Luck.

Mr. Maddison was the first fancier he met. He intended when he came not to keep more than a singing bird or two, but you should see his room. He had had his ups and downs in the Fancy, but had nothing serious until he lost 250 birds, and he was rather suspicious. It was due to two bought birds being put among his others. He only saved about a dozen, and they were mostly British. The wood alone for the cages cost over £30, and they were tossed out into the yard, exposed to the weather. Twelve months after he tried them, and he found that weather and time had been as efficacious as a disinfectant.

Liverpool men rallied round him and set him off again with six pairs. He had always found fanciers true hearted, and the best of friends one could have. He was confident they would never see a fellow fancier want.

Mr. Currah said how pleased he was to have heard Mr. Shepherd, and that he would often think of what Mr. Shepherd had said when he was thousands of miles away. Mr. Ernie Atkinson said he, too, had enjoyed the lecture; he only wished he knew Mr. S. better than he did. Mr. Shepherd was asked if he found it true that an adult Sparrow could not be kept in captivity, and his answer was that it was practically true, as he had never been able to steady an adult bird, and never yet was he able to get one into exhibition condition. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Shepherd for his kindness. Regret was evident on all sides that Mr. Currah would have to leave us.—J. N. F. Scott, Sec.

British Softbilled Birds.

How I feed and treat them.

By
MISS C. D. FITZMAURICE
(Kilrush, Co. Clare).

In commencing these few notes on my favourite soft-bills I may state that there are a few sorts which I prefer to hand-rear. In hand-rearing I have found the following contrivance useful and inexpensive. Most probably the greatest difficulty in rearing young birds is to supply an equivalent for the heat of the mother bird, many promising youngsters succumbing to a single night's cold. It is easy during the daytime to keep the birds near the fire, but for the night I adopted this plan: I got an ordinary biscuit tin, a night-light and glass, a piece of wire nailed on a wooden frame, a flower-pot and an earthenware nest pan. Then I put the night-light in the tin, covered the tin with the wire, on the wire set the flowerpot and nest pan, and in the nest pan in flannel placed the young birds. It seems silly, but in reality I have found it a workable idea, and have reared Swallows, etc. successfully by means of it.

A Delightful Songster.

I will pass over the Nightingale, as this bird is not met with in Ireland, and I have no experience of it; and I will proceed to write about that delightful songster, the Blackcap. In June is the best time to search for a nest of Blackcaps. I have usually discovered their cosy abode in tangled brambles. Take the young birds when the ends of the feathers are beginning to peep through the pen-coverings. Then bring them home, and see that they are kept warm; feed as follows. If one lives in the country and has time, nothing, of course, can beat caterpillars, spiders, grubs, and such like in profusion; but few bird-keepers can offer such luxuries to their pets, so one has generally to be content with a good insectivorous food, supplemented with small mealworms, gentles and chopped lettuce, green food being essential. During the moulting season I have found elderberries and spiders very useful.

The best cage is a large box cage enamelled light green inside, with the perches arranged a good distance apart so as to give the birds plenty of exercise. If kept in this way, a bath and frequent live tit-bits being supplied to it, the Blackcap will prove a charming songster and a good show bird.

However, it is not always possible to hand-rear our pets, the process involving much time and trouble. So sometimes we must be content with wild-caught birds, though the latter are never as tame. I have never found it easy to capture full grown Blackcaps, but whenever I succeeded it was with a spring net trap, baited with elderberries. When caught I put the bird into a large box cage with a wooden bar front, which I keep specially for freshly captured birds, and then place it in the dark with a little water, but no food, until early next morning when the hungry bird is tempted with some lively small mealworms, a spider or anything of the sort obtainable. If it does not eat then, I sprinkle it with water; and if that is ineffectual I release it, as a sulky bird seldom comes to any good. But during my experience of bird keeping it has only once been necessary to liberate the bird; yet my best Blackcap, "Joey," had to receive a shower-bath to give him an appetite. "Joey" is a decidedly handsome fellow, being large and well-shaped, having a glossy black cap and neat silky plumage in different shades of blue-grey and grey-brown. He will take a spider from my fingers fearlessly and has a very sweet, clear song, which he keeps up well during the summer and on bright days through the winter. I have three others at present, two cocks and a dainty little brown hen to whom "Joey" is devoted, and if I had my aviary now, I should have hopes of their breeding.

The Pretty Meadow Pipit.

The Meadow Pipit is a great favourite of mine, being sprightly, tame, easily kept and charmingly pretty, its soft plumage of pale yellow, barred with olive brown, and its dainty slim form making it most attractive. I like a low long cage in which to keep it, the bottom covered thickly with stream sand which must be very fine, as the bird's feet are in my opinion, rather tender.

It is not at all difficult to meat off the Meadow Pipit, and it is quite unnecessary to hand-rear it, as it is easily tamed, and soon settles down to cage life. I often give my birds a run in an empty room for exercise, as they do not seem to keep in the best of plumage without it. "Dick," the first specimen of this bird I obtained, I have had now for over five years. He is extremely tame, sitting on his little moss cushion and warbling his cheery song while I carry the cage about. I prefer a piece of moss (the common flat sort that covers old walls) on a tin lid, to a sod, as it does not get dirty so quickly and is easily obtained.

The simplest food keeps a Pipit in good condition, and I have noticed that "Dick" is very partial to hulled and soaked Canary seed. He is also fond of picking over a handful of garden earth.

To maintain Meadow Pipits and indeed all softbills in health and beauty of plumage, the greatest cleanliness is necessary; food and water vessels should be kept scrupulously clean and the cage raked out frequently. It is certainly troublesome, but the genuine bird-lover will not grudge a little bother in the interests of his pets.

A large, brightly coloured Pipit should make a good show bird, although, of course, its commonness is against it. Still, in my opinion, a Pipit in glossy feather in a cage enamelled egg shell blue should not be beaten even by rarer birds if the latter are not in first rate condition.

The Stonechat and Its Feeding.

The Stonechat is rather difficult to keep, it being almost impossible to meat the species off. However, two years ago I hand-reared two out of a nest of four, and they certainly repay all the bother I had with them, for two prettier creatures surely cannot exist. The Stonechat may not be well-known to the town dweller, for it is essentially a bird of the country, and frequents commons and heaths, being most plentiful, in my experience, near the sea. Its nest is artfully hidden, and can only be discovered by the exercise of great patience on the part of the searcher, it being generally necessary to watch the birds to their home; and as they are very suspicious this is no easy task. I have invariably found the nest under furze bushes growing on low banks.

This bird requires a large roomy cage, and will not be content with a small one, being restless. An extra good insectivorous mixture should be supplied to it, and as much live food as possible. In my case it does not care much for fruit or green food, so these must be well mixed with the dry food, or the bird will reject them. The Stonechat's plumage is most attractive; it is, in colour, a mixture of black, white, chestnut-red and brown, tastefully disposed. The female is more soberly attired in various shades of brown and white. I fancy sea-green is the most suitable colour for the inside of a Stonechat's cage, but pale blue should also answer.

The Saucy Blue Tit.

Our prettiest Britisher, with perhaps the exception of the Kingfisher, is, I consider, the saucy Blue Tit with its azure crown, wings and tail, its yellow breast marked by a dark blue line, its olive green back and its white cheeks. But alas! it is almost impossible to keep it for long in a cage. Many times have I tried, but almost always with the same sad result. Again and again I vowed never to keep one again, but, a glint of blue and a saucy "spee, spee," and I was conquered.

My present bird I have had for upwards of four months. He is kept in a very large all-wire cage, in a cosy corner of the room (by the bye, always see that the wires are close together; "Thomas" is a great hand at squeezing out, and cats abound!). A bit of fat dangles on a long string; a cocoanut husk forms a warm sleeping-place; and sunflower and hemp seeds, mealworms, gentles, blue bottles, a bit of apple, a bit of cocoanut and a good supply of ants' eggs form his larder. Up to the time of writing "Thomas" is very bright and perky, and always has a cheery "spee spee, chiddle-dee" for me when I enter the room. Long may he remain so, for if dear little "Tommy" were to die, it would be like parting from my best friend.

A Sweet and Constant Singer.

Oh how the sentimentalists will cry out against me when I speak of caging Robins! But I have no patience with sentimentalists, not the very least; they are either ignorant, prejudiced or affected. A lady once said to me: "How you can be so cruel as to keep poor innocent little birds in cages I don't know; it's positively wicked!" I looked at her seal-skin coat, and egret-plumed hat, and remembered having seen Quails, Larks and Wheatears on her table, and I answered nothing, but reflected a good bit. A man told me "it showed ignorance of Nature and all suitability to imprison the wild birds" I heard him afterwards declaring that "a Lark's song hadn't any more music in it than a barrel organ." Need I add that this story is a true one? So you can guess what my opinion of the sentimental crew is. Now, a Robin is a very sweet and constant singer, not to speak of its prettiness and friendliness, so I am never without one. I feed it on plain insectivorous diet, and supply worms and fruit in plenty to it, and a bath very often.

I cannot close my note on this bird without referring to a Robin called "Bobbie" I had years ago. "Bobbie" was brought to me by my little sister Ethel, who told me that cruel boys had broken his wings and hurt his leg with a stone while he sat on his nest in a hole in the wall. I amputated poor "Bobbie's" wing which was hopelessly injured and let him loose into a room which was my first aviary. He immediately set up as lord of the room, and it was very amusing to watch his wars with the other Robins. He delighted in a bath, and when the glass dish which served as a public bath to the inhabitants of bird town was renewed in the morning "Bobbie" at once had a splash in it. He wasn't content with this but would go round a corner away and wait until another Robin was in the water, when he would limp angrily up and drive the offender off, after which he would jump into it himself and warble a short song of triumph. He lived a happy life for some years, but at last succumbed to a very vicious Robin whom I had unfortunately introduced into the room. "Bobbie" was wonderfully tame, and always came to meet me as I entered the room with expectanoy of getting a worm, in which he was seldom disappointed.

Wild-Bird Life.

After the Harvest is Over.

Now that the greater part of the harvest is gathered the hills and valeys have lost some of their beauty. The golden grain lent a richness to the landscape unseen at any other time. The stubble still gives colour, but not the colour of the standing corn. To have acres of cover removed in a few days must be a rude shock to the wild birds frequenting such glorious hunting grounds. The hedgerows bordering the fields are dense and thick, and to these the birds fly at the first approach of danger. They are thickly populated with both young and old of many species, although thousands have already moved quietly southward, most probably, doing the journey to our southern shores in easy stages, for there is no need for hurry. Winter, we hope, is a long way off yet, and the journey across the seas need not be made until there is a decided change in the weather and the food supply is not quite so liberal as formerly. Now the harvest is cleared, hundreds of birds settle on the stubble and feed greedily upon the shattered grain. It is very doubtful if at this time wild seeds form even a part of the bill of fare of several species. Some half-dozen Sparrows killed out of a flock of perhaps a hundred, could not muster a single grain of wild seed among the contents of the crops of the whole of them. They had nothing but good sound wheat. So, also, had a couple of Greenbirds. The pretty free-flying Turtle Doves come down from the wooded hills and feast to their hearts' content in the open fields. Although these birds will not be departing for quite a month, they have gradually altered their habits. Till recently they were only to be met with in pairs, or at most three or four, old birds and young; but now they can be seen in slightly larger parties. This is apparently the outcome of the desire to consort with their fellows, and will eventually lead to the coming together of the huge flocks which can be noted in favoured localities some time previous to their final departure. Unlike the Wood-pigeon, these pretty Doves only rear one brood of young during the season, but they are generally fairly plentiful, and in some seasons so numerous that they become destructive to certain crops. But as a rule they can safely be classed with our useful birds.

A Suspicious Nest-builder.

Most birds dislike any interference with their nest and eggs, and some are much more suspicious than others. The tiny Wren is particularly fastidious, and should her home be touched ever so lightly during her absence she will detect it, and most probably abandon her eggs at once.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects. Harmless to everything.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

THREATENINGS AT MILLOM.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Following is the report to which I referred last week as having been published in a Millom contemporary:

CAGE BIRDS AND DISEASE.

STRONG ACTION BY MILLOM HEALTH AUTHORITY.

In their war upon all pulmonary disease, the Millom Health Committee have taken very strong action in the matter of cage birds.

Within the past few days notices have been served by the Inspector of Nuisances (Mr. A. Haynes) to all known owners of birds who keep the same upon their living premises, informing them that the birds must be disposed of within a certain period.

This power is vested in the Health Committee under Sections 95 and 96 of the Public Health Act (1875), and the putting into operation of this is being much resented by "fanciers" in the Millom district, who talk of combining for the purpose of testing the legality of the sanitary authority's action. Already several small sums of money have been subscribed or promised towards this object, and for the purpose of more effective action a cage birds' society is in process of formation.

It is understood that all owners of birds above one will be affected. Dr. Stoney, Medical Officer of Health for the Urban District Council, has made a personal inspection of a number of residential premises where cage birds are known to be kept.

The number of phthisis cases in Millom, especially among the young, and particularly in the Newtown portion of the district, is alarming, and Dr. Stoney is earnestly engaged in combatting the tubercular scourge by means of a free dispensary promoted by the Millom Urban Council on his suggestion, and by domiciliary visits, etc.

Mr. Park says in his letter, "These officials seem to have slackened off in visiting rooms and serving notices. I sincerely hope they will let the matter drop, although I am informed it is to come up again in about three weeks." This letter from Mr. Park is dated August 21, and I have not since heard from him. In the meantime CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has not been idle, and I am only waiting to hear what further steps, if any, are threatened by the Millom authorities.

How Far Will They Go?

The combination of fanciers mentioned in the above article may be assured that every assistance will be afforded them in their resistance to any action on the part of the authorities which is not strictly within their legal powers. To threaten that "all owners of birds above one will be affected" is, of course, simply ridiculous; that is, in the present state of the law. No magistrate would order an owner of two birds kept in proper conditions to part with his pets, nor the owner of any number of birds to do so, unless the Health Committee could prove to his satisfaction that their keeping was a menace to the public health. Whether the law will in the more or less immediate future be altered to make cage bird keeping an offence in itself, either if one or two birds or one or two hundred are concerned, is another matter. I have many times pointed out that this is the avowed object of the professional humanitarians. It is the undisguised goal toward which they are striving, and only a combination of many thousands of bird-keepers may prevent the consummation of their frantic endeavours. A few fanciers, or a few hundred fanciers, would be entirely at their mercy, and bird-keepers must themselves band together in their united thousands to avert the disaster which is imminently threatening.

In Numbers is Strength.

We have capital to fight against, and only numbers can give us success. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is already a power to be reckoned with, and our opponents know it. We must show them, and show them soon, that it is such a power that their efforts will be of no avail. Then, and not till then, the bird lover who is as much of a humanitarian as these paid servants of public societies will be left in peace to pursue his innocent hobby. Send along your subscription at once, and the end of all persecution is near.

The Booking Clerks and Bird Parcels.

Enquiry is being made into the alleged action of the booking clerks at Nottingham in refusing to accept live birds for transmission, and I hope to have a further announcement to make next week in regard to this matter.

Non-members and Our Badges.

I am continually getting applications from non-members for badges. Will readers kindly note that badges are for the wearing of members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE as a visible token of membership? They are not supplied to non-members under any circumstances. Those who would wish to wear one of the League badges must therefore enclose with their application the membership fee as well as the price of the badge.

More Local Hon. Secs.

I have the pleasure of noting the following additions to our list of Local Hon. Secs. Many secretaries have written that, owing to there being no meeting of their societies during July and August the matter is in abeyance, and I hope soon to announce a large extension. Intending members residing in towns already represented (see lists in the past three issues) may send their applications for membership either direct to me, or through their Local Hon. Sec. In the latter case, they will be benefiting their own local society in the competition for our prizes.

Derby, Mr. G. H. Wharam, 18, Colyear Street.

Polmont, Mr. Robt. Leitch, Brightons, Polmont Station.

Our New Seals.

These pretty seals have given great satisfaction, and orders are coming in by every post. The price is eightpence per hundred, post free. Smaller quantities at the hundred rate, but with one penny extra for postage. They are an ornament to envelopes, notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc., and all members should use them.

The Way Members are Helping.

Sir,—Our meeting has been postponed until September 4 owing to so many members being on holiday. Will you kindly send me a good parcel of pamphlets? I have made arrangements with our leading seedsman to deliver them to fanciers. I intend to make things go here. All the members I have met are willing to join the LEAGUE.—F. PRICE, Local Hon. Sec. Walsall.

Sir,—The rolled gold badges are about the neatest thing I have seen. I shall wear mine at every opportunity. I have given a lot of bird fanciers the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE pamphlet, and I will bring its aims and objects before our society at our next monthly meeting, to be held on September 6. Wishing CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE every success.—C. RAMSEY, Local Hon. Sec.

Croxdale, Co. Durham.

Sir,—At our last meeting a debate was opened on the subject of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE to decide upon the action of our club in the matter. We realised as fanciers that our hobby is in danger of serious attack, and we unanimously decided that to connect ourselves with the LEAGUE was the proper thing to do. It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously that I accept the position of Local Hon. Sec., and I should be glad if you would kindly forward me some pamphlets for distribution. Our chairman, myself, and other members have agreed to join, and I am hoping that nearly all of our members will follow suit in due course.—G. H. WHARAM, Local Hon. Sec.

Derby.

OUR FREE BOOKLETS.

I have still some of each of the sixpenny pamphlets on British Bird Culture and on Canary and Hybrid Culture, and, as long as they last, one of either will be sent gratis to all new members applying for a copy at the time of joining. Those of the old members who have not yet had a copy may receive one of those reserved for them on sending a penny stamp for postage. Only one copy of either book can be sent free either to new members or old, and when the stock in hand is exhausted I may not be able to get a fresh supply, so that those who would make sure of getting one of these useful pamphlets should send on their application with their membership fee without delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AND BADGES.

The subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is one shilling annually, and the badges sixpence or one shilling. The sixpenny badges are in three forms: (1) a button for coat lapel, (2) a pendant for watch chain, (3) a brooch for lapel, cycling cap, or for lady's wear. The badges at one shilling each are mounted in 9-carat rolled-gold; and are in two forms only: (1) a pendant for watch chain, (2) a brooch for a lady or for cycling cap or coat lapel. Members should distinctly state which form they prefer.

The annual subscription to the JUNIOR BRANCH, for members under fourteen years of age at the date of joining, is sixpence. Price of badges as above.

The Shows.

RUTHIN (Denbighshire).

Ruthin eighth annual show held Aug. 31st, in the beautiful grounds of Ruthin Castle (by kind permission of Col. Cornwallis West). As usual, the show was held in connection with the flower show, etc., in favourable weather, and was well attended. Mr. Butler held the secretarial reins, which were well handled. Yorkshires were the feature of the show. In quality and numbers Mules were well represented, and some good ones were shown. Goldies, too, were a very fair lot. The first feather class and the British A.O.S. class were very fine. Mr. T. Powell (Corwen) judged and gave general satisfaction.

CAN. (11): 1, 3, J. O. Williams, well drawn yell. thigh ticked Yorks hen, full of style and quality, well through moult, 3rd lengthy yell. youngster, often reviewed, not in his best clothes to-day; 2, O. H. Roberts, good cl. yell, very typical, in good condition, nice outline; res, W. Davies, buff Yorks. MULE (10): 1, 2, W. Davies, eye and wing mkd. Goldie-Can., good type, nice size, in grand condition; 2nd same cross, varieg. yell., very typical and stylish, good sheen; 3, James Williams, neat varieg. buff. BRIT (Goldfinch excluded) (7): 1, H. Morgan, good steady young Hawfinch, very promising; 2, W. L. Forder, another nice Hawfinch, close up, in good condition; 3, Goronwy Evans, neat Siskin, in fine feather; res, James Williams. FIRST FEATHER BIRD (8): 1, 2, 3, J. O. Williams, trio of grand Yorks. led the way here, in the order named, 1st Nantlle Vale winner, lengthy and stylish buff, 2nd cl. yell., 3rd wing tkd. yell., a very even lot. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (8): 1, W. Davies, good Finch, square blaze, rich col.; 2, W. Edwards, good body col., beaten in blaze only; 3, J. Richards, fine type and ground col.; res, J. A. Rickman.

BLENNERHASSET (Cumb.).

Blennerhasset C.B., etc., Society's annual show, held September 2nd, in the Mills. It could not be called a success, as many classes were cancelled owing to want of entries. Of course, this is a bad time for a cage bird show, the great majority of birds being in the moult. However, what was lacking in quantity was made up for in quality. The buff hen staged by Mr. Hennington is a good one, and will be heard of again. Mr. W. Jackson makes an ideal secretary, and everything passed off without a hitch. Mr. J. Thompson (Wigton) judged, and his efforts met with general satisfaction.

BUFF BORD. CK.: 1, Ellwood, neat, fine size and col., good wings and tail, lovely bloom; 2, 3, Pennington, brace of grand Borders, excelling in type and quality; 4, Pearson; 5, 6, Dixon. CK. A.O.C.: 1, Dixon, grand even marked, good col., fine type and quality, well put down; 2, Coulthard, Cinn., staged in the best of form; 3, Pennington, green, in good feather; 4, Pearson. BORD. HEN: 1, Pennington, cl. buff, stylish exhibit, neatly drawn, well tapered, grand wing carriage, in rare condition; 2, Ellwood, yell. ticked, neat and typical, good col., fine quality, rare feather; 3, 4, Pearson, brace of Cinn., former even marked buff, latter var. buff; both in grand feather.

EAGLESFIELD (Dumfries).

This fixture was duly brought off on Sept. 2nd at Kirkbridge. Cage birds were accommodated in a tent, and a band of willing workers looked after their welfare. Borders predominated as formerly, and the club medal was won by Mr. R. Watt, with a buff cock that should do him some good. Scotch Fancies and Plainheads were a nice lot, and the Mules good. British, although not numerous, were topping, the winning Goldfinch especially so, and in this Finch Mr. H. Davidson has a stormer. Mr. Allan Doyle acted as secretary, and his arrangements were well carried out. Mr. W. Davidson (Kirtlebridge) judged, and his awards appeared to be well received.

BORD. CK., YELL.: 1, Robinson, grand exhibit, good colour, fine type and quality; 2, 3, Stewart. HEN: 1, Watt, neat and typical, good col., nice bloom, some perferred 2nd; 2, Davidson, grand stamp of a Border, put down in the pink of condition; 3, Robinson. BUFF CK.: 1, medal, Watt, with grand Border, good colour, fine head and neck, nice wings and tail; 2, Robinson, presses, not much between them; 3, Davidson, will make a grand bird when quite ready. HEN: 1, Davidson, young bird, nicely rounded, good wings, rare tail, put down in grand order; 2, Watt, not quite finished yet; 3, Johnstone. EVEN MKD.: 1, Davidson. UNEVEN: 1, Watt, buff three point, nicely drawn, well tapered, in fine bloom; 2, 3, Lockhart, brace of very decent Borders in good feather. SCOT. FCY.: 2, Muir. HEN: 1, 2, Muir. CREST: 2, Lockhart. NOR. YELL.: 1, Laidlaw; 2, 3, Lockhart. BUFF: 2, Laidlaw. LIGHT MULE: 2, Crosbie, well known four pointed buff, in grand trim. DARK: 1, 2, Crosbie; 3, Lockhart. LINNET: 1, 2, Murray, pair of good Finches, former excels in colour and lacing; 3, Watt. GOLDFINCH, BRIT.: 1, Davidson, good size, fine flush of rare colour, neat tans, we understand the Kirkpatrick winner in new hands, grand Finch in fine fettle; 2, Lockhart; 3, Anderson.

NORTH SUBURBAN C.I.S.

The North Suburban Canary Improvement Society held its 17th annual show in the Town Hall, Brunswick, Australia, on June 26th, 27th, and 28th. It was the largest and most successful show held this year. Norwich classes were a really good section, as also were the Crests. Of course in both sections there were some birds that stood out ahead of the others in merit, such as Mr. A. B. Mason's green crested cock, which won the special for Crest natural colour, also the certificate for the best Crest in show. Mr. W. Bennett won the special for best pepper-fed Crest. Mr. H. Hagg secured his first win with a beautiful young clear body with dark crest in the Crest Club open trophy. The same bird also won the "Charles Robert" cup and the "W. H. Stevens" cup, and won the £10 10s. trophy right out in the Crest Club for novices. The other winners in this section were: Messrs. Garney, Whaley, A. B. Mason, S. Chambers, C. Jarvie, W. Bennett, and F. Anderson. In Crestbreds Mr. Garney Whaley won the special for best pepper-fed Crestbred, also the certificate for best Crestbred in show. Mr. S. Chambers woo the special for best natural coloured Crestbred, and the challenge trophy for young Crestbreds. The other winners were: Messrs. J. Wales, H. Hagg, C. Jarvie, W. J. Myring. The Plainhead Norwich were well represented by the leading breeders in the State. For the "George Whaley" Memorial cup 28 entries were received, and for the "George Ward" cup 31 (all young birds). Mr. C. E. Schieferdecker won both with a bird of good type, colour and quality (a variegated buff hen). He also gained the certificate for best bird in show, Messrs. Warner and Rose (who were the largest winners in the show in this section) securing the special for best clear natural coloured, and Mr. C. Shepherd that for best natural coloured variegated. The other winners were: Messrs. Garney Whaley, A. E. Gardner, W. T. Francis, R. Nettlie, E. Baillie, E. T. Frost, H. Holton, J. Holkry, A. E. Koetsvelt, and C. Hunter. Cinnamons were well represented. The pride of position was secured by Mr. W. J. Myring, who won the challenge cup and special for best bird in this section, Messrs. W. L. Thompson and H. Kilner also securing prizes between them. Yorkshires were well represented, and some fine exhibits were to be seen on the stages. Mr. Poole won the challenge trophy, and Mr. Myring the certificate for best Yorkshire. The British bird classes, though not large, contained some really choice exhibits. The Foreign and Australian bird section was one of the most interesting that has been seen out here. There were some rare birds shown in beautiful condition. Mr. A. G. Boardman secured the most prizes, also special and certificate for best collection, Mr. P. Lee securing special for best pair of Finches. Special mention might be made of Mr. A. G. Boardman's Hybrid, bred between a Side-spotted Finch (Diamond Sparrow) and a Chestnut-eared Finch (Zebra Finch). It showed the parents on both sides very distinctly, and was very attractive, drawing forth some very admiring comments (much more so than the Canary Mules). This bird won 1st and special for best Mule or Hybrid. A few words of praise might be said of the Secretary (Mr. C. F. C. Rose), who carried out his duties to the full satisfaction of all concerned, backed up by an energetic committee. The judges in the cage bird section were Mr. E. Sharpe (Crests and Crestbreds), Mr. W. L. Thompson (Norwich Plainheads), Mr. G. Coleman (Yorkshires), Mr. A. Warner (Cinnamon), and Mr. A. G. Club Reports.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held August 26th, Mr. J. Muir presiding. The Treasurer submitted a very gratifying report of the F.F. show, which had proved a financial success. —W. Clubb, Sec.

ILKESTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Prince of Wales, September 2nd, Mr. J. H. Booth in chair. There was a good attendance of members. Our schedule for the open show was discussed and a few alterations made; classes were decided upon as follows: Norwich 10, Crest and C.B. 3, Yorkshire 6, A.O.V. 1, Mule 2, Brit. 8, For. 2, Gift 1, Members' 5.—Thos. Smith, Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

A few members and friends met in the Royal Hotel, September 2nd, to do honour to Mr. Thos. Thackeray, one of our members, who sails for New South Wales on September 16th. Mr. R. McClue occupied the chair, and after a few humorous remarks called on our worthy President to make the presentation, which consisted of a silver-mounted pipe and tobacco pouch. Mr. Rundell, in handing these over referred to Mr. Thackeray's sterling worth as a member and wished him success in the land of his adoption. Mr. Thackeray suitably replied. The rest of the evening was spent in song and sentiment.—Jas. Pollock, Sec.

UDDINGSTON AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held August 31st, Reading Room. Mr. H. Donnon (Vice-President) in chair. Letters were read from Norwich Plainhead Club and Border Fancy Club anent their patronage for our open show. Agreed to appoint another judge for Cage Birds Section. Estimates were read for printing of society's new rules; agreed, to have same ready for next meeting, when every member will receive a copy. Agreed, to have collecting books ready for next meeting, and handed out to members for collecting specials, etc. Members are requested to turn out to our next meeting, on last Thursday of this month, to help us get on with show business. —Jno. Kilpatrick, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held September 2nd, Fawcett Street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrer presiding. It was decided that we hold an open show on January 12th and 13th, 1912, the feeling of the members being that these dates would prove to be more suitable to exhibitors than our usual time in November, seeing that there is not a show held in the North in January. We hope our efforts to cater for fanciers will be appreciated and supported in a practical manner. We have taken the Miner's Hall, Rover Avenue, which will be found to be most suitable for the purpose. Several gentlemen were nominated as judges, the secretary being instructed to write for terms. We have been granted the patronage of the Northern Lizard C.C. Next meeting September 16th, when the schedule will be considered. Will members please attend.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Members gathered in strong force on August 31st at headquarters to receive prize money and specials awarded at the last show, which, like its predecessors, proved a financial success. Through the resignation of the chairman, Mr. J. H. Paxman, it became necessary to fill the vacancy, and the chair was offered to the vice-chairman, Mr. H. B. Rout, who accepted. He has in the past ably carried out his duties, and is always on the best of terms with the members. Mr. J. H. Paxman has sailed for Australia, and he has the society's best wishes for his future prosperity. Mr. A. Morris, a generous donor of a cup to the society, sent a telegram expressing regret for his absence. A general discussion concluded the evening. These "birdy" talks amongst members are fast becoming popular, and will no doubt prove educating.—B. C. Smith (Club Reporter).

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

General meeting held 142, High Street, Edinburgh, September 2nd, President (Mr. Turner) in chair, before a very large gathering of members. The following new members were admitted: Messrs. Nicol (Bathgate), J. Type (Forfar), G. Paton (Edinburgh), J. Lawson (Musselburgh), and R. V. Raine (Glasgow). Applications for patronage were then gone into and granted to the following clubs:—Broughty Ferry, Kelty and Blairadam, Bo'ness, Forfar, Bucklhaven, Cupar (Fife), Kilsyth, Broxburn, Glasgow and Dist., and Bathgate; while Leith and Edinburgh and Dist. got patronage for club shows. Mr. Cochrane pointed out that the rule relating to partnership had been omitted in printing. The rule reads: "When birds are shown in the name of a partnership, points won by such exhibits will not count for club prizes unless each member of such partnership is a fully paid member of the club, and no partnership, either collectively or individually can win more than six silver or one gold medal during one season." This was all the business, and a very enjoyable meeting ended with a hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman. I should like to draw the attention of members who have not yet paid their subscription to the fact that it is now due.—John Allan, Sec.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held August 31st, when Mr. Shakespeare gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on moulting and staging for exhibition. He compared the old and new ways of preparing the birds. A great many questions were asked and answered. Mr. Neal, our late secretary, was present, and opened a very keen debate from several points on which the lecturer touched. The secretary tendered his resignation on account of his leaving the neighbourhood, but after several suggestions from Mr. Dann, the chairman, secretary and assistant secretary proposed acting jointly till the annual general meeting, when it is hoped a new secretary will be appointed. It is just possible Mr. Neal, the late secretary, may be induced to take up the work again, as he is coming back to London to live. The annual show will be held in November, when the judge will be Mr. G. Gardner. Several very valuable specials have already been promised, including a very fine shield presented by Mr. Neal. Will members please bear in mind that at our next meeting, on September 28th, we are to have a lecture on Hardbills by Mr. E. S. Lugg, and it is hoped that the meeting will be attended by all who can possibly do so. Several subs. are still outstanding; the secretary would be glad to receive same as early as convenient. Members, do please take in CAGE BIRDS every week, and see what your society is doing, as the last two meetings have been very badly attended.—C. W. Law, Hon. Sec.

I have a Goldfinch Mule in full song and moulting, and he is quite eleven years old, writes Mrs. I. F. Mannsell-Eyre (Congresbury). I think you will agree that this is a little unusual.

Photographs of the National British Bird and Mule Club's outing are now ready, and can be obtained from Mr. Trower, 442, Caledonian Road, at 2s. 6d. each, write Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, the secs.

Kindly announce that I will forward schedules of Bromley show to those who have written for them as soon as I receive them from the printers, writes Mr. A. T. Bellinger, the hon. sec. They ought to have arrived on September 1st.

The Wandsworth F.A. are holding an open cage bird show on December 6th and 7th in a commodious room adjoining the "Spread Eagle," High Street, Wandsworth, Mr. H. Norman judging, writes Mr. W. Lightfoot, the hon. sec.

We have been successful in breeding a really good cock Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrid, which has been seen by several well-known exhibitors, and is now in the possession of a well-known Scottish fancier, write Messrs. Morris and Adams (Ilford).

Young Scotch Fancy Canaries promise to be above the average in quality, writes a Scottish correspondent, and a pleasing feature is that fanciers who have only recently begun the breeding of this particular variety are likely to make a name for themselves.

Many thanks for the delightful surprise I had in seeing my winning Yorkshire at Epsom depicted in your issue of August 19. The honour of winning I share with your valuable paper, which, by its information, enabled me to breed the bird.—(Miss) M. Hall (Brixton Hill, London, S.W.).

Will the person of Grange Town, Yorks, who sent us a postal order for 1s. 3d., but omitted to enclose any letter stating for what purpose it was intended, kindly communicate with us?

We have fixed our old bird show for November 18, and having decided unanimously to accept Mr. Houlton's (St. Helens) apology for his non-attendance at our Nest Feather Show, have secured his services for our Old Bird Show, writes Mr. R. Charleson, hon. sec. of the Leigh and Dist. C.B.S.

The London and Provincial O.S. have been compelled to abandon all ideas of holding an autumn show, as they were unable to obtain a suitable hall in which to hold the show, writes Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec. However, the committee propose giving additional prize-money for members at the National Show to be held in February.

Mrs. Lloyd, writing to us from 130, Haydon's Park Road, Wimbledon, London, S.W., makes the following kind offer: "My husband has the peculiar hobby of breeding tame mice for colour and markings, and as he is always having very pretty but mis-marked ones, he says that if any fanciers' children would like a pair, he will be glad to make them a present of a couple."

A Norwich Canary show will be held at the "Travellers' Rest," Gilesgate Moor, Durham, on September 16th, writes Mr. Geo. Reed, sec., Brandon Colliery. The first prize will be a tea and coffee service valued at £2; the second, a copper kettle; the third and fourth, cases of silver spoons. Each bird is to be benched by 2.30 o'clock, and the entrance fee will be 1s. The judge will be Mr. Wm. Rutherford (Crook).

The entry forms for the Scotch Fancy National Derby Show have been issued, writes Mr. Thos. Smith, the secretary, and members are reminded to fill up the forms correctly, giving the price at which each bird may be sold. Entries are not to be accepted without the price being stated. I should like the completed forms to be sent to me as early as possible, but not later than September 17.

We have just received another silver cup for the best unflighted Norwich Plainhead bred by a member, and hope to have other two trophies for competition before schedule goes to print; also a large number of valuable specials, writes Mr. Wm. Whiteford, sec. of the Lochgelly C.B.S. The show will be held under the patronage of the following clubs: Fife and Kinross N.P.C., Scottish Crested C.C., Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland, Border Fancy C.C., and West of Fife C.B.L.

The "Avicultural Magazine" for September contains an interesting article on the nesting of the Sprosser, by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A.; another on Laughing Kingfishers, by Mrs. K. Currey, and one by Mr. Hubert D. Astley, M.A., F.Z.S., on the nesting of the Rose-breasted Grosbeak. Miss Ivens contributes some "Notes of Birds and Aviculture in Portugal," and under the heading of "Practical Bird-keeping," Mr. S. M. Townsend writes on the subject of Tanagers and their treatment in captivity.

We shall be pleased to hear from any brother secretaries who will assist us to make our show as widely known as possible by accepting a bill and displaying it as prominently as possible—we suggest at their place of meeting—in return for which we will gladly do likewise, write Messrs. King and Joiner, 80, Stubbington Av., Portsmouth, secs. of the Portsmouth C.B.S. We venture to say that some little good may result to both by an extra entry or so. We ask that they will mention CAGE BIRDS when applying.

The South Birmingham O.S. is still making good and rapid progress, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, the secretary, and it is to be hoped that the members will again turn up in their usual good numbers for the September meeting, as business requires their best attention. Our treasurer has granted us the large show room for December 26 (Boxing Day) for our members' show, and many have expressed a wish that the show should be open to all fanciers residing in Greater Birmingham—a grand idea if we can see it through.

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. Geo. Harland (Hull), that I have to inform the readers of CAGE BIRDS of the serious illness of our dear friend and brother fancier, Mr. Jesse Calam, of Hull (judge). For some time he has not been feeling in the best of health, and in consequence he paid a visit to Holme on Spalding Moor (his native place) and also to Harrogate; but I am sorry to say he did not derive any benefit from the change, and unfortunately on Friday, August 31st, he broke a blood vessel, since which time he has been confined to his bed. I am sure that those with whom he has come into contact, and also his many friends, fanciers in general, will wish him a speedy recovery, and will hope that he may soon be amongst us again.

Welsh Cage Bird Club.

The committee will meet on Saturday, Sept. 9, and not on the 16th, as stated in last week's issue, the 16th not being convenient for Mr. Brown and others, writes Mr. D. H. Tedstone.

Midland Counties Y.C.C.

A silver challenge cup, value five guineas, for most points at the six shows, in champion section, is to be competed for, to be won three times in all for complete possession, not necessarily successively, write Messrs. Beck and Andrews, secs. of the Midland Counties Y.C.C. Also a cup value two guineas in novice section for most points at the four shows, to be won outright; and a silver medal for runner-up in each section.

We have decided to hold a cage bird, etc., show at Llanrwst in November, and I should be glad to hear from anyone who is willing to subscribe to it or give specials for any of the classes, writes Mr. J. Kershaw, sec. of the Llanrwst Show, Watling Street, Llanrwst, N. Wales.

A great boon to the Fancy is to know where to get reliable seed. We draw our readers' attention to the special advertisement in this issue of Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co., who cater so well for the Fancy that country buyers are, we are informed, almost on an equal footing with the London fancier for getting their supplies. Mr. W. A. Rudd is a practical bird-seed specialist with 25 years' experience, and has kept and bred nearly every kind of British and foreign bird. He has made a special study of their requirements, so that keepers of all kinds of birds can obtain from this firm just the right kind of goods they require. The prices quoted are most reasonable, and fanciers who find any difficulty in obtaining good seed should send this firm a trial order.

Protection of Birds in Lancashire

An Order was published recently in the "London Gazette," under date September 1st, in regard to the protection of wild birds in Lancashire, says "The Times." The close time is extended so as to be between the last day of February and September 1st in any year, except in the case of Wild Duck, Snipe, and Woodcock. A list is given of species added to the schedule of the Act of 1880 and of certain areas in which birds are protected during the whole of the year. The following birds are to be protected throughout the year:—Buzzard (all species), Peregrine Falcon, Goldfinch, Harrier (all species), Hobby, Kestrel, Kingfisher, Kite, Lapwing (Peewit or Green Plover), Merlin, Owl (all species), Raven, Woodpecker (all species). Orders in regard to the taking or destroying of eggs are also published.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contributor written on postcards. Competitors must be under tion; one star the runners-up.

*A Curious Nesting Place.

A pair of Water Wagtails built their nest last July among the flower pots which stood on an old flue in my father's greenhouse, and reared two lots of young, five in each nest. Although my father used to go in every day to water the plants, they did not take the least notice of him, and were not a bit afraid, going in and out as they liked.—William Chas. Fox (age 12), Skeffington, Leicester.

*The Robin's Invitation.

There came to my window,
One morning in spring,
A sweet little Robin;
He came there to sing;
And the tune that he sang
Was prettier far
Than ever I heard
On a flute or guitar.
He raised his light wings
To soar far away,
Then, resting a moment,
Seemed sweetly to say:
"O, happy, how happy,
This world seems to be;
Up, up, little girl,
And be happy with me."

A Redpoll Pensioner.

My uncle has a Redpoll, that got out one day, and we all thought it was lost, as it flew away over the top of our house. But we were surprised when it came back at night; it flew right in the window, and right into its cage, both the window and the door of its cage being open. It got out again one night when my uncle was cleaning his cage. The cage was hung out all night, and I was told to watch for it next day. But I never saw it all day, so I thought it was lost. But at about half-past six that night, after my uncle had finished his work, he went to look at his birds, and, judge his surprise to see his Redpoll sitting in its cage, which was still hanging outside the window. My uncle says that his little Redpoll is a pensioner now.—Robert Kilpatrick (age 12), c.o. Mr. H. Rose, W. High Street, Buckhaven.

The Goldfinch.

The proper caging, feeding and moulting of the species, together with some observations on colour-feeding, exhibiting, and hybrid breeding.

By GEO. H. GROOCOCK (Leicester).

In choosing the Goldfinch as my subject I do so because this bird is the favourite Britisher of myself and of many other people. It is too well known to need description, for everyone knows Goldie's beautiful crimson face, his brilliant golden wing-bars, and his white buttons. It has many attractive features, among them being a pretty and pleasing song, which is not at all shrill or piercing. Also, so long as it is kept in good health, a cock Goldfinch can always be depended on for plenty of singing. It is very tame and confiding once it has become used to captivity (which is not long in the cases of most specimens), and makes a most charming pet.

A Goldfinch before its first moult, i.e., while still in its nest feather, lacks the crimson blaze, white cheeks, black head and tanned chest of the adult bird. Instead, its chest is spotted, and its head is greyish in colour. They are therefore known as Greypates.

How and Where the Nests are Made.

The species is found in all parts of England. The nest is built in the trees of the orchards, the apple, pear, and plum being particularly favoured, and also in the elm, ash, and poplar. The Goldfinches which are bred in pear trees are supposed to be the largest of the British Goldfinches; but how far this is true I do not know. The term "peartree" is now applied to birds which are above the ordinary size, no matter where they have been bred.

Goldfinches usually begin their nesting operations in May. The nest, in the construction of which the Goldfinch is a past master, is made of such things as fine roots and stalks interwoven with wool, moss, and the down of dandelion heads. Three or four eggs are laid, and these are of a bluish colour, with little spots of red.

We often hear of Cheveral and Peathroat Goldfinches. The latter has a small patch of white in the middle of the blaze under the lower mandible, generally about the size and shape of a pea; hence its name. A Cheveral has this patch of white extending right through the underblaze, completely cutting it in two.

Never choose one of these for exhibition purposes, because the present standard registers this as a fault. It says: "Blaze: free from black stripes or breaks." There is one case at least known of a Peathroat getting first in a class of seventeen, but I should never trouble with one for show.

How to Sex Goldies.

Many people find a great difficulty in sexing Goldfinches. But there are many different points which can be noticed, and if all are looked for, a person can hardly go wrong. First, a cock always has a cheekier appearance, a bolder eye, and a more jaunty manner than the hen. His colours are always of greater depth and brilliancy than those of the hen, and his markings are more distinct with a clearer outline. The beak of a cock bird is longer and thicker at the root than the hen's, and he has a flatter skull and a snakier head.

The Sex Differences in the Heads of Goldfinches.

A very good sign in a full-coloured Finch is the blaze; in the cock this extends right to the back of the eye, while in the hen it only goes to the middle of the eye. This applies particularly to the under-blaze. The sketch shows the heads of a typical cock and a typical hen.

Also the colour at the root of the beak and going back to the eye is a deep black in the case of the cock, but a greyish brown in a hen.

A very good test, too, is the shoulder butt. Open the wings, and examine the shoulders or wing butts. If the butts are pure black, the bird is a cock; if brown, or black mixed with brown, it is a hen. Sometimes the butts of a cock are of a greenish, metallic shade instead of black. Blow up the feathers on the breast, and notice the broad part of the tan feathers, and in the cocks you will find that one or two are a distinct yellow in colour. Open the wing, and look amongst the white feathers underneath the shoulder. If the bird is a cock you will find there is a noticeable yellow tinge.

The best way, however, to get used to all the differences between the sexes is to compare a cock and a hen side by side. Of course, all these signs are not infallible. For instance, there are hens that have wing butts as black as those of a cock. But if all these signs be combined you cannot go wrong very easily.

How to Hand-rear the Species.

The Goldfinch in a state of freedom feeds on the seeds of the thistle, dandelion, groundsel, plantain, poppy, and other sorts of wild seeds. It is not, therefore, an easy matter to hand-rear nestlings, for they are very tender and delicate. One method is as follows:—With some boiled bread and milk mix a little Canary seed ground to powder, and a pinch or two of thistle seed. Give this and a little soaked biscuit every two hours until the birds are five weeks old. Then gradually wean them on to a diet of teazle, hemp, Canary seeds, etc. The birds should be taken when about ten days old. If the eggs are procured and put under a sitting hen Canary, she will bring them up as her own.

The Goldfinch is caught either with limed twigs baited with thistleheads, or by means of a net. A good call bird must be used, and frequently Goldfinch-Canary Mules having the pure Goldfinch song will be found useful for this.

Many people find it hard to keep fresh-caught Goldfinches alive, but it is not so difficult if one goes about it in the right way. The birds should be caged several together, and it is a good thing to put an old Finch with them in order that they may find the seed and water the more quickly. The cage used should be a store cage—i.e., a long cage of good depth but not too high, say seven inches. The top should be made of canvas to prevent the birds from hurting themselves by flying up when anyone goes near. The birds should be left in a quiet spot for a few days, and should only be approached for feeding purposes. The food and water vessels should be inside the cage, though it is not a bad plan to put them outside as well.

Where a Great Mistake is Made.

A great mistake that many people make is to think that the only food fresh-caught Goldfinches need is crushed hemp. The seed they seem to eat first and like most is inga and teazle; therefore, give them plenty of these at first. Besides, these give maw seed and cracked hemp (freshly cracked each day), and a little linseed and whole hemp. The cracked hemp should be kept in a separate vessel; then what is not eaten can be taken out each day. Do not give the food in deep vessels—only shallow ones.

Besides having the seed in vessels it is as well to put some on the bottom of the cage also, as the birds seem then to find it more quickly. Any wild seeds that can be obtained are a help, but they are not absolutely necessary, except in the case of birds which refuse the other seeds. Then such as thistle heads, knap weed, sow thistle, seeding groundsel, etc., come in most useful. If the birds are caught during a spell of wet weather, it is best to give them some soaked seed in addition to the other.

Treatment for "Thick" Birds.

When you have a bird "looking thick," try what Mr. Weston advises, viz., a dose of sulphate of soda—as much as will lie on a shilling dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Repeat (but on half strength, and with the addition of half a teaspoonful of brandy) after a day's interval on plain water.

When the birds are feeding well on the seed, they must be weaned from the inga. Reduce the amount of inga a bit each day. They can then be caged separately. I have always found a fair-sized cage the best at this stage, one of the box type. Do not use the little hop cages, for the birds break more feathers in them than in larger ones. They now want to be put on to a proper diet. I have always found Goldfinches rather slow at taking to whole hemp seed, and I generally force them to eat it by keeping other seed away for an hour or two in the morning. They soon eat it then, and once they start doing so they are extremely fond of it.

A Chat on Colour-Feeding.

By F. J. WEAVER (Wolverhampton.)

A lecture delivered before the Wolverhampton C.B.S. on August 17th.

I have great pleasure in giving this lecture to you. I wish to give you the main points only of a consideration of the question of colour-feeding. You all know what helps to make a real good bird for the present-day show bench; I am referring to colour; for even when a real "stormer" is patchy in colour it is put down. Do try above all things to get your bird even in colour. Day after day you hear the same old cry "moulting and colour-feeding are really a nuisance"; and such talk poisons the minds of many would-be fanciers. Not only are moulting and colour-feeding said to be a nuisance, but some say the latter is a very expensive matter. Now I think such talk is all bosh.

"Cramming" Unnecessary.

There is a big difference between colour-feeding and cramming. For instance, I feed over sixty birds every year, and I never use more than 5lbs. of cold and 1lb. of hot pepper; so you see there is no expense worth speaking of. I don't believe in giving a ¼-lb. per bird as some fanciers say you should.

I take 4lbs. of cold and ¾-lb. of hot pepper and mix them well together; then I rub it through a sieve so as to smash up the small lumps, because otherwise the birds would only throw them out when they came across them. I add olive oil according to the state of the colour food; if it is of a dry nature I add 1oz. of olive oil to every pound. I also add 2oz. of castor sugar to every pound. When I have mixed the feed as stated I place it in earthenware jars, and keep it there—not in tins—until I want to use it.

Nearly every year I have heard of difficulties with regard to young birds and colour-feeding. The fanciers get their birds on to hard seed as soon as possible, stop giving the egg food, and then when the birds reach the age of eight or nine weeks put them back again on egg food with a little colour in it. Naturally the birds gorge it, and this causes their bowels to become loose, and the birds mope. It is better, let me tell you, to keep your birds on egg all the time. But for looseness of the bowels I have always found that a little ground cuttle-fish bone in the egg food is a good thing; and if this does not act I give a little gentian, though I don't think for a moment that gentian is a good thing for the liver. Do not hang cuttle-fish bone in your cages when moulting is in progress, as it not only collects dust, but is affected by the smell of the excreta, and what is worse than a bad smell for anything? So that you can with my method get a bird on to colour without relaxing the bowels.

The Main Point to Remember.

The main point to remember is the proper mixing of the colour food with the egg food so as to get the best colour. I take the quantity I want for all my birds, put it into a bowl, and with my clean hands I pinch the colour food well into the egg food, and leave until next morning.

After I have done breeding with my stock I take the old birds and place them in my stock cages (which run about 18 inches by 12 inches by 9 inches) for a rest. I get some of the fat off them by this means. All birds should be handled after breeding to see what state they are in before moulting begins; then when you have got them right, if anything was wrong, they will go through the moult quicker; you should, in fact, have some of the birds ready for the show bench the last week in September.

After the fat is off these old birds I start them on colour-feed the same way I do the young—merely a tint first, gradually raising the strength. What for? Well, I will tell you. Some fanciers take them right out of the breeding cage and start them on strong food; but what is the consequence? They fall sick, and are a long time in starting the moult.

Some of you may think "well, why does he say single cages instead of flights?" I have always found my birds moult better by themselves, and I know that moulted thus they cannot be plucked. Again, you may think he hasn't got sixty cages in which to moult all his birds separately? No; but my experience teaches me to know a likely bird when I see it, and the "Scraps" I naturally put all together in a flight.

But there is one thing I do strongly protest against, and that is the taking off the seed during the colour-feeding process. Some birds eat more than others, so by all means give the birds both seed and colour, and you will see that they will eat them both like a horse does hay and corn.

How the Egg-food is Mixed.

Some of you may wonder how I mix my egg food. I have already told you I have sixty birds to feed. I simply cut a 1in. thick round of bread, and put to one egg; I add 5 teaspoonsful of colour food and mix as before mentioned. I give only half a teaspoonful to each per day, no more. So you see that the birds are not crammed with it.

What benefit do I get from hot pepper? Well, I think hot is more fixing; when you give the cold pepper by itself the excreta is red and sloppy, and when the hot is added it is normal. All these little things, of course, you must study. Which do I prefer to give, linseed or linseed meal? The latter, of course, as when you give the seed you have to chance whether they eat it or not, whereas if you give a piled-up teaspoonful of linseed meal in the egg food they are obliged to eat it. I must be drawing to a close now, but there is one thing more I have to bring before you, and that is the darkening down of the birds during the moult. When I say darkening down I don't mean you should put a bag over the window, or draw down the blind so as to block out the light. No; far from it; I mean darkening down by means of yellow muslin curtains. This you will find keeps off the strong rays of the sun, prevents the birds from becoming excited, and enables them to eat their seed and colour-food better. Last of all, it keeps off the dirt. I keep the curtains closed till I get home to tea, and I open them till dark, so that the birds can exercise. I hope, in conclusion, that I have made it clear that colour-feeding is not an enormous expense or task, nor do the birds require an enormous amount of feed. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Two Border Fancies.

Border Fancier.—These birds have a difficulty in breaking away with the moult. Keep them fairly warm, and in an equable temperature, and cover the cages over for a time until the moult is well under way, or if it goes slowly after starting keep the cover on until the feathers cease dropping. For the next fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut daily, and every second day slightly dust it with flowers of sulphur and sprinkle it with maw seed. On the alternating days when sulphur is omitted put two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkle it with maw. Give a morsel of ripe banana two or three times a week, and a green plantain stalk about as often. For staple diet keep a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape accessible. Let this dietary suffice for the time named. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid. Arrange it to give the potash mixture on the days when not giving sulphur. You would doubtless find the Nutshell booklet on the Border Fancy of much service.

Canaries in India.

F. H. Coffe.—I am eorry I cannot go fully into all details of breeding, so I hope you will find much of the general information you need in the books. Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries," House's "Canary Manual," and "Our Canaries" are the most generally useful. No doubt, if judiciously managed, English Canaries will thrive well in India. Your idea of getting the birds acclimatised before the hot season is very good, hut to confine them in box cages is scarcely the way to do it. By keeping them in the covered verandah well protected from the sun, also protecting cages from draughts, I think you would do better to use cages with wired fronts and ends, and solid wood only for top, bottom, and back. When the hot season is in full swing, transfer birds to open wire cages of the "Jerome" type (see any large English dealer's catalogue). The latter type of cage, or something similar to the Crystal Palace type shown in "Our Canaries," would also form excellent flights for the young birds, and he far more healthful than box cages. If you are in a mosquito district it would also be a good plan to so arrange the cages that you can cover the lot with a mosquito net from sundown until next morning. Get the birds out as soon as possible after their first moult, and adhere to sound, healthy yearling birds for stock to commence with, and thus gradually get a strain of birds quite inured to your climate. You would also probably do well to begin mating up if the birds are in the proper conditiou about the beginning of February, but on this point be guided by the experiences of the first season or two. Re your proposed method of feeding; you should be quite sparing in the use of such seeds as niga, rape, and gingelly, as you term it; and linseed I should utterly eschew. Egg, too, I should try to avoid entirely, and in any case limit its use to a minimum. I would suggest giving as a staple food a mixture of two parts canary and a half-part each cumbu and korra, gradually doubling the proportion of the two latter as the birds get accustomed to the change, with a pinch of rape and a few grains of swollen rice and crushed biscuit occasionally, and green food or banana freely. To this add during the breeding season a regular supply of crushed plain dry biscuit, ripe banana, green food, and a saucer of white millet scalded until soft and made into a crumbly mass with a sufficient quantity of crushed grain or cholum. You might try one or two pairs on the orthodox egg and biscuit diet if you wish, but, personally, I have far greater confidence in the success of the above system in your climate. You could get a bird organ the same as is used to teach Rollers to sing for tutoring the Yorkshires, though these birds are not usually trained for singing in this country. Have replied separately re seeds.

Indian Seeds.

F. H. G.—I think several of the seeds might be very profitably used for feeding Canaries and seed-eating birds in a hot climate such as yours, where rich, oily seeds are far better omitted from the regular dietary. Most of these seeds and their names, as you employ, are practically unknown here. You say you believe cumbu is used freely at home. If you mean used freely in this country it certainly is not. It was recently introduced to English fanciers under a fancy name as a new discovery for the bird-keeper's larder. Its value I rate about the same as millet, and in your country it might form a regular portion of the diet. The virtues of korra I should say are practically the same, and it might be used in about equal proportions with cumbu. Cholum crushed and scalded until soft might form a very useful soft food as a change, but these seeds and safflower are of little or no use for small birds, Gingelly reminds me very strongly of the seed known here as sesame, and I am of opinion the latter seed is what you would call white gingelly. Tbey are in no sense hot to the taste. You might give a pinch of these seeds occasionally as a treat in the same way as we would use hemp. Maw seed may either be given separately as a treat, or added to any soft food as a kind of appetiser. You could safely use it in this way out there. I do not know whether the seed you call Indian rape is really rape or something else. Better send us a sample for inspection.

Growth Near Eye (Foam Queen II.).—The cause of swollen appearance of the eye is practically certain to be a small tumour in the orbital cavity. I cannot advise you to attempt any interference, but if the bird is a valuable one your best course is to ask a veterinary surgeon to operate and remove it. It is often quite a simple operation, and the tumour very easily removed; but, still, in these matters for an amateur to interfere, or anyone to start on the job without the necessary anatomical knowledge and technical skill to meet any contingency that turns up unexpectedly, is the height of folly. No other treatment than that suggested is likely to be of any use.

Judging Crests (Foam Queen I.).—It is certainly wrong to suggest as your friend does that mere size of crest is everything in judging these birds. If a crest is full of splits, and has little or no radiation, and a large bare centre, and so on, it matters not how much it exceeds the circumference of a penny, or how far it extends beyond the beak or over the eyes, it would stand very little chance in competition with a bird with a moderate sized crest which was perfect in shape and radiation. Size of crest is certainly most desirable, but there must be proper shape, radiation, droop, etc., with it to make a very successful show bird. Get Part XIII. of "Our Canaries" to see all that a perfect crest should be.

Weak on Legs (B. Y.).—The bird is probably a weakling. Keep in a comfortable and well aired place out of reach of draughts, but with plenty of fresh, pure air, and in a moderate sized cage. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of ripe banana. On the alternate days give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazie, inga, and broken groats, and about three times a week a spray of green food. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the wires for it to peck at. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week, then 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight or so.

Birds Dying (W.N.).—See reply to "C. Bland" in last issue, under heading "What Disease?" If another death occurs soon also send body on to Mr. Yates, as per rules under post-mortem, and thus settle any doubt as to cause of death. I think it most likely that the deaths are due to septic fever, so that whilst awaiting a post mortem announcement you would be well advised to get the "Nutshell" booklet on "Disinfection" and Dr. Clarke's brochure on "Septic Fever," and adopt all the necessary precautions to cope with this disease. You might give a dose of 20 drops of whisky and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the water for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Also give a morsel of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight.

Canaries for Singing (Robin).—If you want birds for singing pure and simple a trained Roller is quite the best you could have, and a so-called Seifert or St. Andreasberg would most likely give the best satisfaction. The other varieties of Canary yon name, though possessing an ordinary type of song similar to any common Canary you may have heard, are not bred specially for singing abilities. Their most valued points are shape, colour, size, etc., etc., so that it is purely a matter of taste which you considered best. You should get the parts of "Our Canaries" wherein you would find excellent coloured plates of every breed, and could then suit your own choice. The prices of these breeds you can gather from our advert. columns, which will soon be filled with hundreds of offers. The Rollers vary from about 10s. 6d. upwards for fairly good performers. The most proficient singers command the higher prices in this variety. Of cheap handbooks you cannot do better than get House's "Manual" or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and the "Nutshell" booklets on "The Canary" and "The Roller Canary." For prices see inset in this column. British bird query should have been on a separate sheet; see Mr. Weston's column for reply next week.

Yorkshire Hoarse (Anxious).—As the bird is not yet over the moult the hoarseness may be quite natural and of no serious import at all. The voice is always more or less hoarse for a time when the bird is just resuming its song after moulting, but this gradually disappears. But as there appears a history of asthma treat as follows for a fortnight: Staple diet, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the alternating days give a pinch of mixed seeds, and on each of the remaining days a spray of green stuff or morsel of banana. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as well cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash for three days, and every second day afterwards for a fortnight 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. See that it is not exposed to any draughts.

Canary Eating Feathers (West Ham).—Its cessation of song for so long a period seems to point to something being wrong with the general management. You would do well to look up these replies for a few weeks past, or get one of our handbooks, or the No. 5 Nutshell booklet, and look into this matter. See inset for list of books. Also thoroughly examine the cage to see if red mites are the cause, and if these pests are found deal with them as advised to "Red Mite" on August 19th. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a staple diet of plain Canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a green plantain stalk, and on the alternate days three times a week for one week only give a morsel of bread and milk with a light dusting of flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed, and on two other days a morsel of ripe banana. Also give a mealworm a day for a fortnight, if available. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day for a week. A fortnight of this treatment should set matters right, but you must not expect tho bird to sing now until after moulting.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

The appended replies have been kindly supplied by Mr. H. J. Fulljames in the absence of Mr. Weston on holiday.

Fresh Caught Finches.

R. H.—You should remember that newly caught birds have been living upon semi-ripe and sometimes rain sodden seeds, and they must not be expected to thrive if suddenly put upon hard dry seed. Almost any kind of seed—canary, rape, charlock, etc., may be soaked in water (changed daily) until almost sprouting, then rubbed dry in a cloth before being offered to the birds. A tin of the same in a dry state should also be kept in the cage, and the birds will soon accustom themselves to it. Fresh gathered wild seeds, with some green stuff, chickweed, groundsel, etc., must also be given. The subsequent treatment and feeding of all the birds you mention are fully described in our "Nutshells," 2d. each, or post free 2½d., and one of these for each bird you keep will save you an immensity of trouble. The bird you mention is evidently a Corn Bunting. It is very considerably larger than a Linnet. When freshly caught it requires soaked or wild seed as above, and a mealworm or two; for subsequent treatment of this or any Bunting see answer to "Foam Queen."

"Spotted Sparrows" (J.S.).—Like yourself, I have never seen a "Spotted Sparrow." If you will describe the plumage of the bird to which you have given this name I will try to name it for you.

Identity of Seed (Curious).—The seed-head you send is of the Spear Plum-thistle (Cnicus lanceolatus), a biennial plant. This is the plant of which the wild Goldfinches are so fond, and its seeds form a valuable food for any Finch, especially Goldfinches.

Birds and an Aviary (W. B.).—Your aviary is fairly fully stocked and would scarcely accommodate many more birds with comfort. The freshly caught Chaffinch should be kept in the box cage until it settles down to cage life. When you ultimately turn him into the aviary it will be well to watch him. Chaffinches are sometimes spiteful with the smaller Finches. You probably know that the Chaffinch is somewhat of an insectivorous bird, and requires more than a plain seed diet. You will find the "Nutshell" on the species (No. 13) very helpful.

Breeding Linnets (C.E.N.).—Yes, Linnets may be bred in an ordinary breeding cage, but are scarcely worth the trouble. All nestling Finches are fed by their parents largely upon live insects, and this renders the old birds somewhat difficult to cater for when they have young in a cage. The nest is built of moss and grass, and lined with hair, feathers and wool, and you should supply material accordingly. It will be as well to screen the nest box with a bunch of furze or something. The feeding of Linnets in captivity is very fully described in the Nutshell you mention, and you should certainly get it. Your present feeding is quite good for the time of year.

Sex of Snow Bunting ("Foam Queen").—The hen Snow Bunting is a considerably smaller bird than the cock, her total length from tip of beak to end of tail feathers rarely exceeding six inches, while the cock is fully an inch longer. In breeding plumage the cock has white wing coverts; the wing coverts of the hen at the same time are only tipped with white. The hen is never so black as the male bird, and her whites are never so pure. The wing of the cock bird is nearly five inches long, and of the hen scarcely four inches. Buntings require only Canary seed as a staple food, some will eat also crusbed oats and a little hemp, and they should always be offered these. If they will eat some insectivorous mixture they will be the better for it, and a few mealworms should be given each day.

Breeding Mealworms ("Foam Queen").—Unless you have a great many birds it is better to buy these than to take the trouble of breeding them. They may be purchased from any of the several advertisers in our columns. If you decide to breed them, procure a biscuit tin or wooden box, the latter for preference; nearly fill this with old sacking, bits of woollen rag, etc., broken dog biscuits, sharps or any kind of meal; then turn in some mealworms, say a pint, shut down the lid (which should, of course, be ventilated either by small holes or larger ones covered with perforated zinc), put the box in a dry and moderately warm place, and forget all about it for some months. The "worms" will change into beetles in due course, the beetles will lay eggs, and your stock will be multiplied.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Young Cockatiels.

Amateur.—You will be able to sex the young Cockatiels as soon as the moult sets in, till which period both sexes are similar in plumage to their mother. They can be removed from their parents as soon as they are able to fend for themselves, but unless their parents begin to bully them, or the young birds interfere with their parents' nesting. It is not a necessity to remove them. Common Quails are plain brown birds; the male has a few white facial markings. The male of the Chinese Painted Quail is quite handsome with his black and white facial markings, ruddy chocolate, and blue body and wing areas; the hen is brown. Quails are improbable breeders unless they have a grass run. A pair of Diamond or Peaceful Doves should breed with you, and would not interfere with your Finches. The Chinese Quails are worth keeping even if they do not breed.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

F. C. Matell.—Give the bird one dose Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water—this to form the drinking water for the day, and after a week's interval repeat the dose. On intermediate days add half-teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food to the daily supply of drinking water. While the sores remain, cleanse them daily with the warm water and Condy's Fluid, and also anoint with a little healing antiseptic ointment, obtainable from your chemist. Diet: Seed mixture (two parts each canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, dari, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds—well mix together), ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. I expect improper feeding in your absence has caused irritation, and possibly a little inflammation round the organ, which the above treatment should allay. If there is no improvement in, say, fourteen days, repeat query with fullest details.

Cockatoo in Poor Plumage.

Hunter.—The booklet sent you will help you as to general treatment, and you will only need to add a little maize to the mixture there advised to make it fully meet your case. For a month at least regularly colour its drinking water (use a crock or glass drinker when giving drugs) with Allan and Hanbury's Byno-phosphates, and once a week, in lieu of the above, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the water. Also do not give much bread and butter, but if the bird will take it so, lightly dust the buttered surface with flowers of sulphur, or bread or biscuit damped with warm water and similarly dusted, will certainly help at this juncture. Also spray the bird twice weekly with quassia solution (using a mist sprayer); this will make plumage distasteful to the bird, and also check parasites if there are any. In addition to its seed mixture and the items mentioned above, the bird can have ripe fruit, green food, nuts, and plain biscuits daily. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in its cage.

Swelling on Tongue.

E. Frost.—If the swelling on the tongue comes to a head and discharges, it will soon heal afterwards, but if there is no discharge after swelling appears ripe, you had better let your local vet. lance it for you. You must keep the bird's bowels moving freely, not watery loose, by giving a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water—once or twice a week, according to the condition of the voidings, which should not remain watery loose. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and with a camel-hair brush wipe out the bird's mouth twice daily, well cleansing the brush after each operation. If the bird gets at all weak, add two or three drops of brandy to the daily supply of drinking water, but this should not be continuous. If the swelling does not yield to above treatment you had better let a vet. see it, as it may require cutting out to save the bird's life; however, if there are any signs of a white head showing, you can hope that it will soon become ripe and empty itself. You must continue to use the honey and borax till all signs of soreness or inflammation have disappeared. Our Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager, would help you as to general treatment.

Aviary and Birds.

E. A. M.—At the present time you cannot do better than leave the shed as it is, merely examining the building well for holes by which birds might escape. You must cover up the front glass with wire-netting, and I should advise match boarding the roof under the slates. The back wall must be covered with twiggy branches, various nesting receptacles being hung behind same; and stand about at suitable intervals dead spruce firs, planted in tubs; also suspend husks and nest boxes from the roof. Useful nesting receptacles are Hartz travelling cages with the fittings removed and a bar cut away for the birds to get in and out; rush nests, coco-nut husks, coco-nut shell nests, and square boxes (about 6-in.), with a round hole cut in for entrance. Shallow porcelain photographic dishes (whole-plate) make excellent baths. Cover the floor with three or four inches of gritty sand, which can be raked over at intervals and renewed as required. Suspend a box about 2 ft. square by 4 in. deep from the roof with wire, and place food vessels in this; it will not only keep the aviary tidy, but be difficult of access to mice if they find an entrance. You can include pairs of the following: Green and Common Avadavats, Orange-cheek, Grey, St. Helena, and Golden-breasted Waxbills; Grey and Green Singing Finches; Ruficauda, Long-tailed, and Masked Grassfinches; Cuban, Bib, Spice, Zebra, Gouldian,

Aurora. Ribbon, Red-headed, Lavender, Jacarini, Fire, Striated, Alario, and Parrot Finches; Bronze, Three-coloured, White-headed, Black-headed, and Magpie Mannikins (Nuns); Cordon Bleus, Bengalese, Silverbills, White Java Sparrows, Indigo Buntings, Combassous, Paradise Whydahs, and Madagascar Weavers. You have accommodation for 40 pairs of above. The main diet is seed. You should get from our manager, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d. post free, and Nutshell Booklets Nos. 6, 14, 16, and 20, 2½d. each, post free.

Mealworms for Cardinals (A. S.).—While these birds will do well for a good period without live insects providing they get greenfood, ripe fruit, and seed, yet they are much better for an occasional insect or so. Give the bird, say, three mealworms daily, or during the summer you should be able to capture sufficient smooth caterpillars, flies, beetles, and spiders for it, falling back on the mealworms for winter use.

Birds for Aviary (Freda).—As it is now so late in the year I should not turn out any more birds till spring, but I think you may risk the little Quails if you put them outside at once. Cover the floor of right shelter with three inches of sand; and it would be well to tack felt over half the flight for the winter months only, or you might permanently cover in the 5 ft. of roof adjoining shelter. I should advise Zebra Finches, Java Sparrows, Silverbills, Green Singing Finches, and a pair of Diamond Doves, and you could add Madagascar and Red-billied Weavers for colour effect; but you must not put out, and leave out, newly-imported birds at this time of year.

Garden Aviary (Claude).—It will be safest to get your aviary properly prepared, and not to put the birds outside till next May—this will give you ample time to plant the flight and to get the plants established. Laurel, box, euonymus, and fir, with such creepers as Rambler rose, hops, wild clematis, etc. It will be better not to put in more than 10 pairs the size of a Norwich Canary, or 15 pairs about the size of Waxbills. As regards the shelter, it must be well lighted, and the side facing the flight should be a board partition with an open doorway about 1½ ft. wide by 5 ft. in the middle of same.

Wintering Birds in Conservatory (A. F. Hall).—So long as you do not keep up too moist an atmosphere for plants, and get rid of draught, the birds should do well, and a Clark's syphon gas stove should give ample heat, and also some light for the birds during the night and dark mornings and evenings. It will be necessary to cover up part of the glass roof temporarily, and one of the sides, as the birds must have some part they can go to that is not all glass for shelter. You can either screw boards up inside, or tack roofing felt outside the glass. If you sent me rough plan and sketch of the conservatory, and state whether they are to fly loose or to be confined in cages, I could give you clearer advice. A night temperature of 50 degrees Fahr., rising by degrees to 60 degrees, would suffice. Size and height of house must be sent to stove makers, who will then supply a suitable size. Do not encourage winter breeding. Let Parrot Finches fly with the rest.

Green Singing Finches (Rita).—The principal period during which birds sing is during the breeding season. Yours are evidently young birds, and I conclude they, or rather the cock, will sing freely enough next spring, if not before. I take them to be Green Singing Finches, but there are so many Serins which closely resemble each other that it is impossible to state definitely, as more than one species of Serin are sold as Green Singing Finches. In addition to seed you should give them green food and a piece of apple occasionally; also give a teaspoonful of British Finch seed mixture two or three times a week. If you have a cock it will sing next spring, if not before. Hope I've made all clear.

What Bird? (A. M. B.).—Your bird is evidently one of the Babbler Thrushes, but it calls for a little research, and I will give you a definite reply next week. It needs much care in keeping widely-separated species together in cages, and I think it would agree with a Bulbul, but there is so much individualism with such birds, even of the same species, that you must keep them under pretty close observation if they become combative. If there is very much disparity as to size they had better not be put together, and much depends on the size of the cage.

Amazon and Grey Parrot (T. Williams).—You have a Cuban Amazon, and so far as my experience goes they do not talk much; at the same time, I am of the opinion that all Amazons should talk, and your bird will doubtless respond to training and kindness. Keep it where it will hear conversation, also talk to it and teach it by constant repetition. Diet: Seed mixture—canary and millet seeds two parts each, hemp, maize, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, one part each—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, and water ad. lib. for drinking and bathing. Some Amazons scream, but if yours does not already do so it should continue a non-screamer. As regards the Grey Parrot, it is a better talker and more teachable, but you had better get our Nutshell booklet, 2½d. post free from our manager, on this bird. It will give you full and concise directions as to treatment, etc., of adult and young birds; then repeat query on any doubtful point.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Club Notices (A. H. C. Legg and others).—Your notices of meetings reached us too late for insertion in our last week's issue. See the special note on page 127 of that and previous issues.

Coloured Plates, etc. ("Robin").—We shall be pleased to let you have a list of prices, etc., of our coloured plates, on receipt of your name and address.

Gone Astray (R. Charleson).—We cannot trace having received the postcard. Are you sure you addressed it correctly?

Newspaper Cuttings (S. T., A.W., and others).—Thanks for the cuttings sent.

Bird-catching (A. T. L.).—We could not publish your letter as sent, it being too much of the nature of an advertisement. No doubt you will get some replies if you advertise your wishes in our columns.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

A most important meeting should have been held at headquarters on August 24th, but for some reason none of the members turned up, hence the schedule for the ensuing year could not be arranged; neither could the season's specials be allotted. The show season is close at hand, but there are members who have not yet paid their subscriptions, viz., 5s., although the rule distinctly states they shall be paid on or before August 31st in each year. Reference has been made to this matter on numerous occasions, and notice is hereby given that unless same is received by the 12th inst. names will not be included in the list sent out to the societies who have been granted the patronage; neither will syllabuses or specials cards be sent; enough postage having already been expended. The Society was formed to be run on business lines, and not as a philanthropic institution. If not continuing membership, a post-card intimating the fact would be appreciated.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec., 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held August 29th, Mr. J. Taylor (President) in chair. Mr. B. Wilman proposed, and Mr. J. Mitchell seconded, that Morecambe be selected for the Society's annual outing on September 23rd. Will all members desirous of making the journey kindly send in their names, so that proper arrangements may be made for the journey? Return fare, 2s. 3d. Specials for best cock bird and best hen at each of our old bird shows were promised by Messrs. Wilman, Taylor, and Gelder. Arrangements were made in connection with the winter syllabus. Three of the lectures will be given by members, and it is hoped all will do their best to be present on these occasions. The subjects include "Washing and Staging for Exhibition," by Mr. J. Smith; "Moulting and Colour-feeding," by Mr. J. Taylor; and "A Novice's advice to Beginners, after a costly experience." Other items include a washing exhibition, at which prizes will be given without any entry fee being charged. "Matched Pairs for Breeding," a smoking concert at the opening of the syllabus, and a concert and supper at the conclusion of the season. Arrangements are to be made for our annual tea and concert and prize distribution, to be held at the Bankfoot Schools.—F. Gelder, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held 2nd September, Lockhart's Cafe. In the absence of Chairman, Mr. J. Chambers was asked to preside. I am sorry to record a poor attendance of members. The business of the evening was a lecture on colour feeding and exhibiting by Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford), and right ably did he deal with his subject. His audience were fortunate, I am sure, in listening to the experience and hearing the good advice of a fancier who is one of the pioneers of the Yorkshire Canary. Many were the questions showered upon him. He answered every one, after which a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him. Classification for open show was read and confirmed, all sections being well catered for, viz., Yorks 7 classes, Norwich 7, British 7 (including class for Softbills), Novice Yorks 4, Novice Norwich 4, with 5s. and 2s. 6d. for first and second most points in each section, and 2s. 6d. for most points in each class, 2 selling classes and A.O.V. Canary class. 1s. 6d. entry fee; prize money, 10s., 6s., 4s., 2s. Messrs. H. J. Mennard, T. Baldwinson G. Sykes, and J. Owen kindly presented 2s. 6d. each towards special fund, which was gratefully accepted. So get prepared, Leeds fanciers; the open show is upon you, and let us try to make it a record one-day show. Also do not forget October novice washing competition, 1st prize gold-centre silver medal; judge, Mr. W. Johnson, entrance free. Further particulars from Hon. Sec. Mr. J. Dowsett was elected a member. Schedules for open show will be given out at next meeting.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

CINNAMON CANARY CLUB.

Special committee meeting held at Blackburn on August 31st. Members present: Messrs. W. A. Bladon (President) in chair, E. Godley, A. Bentley, L. Roberts, H. Riding, V. H. Deacon, W. Dormer, and J. W. Metcalfe. The minutes of the Manchester 1910 meeting were read and confirmed. The President read out the list of new officers. The question re sixth judge was put. Mr. W. A. Bladon was elected as a club judge. The revised rules as drawn up by the sub-committee caused considerable discussion, Messrs. Dormer and Bentley moving that the rules would have to be confirmed by a general meeting; but when it was explained that considerable time might lapse before we could get a quorum at the Palace, they withdrew in favour of a motion by Messrs. Deacon and L. Roberts "That all members be asked to vote on the rules sent to them by Mr. Bentley some time ago, and which have been altered and approved of by this committee."—Carried. The following are the only alterations and additions to the rules now in force:—Rule 5: That there shall be two meetings a year. First meeting to be held at Manchester on Saturday during the Manchester Old Bird Show. The second meeting to be the annual general meeting, to be held on the first Thursday in April at Blackburn. Rule 6: The names and addresses of all candidates for membership shall be sent, with the entrance fee of 2s. 6d., to the Hon. Sec., who shall send a list of names and addresses of such candidates to the officers and committee at least seven days before election. If not elected, the entrance fee will be returned; if elected, forward the balance of subs. (2s. 6d.) to the Hon. Sec. Rule 9: That auditors shall not be elected through the annual voting paper, the same not to be put on the voting paper, but must be voted for annually at the general meeting. This rule to be strictly enforced. Rule 10 add: "Also that all exhibits must be clear of rings." Rule 17 add: "And same to be judged by a club judge, who shall not judge the club show two years in succession." Rule 19 add: "In Cinnamon classes, but that he remains a novice throughout the same season." Additional rule: "On a requisition signed by seven members of the club a special general meeting shall be called for the discussion of any matter connected with or affecting the interest of the club. Notice of such annual or general meeting shall be sent by the Hon. Sec. to all members fourteen days before the meeting." Will all members give these alterations their serious consideration, and let me have their opinions as early as possible? Messrs. Godley and Dormer were instructed to advise the Hon. Sec. on which wires the perches were to be placed. Patronage was granted to the following shows: Newcastle, Manchester, Liverpool (club show), Gt. Harwood, Gateshead, Scottish National, and Palace. Season's specials: 1st most points, pair of watercolours, value £4 4s., presented by Mrs. Deacon; 2nd ditto, gold medal, presented by W. Donner (donors not to compete for above); 3rd ditto, 12s.; 4th ditto, 8s. Novice section: 1st, Lawrence memorial medal; 2nd, 7s. 6d.; 3rd, 5s., and the C.C.C. trophy. I should be pleased to hear from any member willing to give a special for the club show, so that if possible it may prove a record show of Cinnamons. I beg to make an appeal to all Cinnamon fanciers to become members at once, so as to share in the season's specials. I should like to hear from any fancier who has been a member, and hope they will become members again. Should this catch the eye of any Cinnamon fancier over-seas, will they send me their address as we have something that will greatly interest them?—J. W. Metcalfe, Hon. Sec., 68, Brunswick Road, Liverpool.

Correspondence.

Another White Canary.

Sir,—I had the pleasure to-day of seeing a white Canary bred from a variegated yellow cock and a buff hen. It is now six weeks old, and with a successful moult should make a sensation among fanciers at local shows. It was bred by Mr. Pye, of Wavency Road, Southtown, Great Yarmouth.

W. Lowne.

The Northern Border & Scotch Fancy Club's Patronage.

Sir,—In your correspondence columns of last week's Cage Birds, Mr. Scott states we have not received the Northern Border Fancy Club's patronage. Is this a new starter off the original Border Club? I may say again that we have the patronage of the old original club, and would welcome the patronage of Mr. Scott's club as well for our show to be held on December 1 and 2.

J. Johnson,
Secretary of the Lancaster Primrose C.B.A.

A Canary with One Wing.

Sir,—As a breeder of the Border Fancy Canary, I was over at a sister's house on Sunday last, and saw a bird bred by her husband. I say it is a freak of nature. It is a Buff Border Fancy hen (variegated). It has only one wing. There is no sign of the other one, not even a stump. The bird was hatched on the 24th or 25th of June, and is now doing well. Its only difficulty is when it falls on its back—it cannot rise very easily. Has any breeder ever bred a bird with one wing before? And of what value is the bird?

Midlothian.

P.S.—The bird can be seen at any time by any breeder by calling at Mr. George Cairns's, West End Cottages, Loanhead.

Methods of Bird-Catching.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space in Cage Birds, in reply to Mr. E. D. Leavy's letter under the above heading. I am only what may be termed a young recruit at bird-catching, but at the same time I can catch enough birds to fill my own little bird-room. Around the part where I live we get a lot of all kinds of Finches, and Goldfinches in great numbers. I am of the same frame of mind as Mr. Leavy concerning the valuable "spring net trap," but instead of putting them in a circle I put them in rows, with my call birds each end. By setting them so, I find the birds do not fight shy of the nets so much. When I go out I always make up my mind what kind of birds I intend catching, so that I can take the right kind of bait and call birds to suit. Mr. Leavy also states that working-men fanciers cannot afford to buy expensive catching appliances. Of course, in the first place, spring net traps are not expensive. Again, with a paper like Cage Birds each week, surely we can get what we require through the exchange columns in exchange for anything we can spare. I myself find this is a very inexpensive way of getting things.

Spring Net Trap.

A Song Thrush's Journey of 1,500 Miles

Sir,—The following will, I know, be perused with interest by your numerous readers. The account is taken from a Nottingham daily newspaper: The "Daily Mail" has received from the Natural History Department of Aberdeen University a report signed by Professor J. A. Thomson and Mr. A. L. Thomson, giving some of the results of the work of the Aberdeen University Bird Migration Inquiry. The inquiry aims at collecting more definite information on the subject of the migration of birds by means of the method of placing rings on the feet of a large number of birds in the hope of hearing of the subsequent movements of some proportion of them. The following are a few of the records:—A Widgeon duckling, one of five marked in June, 1909, on Loch Brora, Sutherland, Scotland, was taken in a duck-decoy in Province Groningen, North-eastern Holland, on September 3, 1909. This bird was thus only three months old when it was found more than 500 miles from its birthplace. A second member of the brood was shot on the Trent near Retford, Lincolnshire, in January, 1911, having worn the ring for a year and a half. Five Lapwings marked as chicks in the north-east of Scotland, in the summer of 1910, were shot respectively in Counties Tipperary, Roscommon, Cork, and Limerick, Ireland, and in Southern Portugal, during the winter 1910-1911. A Song Thrush, one of a brood marked as chicks in the nest at Skene, Aberdeenshire, in early June, 1910, was shot near Leiria, Portugal, in early November of the same year. The two localities are about 1,250 English miles apart in direct overseas line, and this Thrush thus made a journey of probably more than 1,500 miles within the half-year of its life. A Guillemot, marked as a newly-hatched chick on the Aberdeenshire cliffs on July 11, 1910, was shot on November 29, 1910, a dozen miles north of Gothenburg, Sweden. This bird was then four and a half months old when it was killed more than 500 miles due east of its birthplace.

A Question for Bird-catchers.

Sir,—Will some of your readers kindly give me, through your columns, an idea or two as to how they make their sockets to fit on the hedge to hold limed twigs when catching small birds. May I wish Cage Birds and Cage Birds League continued success?

The National British Bird and M.C. Petition.

Sir,—It may be of interest to those who have helped in the matter of the petition referring to the sale and possession of wild birds, and circulated by the N.B.B. and M.C., to learn that this has been duly presented, together with full particulars and information supporting the same. A favourable reply has been received, and the matter is under investigation.

Yellow versus Buff Norwich Hens.

Sir,—I should like to ask through your esteemed paper, Cage Birds, has a yellow Norwich hen any chance against a buff in a mixed class for Norwich? This is a question that we have had plenty of discussion on in our society, some contending that we have type and size on the buff side, whilst we have only colour in the yellow; others say that a judge knows what a yellow should be, and also what a buff should be. Has a buff hen the right to win because it is bigger? I should think not.

The Breeding of Nightingales in Captivity.

Sir,—It may interest some of your readers to know that Mr. A. Sills, of 260, Loughboro' Road, Leicester, has been successful in breeding a young Nightingale from an adult pair of 'Gales in his garden aviary this season. The birds went to nest, and built in some ivy against the wall. They laid three eggs, and successfully reared one youngster. Both birds and nest, just as built, can be seen by any fancier who chooses to give Mr. Sills a call during the month. After that the birds may have to be taken indoors. I think this is very encouraging for a first attempt. If fanciers would only realise how readily these birds will go to nest and sing in confinement, I think many more would try the experiment.

J. Jeffrey.

Sir,—For the past few years I have taken a great interest (as a side line to my Canary breeding) in our King of Songsters, the English Nightingale, and the longer I keep them the more fascinating they seem to get. The fascination, no doubt, is rendered greater by their beautiful soft song, which myself and friends have often heard, not only during the day, but in the small hours of the night, which is a strange thing for this district (West Ham, London). Last season I tried to breed with a pair, and as I always take Nature for my guide, knowing their places for nesting, I imitated Nature the best I could with such conveniences as I have. I succeeded in getting three fertile eggs, but they did not hatch. This was caused through the nest not being sufficiently under cover, as when I went to feed them the hen left the nest each time, and eventually gave up sitting; so I had to give up, with a view to trying another season. This season, I am pleased to say, my pair have had five young ones. These left the nest on June 10th. All were reared, and did well till June 27th, when one died. One a friend of mine has, and the other three have moulted out splendidly, and are beautiful in colour. Through the great care and attention I have given them, they are going to make three good winners. They are in separate cages, and turn out to be three cocks, all singing well for youngsters, and without fear when I am standing in front of the cages. The parent cock gave his last song for the season on June 26th, at 12.30 midnight, and with his partner went into a moult. They are both going through well, and as migrating time draws near they are constantly on the move during the night. As I have never read of anything of this kind before, I did not know if it were a record or not. It is interesting to stand and see the parents take four or five mealworms at a time, causing one to wonder what is going to be done with them all. They deposit each one very carefully sideways in the youngsters' mouths, and they take care not to miss one when the food is at hand. This is where some of the pleasures of the Fancy come in—watching the results of your labours. All that is wanted in this case is plenty of patience and a determination to see the thing through, which is not such a trouble when it is made interesting.

A. Mallett.

The Champion Singing Linnet.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Fred Allen re "champion" Linnet, I will sing him for £5 aside, and will pay his expenses to sing at Leigh on any date this month. I don't want any £6 to £4 and give to the hospital. Let us see who has the best singing Linnet. An answer through Cage Birds will be attended to.

A New Cage Bird Society for West Wemyss (Fife).

Sir,—A meeting of fanciers was held last week, and it was decided to form a cage bird society to be called the West Wemyss Cage Bird Society. It was further decided to hold, as a first venture, an open table show on October 21, when we hope to be favoured with the support of fanciers in the district.

Tasmanian Rosellas and their Diet.

Sir,—I have read in Cage Birds the Rev. C. D. Farrar's article on Rosellas, and would feel greatly obliged to him if he would kindly tell me how a Tasmanian Rosella should be fed. Mine was brought to England two years ago, and when it moulted, about August, it lost all its long wing and tail feathers, and has never regained them. It was a very handsome bird, only six months old, and has apparently been quite healthy and active, though of course unable now to fly. I keep him in the garden in summer, and in the house in winter (out of draughts), and have tried all sorts of seeds as food—chiefly canary and white sunflower, but nothing seems to bring back the handsome plumage.

An Appeal for a Swansea Fancier.

Sir,—Mr. E. M. Evans, as I have previously explained, only recently underwent an operation at Swansea Hospital for the amputation of one of his legs, and is thereby greatly incapacitated not only as regards exhibiting, but also as regards employment. I have already enumerated his sterling qualities as a member of the Fancy, and I think this is undoubtedly a deserving case. Mr. Evans has a large family dependent upon him, and the additional expenses of the operation and an artificial leg are quite beyond his resources. May I therefore appeal to the generosity of all club secretaries and members of the Fancy, especially in Wales, to assist in the disposal of the "prize drawing" books, which I will immediately forward to any address upon receipt of postcard? The drawing is entirely for Mr. Evans' benefit, and I trust the Fancy will not be outclassed by any other organisation in according their support to a brother in difficulties.

On Holiday with a Field Glass.

Sir,—This year for several reasons I have had a very varied holiday in Scotland. I went North by the West Coast, having added a field glass to my other impedimenta, and on the way I observed a few kinds of birds, including Magpies. My first stop for a few days was at Galashiels, in the Scott country, where even every bush has its own special song or story. From Galashiels as a centre I had some fine motor drives at the rate of 20 miles an hour, a moderate rate, but still a fine way of seeing the country. We went up the poetic vale of Yarrow to St. Mary's Loch, viewing the "Braes of Yarrow" as we went, and noticing on one of the "braes" at the Loch the statue to Hogg the Ettrick Shepherd; and in returning we crossed over from Yarrow to the Tweed at Innerleithen and down Tweedside. Another day we went down Tweedside past Melrose to Leaderfoot and up Leaderside to Lauder and over Sutro Hill, from which we had a fine view over Midlothian and Eastlothian to the Bass Rock. We then turned aside to the top of Gala and down Gala Water. Another day I motored out from Edinburgh via Peebles and Tweedside. Motoring is a fine way of seeing the country, but, like the train, is too speedy for observing small birds; but in Yarrow I saw, amongst others, Heron, Wheatear, Kestrel, Grouse, Curlew, and Barn Owl. I then went on to Carnoustie, a little way north of Dundee, on the coast, and in passing saw the big camp on Barry Links, a fine place for soldiering. At Carnoustie I saw, amongst others, Kittiwake, Redshank, Herring Gull, Common Gull, Eider Duck, Common Tern, Ringed Plover, Dunlin, Oyster Catcher, Corn Bunting, Whinchat, Dipper, Whitethroat, Lesser Black-backed Gull, and Gannet. It is a sight to see the collection of Terns and Gulls at Buddonness at the mouth of the Tay. I walked along the Barry Sands from Carnoustie one evening to see them, and also to see the Gannets at their evening meal, a most wonderful sight. Macgillivray makes an order of birds which he calls Plungers, and surely the Gannet is the "King of the Plungers," for nothing can be nobler than his swoop down from a height on the fish he has caught sight of in the water. But perhaps I forget I have not seen the Golden Eagle in the wild state. I then moved on to Newtonhill near Stonehaven, and from there visited various places in Kincardineshire. I walked past Dunnottar Castle, and its Dungeon Keep, where in olden days Covenanters were imprisoned and died, to Fowlsheugh, the most famous nesting place for Kittiwakes on the East Coast of Scotland. It consists of conglomerate rock rising sheer out of the sea, and sometimes overhanging, about 200 feet high and nearly a mile long. All along the rock and all up and down the rock round stones have got detached and have fallen out, and in each niche thereby created it is curious to see a Kittiwake sitting composed and safe from everybody and everything. And oh; the Babel! I saw hundreds. I may safely say thousands. Besides Kittiwakes, I saw Herring Gulls, Cormorants, Guillemots, Puffins (locally known as Tammie Norrie), Grey Crows, and Rock Doves. I had the place all to myself; there was not a soul near, and it was a satisfaction to be out of the reach of the everlasting tripper who often precedes one noisily and and disturbs the very birds one wants to see. Another day I went inland to Auchinblae (Parish of Fordoun) where I identified among others the Meadow Pipit, Grey Wagtail, Goldcrest, and Spotted Flycatcher. Another day I went to Muchalls on the coast, where I saw Stonechats, Rock Pipits, and two Hybrids between the Carrion Crow and the Grey Crow. They were with a Grey Crow, but were decidedly black all over, but with grey patches on back and on neck. They were quite different from the ordinary Grey Crow, still, not pure black like the Carrion Crow. I also again saw there Eider Duck, Puffin, Kittiwake, Wheatear, Whinchat, Dipper, Long-eared Owl, etc. The last date on which I saw the Swift was 15th August, but I was not again in the place where I saw it. I saw only one Lark, and no Grey Wagtail till I came to Auchinblae and Newtonhill. I only saw one Blue Tit, and Coal Tits twice. I saw five or six Herons in all. One pair of Wild Ducks and young, Wheatears repeatedly, Whinchats fairly frequently, Dippers twice, more Puffins than Guillemots, Goldcrest and Flycatcher only once (both at Auchinblae), Stonechats, two pairs, the cocks with fine rose-coloured breasts (like Linnets) from the white neck-mask downwards, Rock-pipit (one brood with old ones both at Newtonhill), Whitethroats (a pair at Carnoustie and a single one at Newtonhill in a small dell near the sea—a very fine specimen in splendid feather and extra large). I thought if I could have put salt on this bird's tail I might have handed him over to our old friend Sam Cook or some one who could have kept him in condition to catch the judge's eye. The following is a complete list of all the 66 kinds I saw: Mistle Thrush, Song Thrush, Blackbird, Dipper, Wheatear, Whinchat, Stonechat, Whitethroat, Robin, Goldcrest, Willow Wren, Hedge-Sparrow, Coal Tit, Blue Tit, Wren, Pied Wagtail, Grey Wagtail, Meadow Pipit, Rock Pipit, Spotted Flycatcher, Swallow, House Martin, Greenfinch, Sparrow, Chaffinch, Linnet, Corn Bunting, Yellow Bunting, Skylark, Starling, Magpie, Jackdaw, Carrion Crow, Grey Crow, Rook, Swift, Barn Owl, Long-eared Owl, Kestrel, Cormorant, Gannet, Heron, Swan, Wild Duck, Eider Duck, Ring Dove, Rock Dove, Pheasant, Partridge, Grouse, Waterhen, Coot, Ringed Plover, Lapwing, Oyster-catcher, Dunlin, Redshank, Curlew, Common Tern, Blackheaded Gull, Kittiwake, Common Gull, Herring Gull, Lesser Blackbacked Gull, Guillemot, and Puffin. The mountain ash and hawthorn and other berries are a sight all over this year, presaging plenty of winter food for softbills and others. I lay no claim to being a "Wandering Jew," I am only a Wandering Scot.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

Sir,—Being a regular reader of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, I would like some fancier to give me full information on how to breed mealworms.

A Five-weeks-old Three-legged Canary.

Sir,—It may interest your numerous readers to know that a freak has been bred and reared in Hamilton. The bird in question is a Border Fancy Canary having three legs. I saw the bird this week, and it has three complete legs and feet. The extra leg comes out between the other two, but nearer the right. The leg is full size, and can be moved about at will. It is curious to see the various positions the bird stands in, sometimes standing on both ordinary legs with the extra one stuck out in front, sometimes with it out at back. It can also hold the ordinary leg with the extra foot. The bird is one of a nest of four, and is five weeks old. The owner is a novice, this being his first season. As may be expected, he is proud of his three-legged Canary. Large numbers of fanciers have been to see the bird. The owner will be delighted to let anyone see it, his name and address being Mr. Samuel Paton, 36, Church Street, Hamilton.

Payment of Prize Money Won at Oakham Show.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper re Oakham Show, held on August 7th. Being an exhibitor at this show in the Cage Bird Section, I won in Class 5 first prize (6s.), in Class 10 third prize (2s.), and in Class 12 second prize (4s.) and vhc; total, 12s. On receiving cheque for payment of prize-money, I was greatly surprised to find that it amounted to 8s. only instead of 12s. I have written the secretary, Mr. J. W. Monton, twice to remit the 4s. balance, but he has not replied. Has any other bird exhibitor been served the same?

T. H. Ride.

Northampton St. Crispin C.B.S.

Sir,—In reply to the letter from Mr. W. E. Allen of September 2, I think that on the face of it anyone can judge it is written from a very jealous feeling. The reason the show was not held was owing to the lateness of the date and the bad breeding results experienced by the members. The imaginary sixty members of the Hand-in-Hand I congratulate him upon, but we are trying to build up a society in reality. Good luck to both of us. My motto is, if you cannot do anybody any good, don't do them any harm. Respecting the hornets referred to in the latter part of Mr. Allen's letter, I can well afford to pass this unnoticed, and put this down to the general disposition of the writer. Hornets are insects which I have up to now given a wide berth to; in fact, I am not well versed in their habits. Perhaps Mr. Allen is, or he would not have them so much on his mind.

Jno. Nason,
Hon. Sec., Northampton St. Crispin C.B.S.

Sir,—My attention was called by Mr. Healy to the report in your issue of August 12th, which stated that he had gone to Ireland on a well-earned holiday, and as this means to the said gentleman more than it is in my place to express, he asked me if I had any idea of the origin of the report. I told him I had not the slightest idea of it, and was most sorry that anyone should dream of such a thing, let alone put it in print. I therefore called out our committee (the Northampton Hand-in-Hand C.B.S.) to see what steps we should take in the matter, and it was decided that the same should stand over until the monthly meeting, which should be a specially summoned one. The meeting took place at the society's headquarters, "The Old House at Home," Wellingborough Road, on August 29th, Mr. S. G. Ette in the chair. The meeting, after considering the above report, wished me to write to you, sir, expressing their deep sense of regret at anyone being so foolish as to put such a report into print, which seems to be nothing but a pack of lies, and also a disgrace to the Fancy. The members also wish to state that they will be most pleased to do anything in their power to find out the guilty person. Why Mr. J. Nason thought well to start a new society against the "old one" is best known to himself, and is no doubt the cause of the whole trouble.

S. G. Ette, Chairman.
A. W. Law, Secretary.

P.S.—We are pleased to state that the Hand-in-Hand Society is in a most flourishing condition, and at the above meeting Messrs. T. C. Ette, W. Bellham, G. Jones, C. Botterill, and A. Clifton were duly enrolled as members of the old society.

Canaries at Batheaston Show

Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper in reply to Mr. F. L. Follwell re his Norwich at Eastville Show, as he wishes me to reply. I may say that the birds in question are three good Norwich, the first and second being two clear yellows and the third a marked buff; and with a good moult they should prove for themselves whether they are first or third raters at our autumn shows. I might add that if Mr. Lanham accepts Mr. Follwell's advice and sends his valuable specimens to Cheltenham open show it will show whether they have been wrongly placed or not, as there are always some tip-top specimens exhibited there, and the birds are looked after and cared for by one of the best show committees in the country.

J. R. Houghton.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper in answer to Mr. Tayler's letter. I wish to inform him that I was not a "disappointed exhibitor" until after I was told that he acted as judge. Shortly after I arrived at the show in the morning with my two exhibits Mr. Follwell came into the tent with his three birds. Immediately afterwards followed Mr. Tayler. He was present when Mr. Follwell staged his birds, and Mr. Tayler and Mr. Follwell had a long conversation together in the tent directly in front of the Canaries before judging time. Had I known in the morning that Mr. Tayler was going to judge, he would not have adjudicated upon my birds; I should certainly have brought them away and forfeited my entry fees. Re his remarks on Mr. Follwell's 1st, 2nd, and 3rd birds, these read very nicely on paper, but don't quite fit the birds exhibited. I must thank Mr. Tayler for trying to "swank" your readers that he can teach me what a Norwich or a Yorkshire is; and as to my Crest-bred, I wish to inform him and your readers that this bird has a good broad skull, bold entrance, and grand eyebrow, but fails in substance of body (which is a little failing in this variety). No doubt Mr. Tayler has never bred or had a Crest-bred of this merit; otherwise he would know the value of such. Re my "so-called Yorkshire," I wish to enlighten Mr. Tayler. The bird he refers to is fully 6¾ inches long, has good head, wings and pipe tail, and comes from the true, direct Girlington (near Bradford) blood. Close relations of it won at the Crystal Palace. The "so-called Yorkshire's" uncle won the championship diploma and silver medal for best Yorkshire at the Crystal Palace, and it was acknowledged to be the best bird living that day. Now, I wish to inform Mr. Tayler that I know a good bird when I see one; and to prove it, some years ago I was judging a show, and I awarded a 1st prize to a Green Crest-bred in an A.V. class, first time shown (this was a similar bird in head points to my vhc Batheaston, 1st Larkhall winner). Through my advice the bird was sent to the Plymouth show, where it took 1st and special in the Crest-bred class; afterwards Bristol show, 1st in the Crest-bred class, 1st Frome, etc., etc. A big price was afterwards offered for it by a noted Crest breeder and exhibitor. As to Norwich Plainheads, I consider I have a little knowledge of these, and Mr. Tayler has good reasons to know it. At Bath show in September, 1906, I exhibited ten birds, chiefly Norwich, under Mr. J. H. Payne (Gloucester), the Norwich specialist judge. With my ten birds I was awarded four 1sts, two 2nds, two 3rds, two vhc's, gold medal for best Canary, also 10s. 6d. for best Norwich in show, etc. The gold medal was kindly given by Mr. Tayler, who professed before the show that he had the best Norwich in Bath. I believe he made ten entries, and was also competing for his own gold medal and the 10s. 6d. special. Did Mr. Tayler, a day after the show, send a gentleman to my address to offer me £5 for the medal winner, which I refused? Shortly after the show one of the no doubt "disappointed exhibitors" rumoured that I borrowed my gold medal winner. I then challenged, through your paper of March 16th, 1907, the "disappointed exhibitor" for £50 a side to prove his statement, which challenge was never accepted. And I have the same bird to-day. I may inform your readers that I bred winners and judged at shows before Mr. Tayler and Mr. Follwell ever kept Canaries, and won eighteen years ago with Crests, Crest-breds, Cinnamons, Yorkshires, Scotch Fancies, Norwich, Mules, British and foreign birds in open competition under numerous judges (specialist Canary judges as well as poultry, pigeon and fur judges). Surely these judges who awarded me prizes were not all short-sighted? Batheaston show was Mr. Tayler's first time of judging, and he took nearly two hours in which to judge nine Canaries. There may be a little excuse if the fur judge Mr Tayler refers to is the Larkhall judge; if so, I have been informed since Larkhall show that this gentleman (the Larkhall judge) has given as much as £15 and £20 for Crests and Crest-breds. So I think he as well as Mr. Tayler ought to know a Crest-bred. Mr. Tayler has never kept one. Re Mr. Follwell's letters, I do not wish to pen much, as I think the first part of my letter will convince your readers. If, Mr. Follwell, the birds you say your wife exhibited at Weston were her own property, then I am still in the position to say that I have beaten you every time. Or did you ever show them before or after your wife exhibited them at Weston? The bird, a Yorkshire, which I had to follow on behind with at Weston, I will admit, was rightly placed. Unfortunately it was heavily in the moult, but not so bad as the real "Bradford type" one at Batheaston show. This bird was up in a ball, being very heavily in the moult, and had only four or six feathers in the tail. Allow me to inform Mr. Tayler that there are better Yorkshires in Bath than the 3rd Batheaston "real Bradford" one. Those who live the longest will see the most. Would either of the gentlemen visitors to Bath who called on me kindly pass their real opinions of my Crest-bred and state whether it has a "very small" head or a large head? I shall be pleased to show the bird to any fancier (Crest-breeder preferred). I may say that I have been offered £5 for him by a Crest fancier, but it is not for sale. This is my final letter on the subject.

Hen Greenfinch and Hen Canary Sit Together.

Sir,—The following account may interest the readers of Cage Birds. The season started with two hen Greenies in a collection of Goldfinches, Siskins, Chaffinches, and about ten pairs of Canaries in an outdoor aviary. One Greenie had to be given her liberty, as she interfered with the nesting Canaries. The other was discovered one morning calmly sitting on a nest beside a hen Canary. On examination four Canary's and four Greenie's eggs were found in the nest. The former's eggs were put under other hen Canaries, and the joint sitting arrangement continued for seven days, when Mistress Greenie apparently got tired, and left the Canary in charge. Result: Two Canary-Greenfinch Mules, both reared successfully. After a little rest Mistress Greenie went through the same performance again, but chose another sitting hen Canary for companion. Canary eggs distributed as before, and Mistress Greenie again got tired of sitting—after nine days. Result: Canary reared three Mules out of five eggs. Mistress Greenie apparently then made up her mind to do a little on her own. She built her own nest, and laid five eggs. Two of these proved fertile. Result: Two Mules have this day (September 5th) left the nest, and are being fed by the hen Greenie.

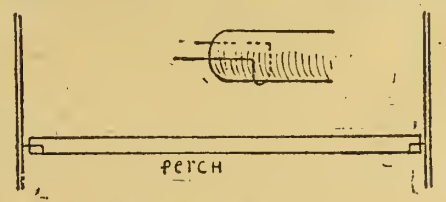
Wild-Bird Life.

Birds on the South Downs.

The centre of interest in wild bird life has moved somewhat to the Southern counties now that the summer is on the wane. The thousands of young birds bred during the past glorious season are gradually wending their ways towards the Southern coast. If one wants seriously to study the first stage in autumn migration he should get within touch of the seashore, and nowhere is so favourable as the Sussex coast for the purpose. The vast range of hills known as the South Downs makes a grand gathering place for the departing birds. Here we have miles of undulating ground within sight of the sea, and consequently close to the final starting point. These downs are only partially cultivated, the remainder being covered with short grass with here and there patches of furze and brambles. Wild plants flourish everywhere. In some of the hollows tall thistles and ragwort cover the ground, and hundreds of Linnets, Greenbirds and an occasional family of Goldfinches feed daily upon them. Young Chats are almost as numerous, and to one accustomed to see these attractive birds singly or in pairs, a group of them is certainly unusually interesting. On the marshy ground and along the sea walls bordering the river Wheatears are almost as plentiful as Sparrows in a country village; some of them are fine bold birds, well grown and tight in plumage. They are not by any means shy, and as one approaches them they spring into the air, and apparently allowing the wind to take them, glide with ease to another hillock. Although not in the habit of perching, these birds love to be upon ground a little higher than usual. When in the open fields, a clod of earth or large stone forms an admirable position for them. Upon the rough moors a rock partly buried in the coarse turf is their usual post, and the writer has frequently amused himself by keeping one on the move to see if it was possible to cause him to settle on level ground. The bird will, of course, do it while feeding, but otherwise an eminence of some kind is his chief delight. When walking them up along the sea wall they will frequently get up just before the intruder and then, flying round him, settle upon the bank he has just passed.



No Lover of Ireland.

The "King of Songsters," the soberly-clad Nightingale, has never been known to visit Ireland, although doubtless food for it would be abundant in some localities.

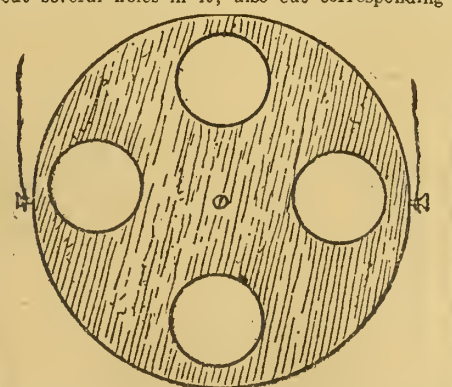
A Useful Feeding Perch.
Sent by Mr. W. Thexton, 5, Beech Street, Windermere.



I send you herewith a sketch of a feeding perch which I am finding is very useful in my cages. To make it, get two staples and bend

Sent by Mr. A. Weedall, 110, High Street, Winsford, Cheshire.

This ventilator will be very useful for outside aviaries. Procure a lard bucket top, and cut several holes in it; also cut corresponding holes in wall of aviary. Place the bucket top over these holes inside the aviary; put a screw in the centre to fasten and for it to revolve on. A screw at each side with a cord attached will be useful to work it.—A. Weedall.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1911 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address

The Mersey District.

On the whole the breeding season in this district has been fairly good. I should like here to state that the most successful breeders have fed their young on egg and puppy biscuits. Bob Algie (Bootle) has bred close on 100 (Greens and Clears), and there are some really smart youngsters amongst them. Mr. S. McNulty has done very well, finishing up with 125. He has succeeded in breeding some very promising birds from his Scottish National winner, and has his eye on the G.C.A. Cup and the Bootle special. Mr. Kincla (Bootle Society's chairman) is very well pleased with his results—57 young, and a nice lot they are. Mr. Young (Newbrighton) has done fairly-well—50 young (Greens and Clears). He has bred from some real good birds. He is a very enthusiastic exhibitor and generally finds the cards. Mr. Harry Hughes (Birkenhead) has bred some nice Greens, just on 60 in number. Mr. E. A. Lloyd (the Birkenhead Society's secretary) has done very well —Yorkshires, Norwich, and British. He has 40 young ones, and very good ones. Fanciers will be sorry to hear that he has been down with a serious illness, which nearly cost him his life. All will be glad to hear he is now rapidly recovering. Mr. Harry Hawkes (Birkenhead) has done exceedingly well—70 young. Mr. Cooper (Liverpool) from fourteen pairs has bred 70 young Greens and Clears in Yorkshires and Borders—a nice lot. Mr. Corbett (Oxton, Birkenhead) is pleased with his results—65 youngsters, all doing well. Mr. Potter (Bootle) has done well—85 in all, and a very good lot they are. Mr. Lobb (Bootle) has done very well with close on 100 to his credit, nearly all Clears. He is in a good humour over his success, as he did badly last season. Mr. Hamilton (Bootle) has done as well as he expected, having about 40 birds. He has some very good birds for a novice, both Greens and Clears. He is building up an excellent strain. Mr. Cutts (Annfield) has done well with close on 100. He is getting on well, is Tom. He has some nice youngsters. Mr. Warmsley (Annfield) has not done so well; he only has six youngsters, all Greens. Better luck next time! Mr. Southworth (Annfield) has bred a nice lot, just on 40—Green and Clear Yorkshires, with some nice birds amongst them. Mr. Frank Hawkes has done well—50 young Norwich, Greens and Clears, all very good birds. Mr. G. Bell, that well-known breeder of Yorkshire Greens, has done fairly well—forty youngsters. A specialist in colour, is George. Mr. Leatherbarrow has reared 47 young Yorkshire Greens, and there are some very nice ones amongst them. Mr. Harrison, the Annfield novice, has started nicely, rearing 37—Yorkshire Clears and Greens. He puts his success down to reading Cage Birds. Mr. Wynn, another Annfield novice, has reared 70 youngsters. Mr. Percival (Ellsmere Port) has done very well; he is another who believes in following the advice in Cage Birds. Mr. Jones, that well-known Birkenhead fancier, has had a rattling good season, having bred some very nice youngsters. Mr. Morton (Birkenhead) has done very well both in numbers and quality. Mr. Johnson (Ormskirk) has had a very good season with Yorkshire Clears. Mr. Mallinson (Wallasey) has done well in British. Fanciers will be sorry to hear that his wife has been dangerously ill; but I am pleased to hear she is recovering. Mr. Atty (Annfield) has had remarkable luck, rearing 37 birds. Last week he came home from work only to find that a cat had got into the room and left him with only four birds alive. He had just gathered the dead ones up when I called on him. Mr. Gore has succeeded in rearing some good young Green Yorkshires. Will Douglas, I am glad to say, has taken up the hobby again in real earnest.—R. B. Wright (Liverpool).

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

By Members of the Liverpool B.B.A.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association held on August 10th the following papers were read by Novice Members, viz., Messrs. T. R. Jones, J. Lloyd and J. Saul.

No. 1. Mr. Jones's Paper.

I have always been a lover of bird life. I am a native of Liverpool, and have always worked in the city; consequently my visits to the woodlands and moors have been few but very interesting.

During the year 1903 I had occasion to visit a member of a friendly society to which I belonged, and I noticed he had several breeding cages in the front room, so I asked him several questions regarding the birds. He answered by telling me of his experience; he also showed me a few of his old numbers of CAGE BIRDS, and said that he would be pleased if I would take some home, as he knew they would be interesting. Having perused the copies, I decided to take CAGE BIRDS weekly, and as a start in the Fancy I built a small out-door aviary.

The First Purchases.

I purchased two Lesser Redpolls, three Greenfinches, one Chaffinch, one Bramblefinch, one young Goldfinch or Greypate, and two Linnets. I got all on to hard seed with the exception of a Greenfinch and a Linnet. I noticed that the Liverpool O.S. had an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS re their first show, and as I had never seen anything of the kind, I decided to pay same a visit. I attended the show on Saturday, November 7th, and was exceedingly pleased with the exhibition. The clear Yorkshire section took a deal of my attention. I heard somebody say that they put the birds through a mill at Bradford, and I believed them.

At that time I was interested in British birds as being the only kind of birds I possessed, so to the British Classes I went. I was very much pleased by the way I was treated by some of the visitors (or should I say "fanciers?"). Whichever class I was at, there seemed to be always somebody willing to show me the various points about the birds. At the Goldie class a young man gave me a special lecture on them. He was evidently very much interested in his subject. I appreciated my guides the more because I was a complete stranger to them all, and I must say that that show left a very good impression upon me, and I decided to be among them in the future.

After the show I closely perused the catalogue, and after studying the various classes I began on the adverts. I noticed one in particular from a breeder of Greens, etc. I knew the advertiser personally, but I did not know he was in the Fancy. Meeting him soon after, I told him of my visit to the L.O.S. show and what I had seen. The result was an invitation to his bird room, which I readily accepted. It being the first bird room I had seen, I was exceedingly pleased with my visit.

A Start in Canary Breeding.

I now had a liking for the breeding of Canaries, and this friend started me with a pair of Yorkshire Greens and a double breeding cage, and promised me as much advice as I should require. The last offer I think I took full advantage of, and I was delighted with my start. I read over the "Club Notices" in CAGE BIRDS, naturally taking particular notice of what the Liverpool Societies did at their meetings, and, as I saw that fanciers generally were invited, I arranged to hear several of the lectures, etc., which on hearing I found very instructive. Again I was surprised at the cordial welcome given to strangers. Regarding these meetings, I wish to mention one in particular. A Washing Exhibition was to be given by Mr. W. Hales at Oldham Hall. Promptly to time I arrived at the hall, and to my surprise, with the exception of Messrs. Hales and Hadwin, I found I was the only person who had responded to the announcement. At 9 p.m., when two others had strolled in, Mr. Hales said it was too late to start washing birds, although I could see that everything was ready. I felt disappointed indeed, but as I overheard Mr. Hales say that the birds would have to be washed that night, and that they would be done at his home, I told him that I had come some distance to see the Bird-washing and asked him if he objected to my going to his home to witness the process. "Certainly not," said Mr. Hales, and right off we started for Canterbury Street (I might mention that Mr. McDermott also took advantage of the invitation). I am pleased to say that Mr. Hales did all he could to show us the art of bird-washing, and I have not forgotten my first lesson.

JOIN "CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE" NOW. (See page 143.)

Eight Young Canaries.

I now come to the 1909 breeding season. I had my double breeding cage and a pair of Yorkshire Greens as stock, a few cuttings out of CAGE BIRDS and a CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and I was ready to try my luck as a Canary breeder. I was successful in rearing eight young Canaries. I used Spratt's Cod Liver Oil food until the birds were well through their moult. I attended the 1909 Liverpool O. S. show, also the Green Canary Association's and the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association's old bird shows, for according to the advice I had received, novices should attend all shows when possible.

Again I must mention I was surprised with the manner in which I was treated when attending these shows. At the L.O.S. show one of the stewards gave me a delightful few minutes' chat on the clear and ticked Norwich. It was through the kindliness shown to me as a stranger that I decided to join both the Green Canary and the Liverpool B.B. Associations.

At the Shows.

The 1910 breeding season proved disastrous, for I only succeeded in rearing two from three pairs. As a member of the G.C.A. and the L.B.B.A. I have been fortunate in being able to attend all the meetings and shows. I was specially interested in the G.C.A. night shows. I thought they made good competition locally. At the commencement of the season I was advised to show locally. My first attempt was at a G.C.A. night show, when I obtained one first and a vhc. At the 1910 L.O.S. show I entered two birds, and obtained two vhc's and a cash special in fairly strong classes. At the Amalgamated Show I was awarded a 2nd and a vhc, together with a special for novice points. At the L.B.B.A. I got a 3rd, and my last attempt at showing was the G.C.A. old bird show, when I obtained a 2nd. The result of my first season's showing was one 1st, two 2nds, one 3rd, four vhc's, two cash specials, and a bottle of Parrish's Chemical Food. I am well satisfied with my first year's experience as an exhibitor, and I beg to thank all those who have been so kind and courteous to me since I joined the Fancy; and I hope in my turn to assist in the advancement of this delightful hobby. In conclusion, I must say that I consider CAGE BIRDS and the first L.O.S. show are responsible for my introduction to the Fancy, and I wish them every success in the future.

Some Recent Arrivals from Abroad.

The Cinnamon Tree Sparrow.

Now that the surplus of Mr. Brook's unique consignment of Indian birds has been offered for sale, a few notes on some of the commoner species may not be out of place, because the latter will probably find their way into the hands of a good many of our readers. The above-mentioned species is a handsome Sparrow, smaller than the cosmopolitan Passer domesticus, having the whole back of a warm cinnamon-brown shade, the breast and lower parts pale yellow and the centre of the throat covered by a large black bib. It is a Himalayan species, ranging as high as 7,000ft. in summer, and descending as low as 4,000ft. in winter. The female is somewhat similar to the male, but lacks the black bib.

So far as I know the first Cinnamon Tree Sparrows to reach this country were a male and two females caught near Dalhousie and imported in the spring of 1908. Capt. Perreau found them quite common in this district, and they were nesting in holes of trees. Singularly enough, the male in the December following the date of his capture developed a bright yellow breast, which led the importer to think that this might be a previously unnoted characteristic of the species. Oates, however, states that the breast of the male is rather brighter in the breeding season (i.e. June), which is of course what one would expect, and the two young males which I bred from this bird did not exhibit this characteristic. There is, however, a race of this Sparrow (Passer rutilans) found in China, which has the breast much paler than P. cinnamomeus, and in the same way there may be a hitherto unnoticed race which has the breast brighter than the latter species.

I found Cinnamon Sparrows rather quarrelsome among themselves, but quite harmless among smaller birds. A somewhat similar Sparrow—the Pegu Sparrow (P. flaveolus)—may be now seen at the Zoo; it has a brighter chest colour but a duller bib.

The Indian Redstart.

This bird is very similar to our Redstart in size and shape, and has the same characteristic quivering motion of the tail, but is not nearly so handsome. Its head, neck, mantle, wings and upper breast are black; the other parts of its body rufous. The female has the head and neck greyish. A pair (as I thought) of these came my way, but towards the end of August the supposed hen developed a black feather on the throat, then another, and is now rapidly acquiring a black head. I had not suspected that it was a cock, because young male European Redstarts acquire the adult plumage before they are a year old, and as Indian birds nest at the same time of the year as British species it is evident that my birds must be more than a year old.

Evidently therefore R. rufiventris, like the Blackstart, takes two (or possibly more) years to acquire its adult plumage. The Indian Redstart has an extensive range from the Lebanon eastward. My two specimens seem most peaceably disposed not only towards other birds, but towards one another. In this respect they differ markedly from the European Redstart which, like other birds showing red in the plumage, is a born fighter. A pair of Redstarts which have been the best of friends during the summer will often in a large aviary fight to the death in the winter. The Blackstart is worse than a fighter: he is an assassin, whose stealthy and deadly methods of warfare have cost me not a few valuable birds. Of the four typical Redstarts of the Eastern Hemisphere the European and the Indian may be said to be the most distinctive; the other two are R. mesoleuca (found in Persia and Asia Minor), which has a white patch on the wing, and R. ochrurus (found in the Caucasus and Armenia), which has the underwing black.

The Indian Siskin.

This is a remarkably handsome species. It is larger than our Siskin, and has a larger beak; though somewhat similarly marked, it is a far more showy bird of quite distinctive appearance. The crown, cheeks and short moustachial streak in the male are black or brownish black; the wings are blackish with broad yellow bar; and the throat and underparts are bright yellow. The female is similarly marked, but so much duller that the sexes can be distinguished at a glance.

I have not found the species a very free singer in an aviary, and its song is not noteworthy, the only part of it that reaches the ear at a little distance being the long-drawn note of our Greenfinch. (It has been called a Greenfinch by some writers, and Hume considers that it is not a Siskin at all, proposing a separate genus for it; Saunders, however, regards it as a true Siskin). It likes well-wooded districts and is a late breeder. This little bird is a great favourite of mine, but the specimens which I obtained some years since did only fairly well. The bird seems to miss something—perhaps the rare and bracing air of its homeland, the great mountain range which has been well called "the roof of the world"; but more probably some essential constituent of its natural diet, because the majority of the Himalayan species do remarkably well in this country.

The Himalayan Goldfinch.

It is, however, not by any means so puzzling a species as the Himalayan Goldfinch—a bird which not only closely resembles our Goldfinch (differing chiefly in the absence of black on the head and the smaller blaze) but is really identical with ours, as can hardly be doubted by anyone who has examined the interesting case in the Entrance Hall at the Natural History Museum, which shows how the one form gradually merges into the other as we proceed further east. Yet, though it is so closely related, I have never been able to keep the Indian Goldfinch in health for more than a few weeks, and I think others have had the same experience, because it is said not to have as yet been bred in this country, though frequently imported.

SIXTY LOCAL HON. SECS. TO DATE.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

No further Developments at Millom.

I have heard nothing further from Mr. Park or the other bird-keepers at Millom who were threatened by the authorities that they would have to give up their birds. I can only conclude that "no news is good news," and that the local Health Authority has discovered that it has started a crusade which will cause it more trouble than was anticipated.

The "Animal World" and Ourselves.

The only reply I have received to my letter published in our Journal of August 26th is an intimation that the Editor is away on holiday. No reference to the subject is made in the September issue of "The Animal World."

Booking Clerks and Bird Parcels.

I have received letters from Mr. Grinling, the chief traffic manager of the Great Northern Railway and Mr. Bramley, the district superintendent at Nottingham of the Midland Railway, stating that the alleged refusal of the Nottingham clerks to accept parcels containing birds is being inquired into. From these it would appear that the authorities of the two railway companies had no previous knowledge of the procedure. I shall doubtless hear more of the matter in due course. The Great Central Railway has not acknowledged my letter.

A new Member makes a Suggestion.

Below is a suggestion from a new member, Mr. Vickers, of Liversedge. There can be no doubt that there are many thousands of bird-keepers who are without the knowledge of the existence of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, people who have no idea that by simply writing to CAGE BIRDS they may obtain help in any difficulty that may arise in the keeping of their pets, and who have not yet any idea that the keeping of a pet bird is in danger of prohibition. The step proposed by Mr. Vickers would entail some considerable trouble on the part of honorary workers, and for this reason may be somewhat impracticable. I should be pleased to hear the opinions of our Local Hon. Secs. and of those gentlemen who may be thinking of accepting the post but who have not yet joined.

Sir,—May I take the liberty to suggest that there are a good many cage bird fanciers who are ignorant of the danger in which their hobby stands, and who would, I feel sure, be only too pleased to help on a league the object of which is to befriend cage birds and those who keep them, did they but know the danger to which they were exposed. I suggest, therefore, that it would be well spent money if a number of handbills (setting forth the danger to which cage-bird keepers were exposed, and the objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE) were printed for distribution and sent on to the secretaries of various bird societies with the request that they should be taken to every house where a bird is kept. If this were done I feel sure that the number of the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE would be greatly augmented, and our journal, CAGE BIRDS, introduced into many fresh homes. Wishing CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE every success.

T. W. VICKERS.

Larkhall falls into Line.

In my notes of August 12th I wrote that some members of the Larkhall C.B.A. did not quite approve of that part of our scheme which allowed a member the option of allocating half of his subscription to the special prize fund or to any other of our objects with which he might be especially in sympathy, and that they were therefore disinclined to join the LEAGUE. I now have the pleasure of recording that Mr. Pollock, the Secretary of the Society named, writes that my reply to his former letter was considered in every way satisfactory, and that he hopes to add considerably to the list of members from the Larkhall C.B.A. forwarded with his letter, which list includes among others the names of the Chairman of the Society and himself. Mr. Pollock also agrees to act as Local Hon. Sec. for Larkhall and District, and I am pleased to add his name to our list as below.

Practical Help for the League.

Mr. J. W. Parkes, of Southsea, in sending his subscription for membership, writes: "If you care to send any leaflets I shall be pleased to place them on my counter, as one means of bringing CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE to the public notice." I need scarcely say that I should be pleased to send a number of the leaflets to any member who would assist the LEAGUE in this very practical manner.

More Local Hon. Secs.

Since our last issue the following gentlemen have kindly consented to act as Local Hon. Secs. for their respective towns. We have now the help of sixty or more Local Hon. Secs., and membership may be made either through any of the gentlemen whose names have been published during the past five or six weeks, or direct to me. In the former case fanciers entering the LEAGUE will be benefiting their own local society both in the competition for our prizes for recruiting and in the allocation of half of their subscriptions towards the special prize fund for their own show.

Morley, near Leeds, Mr. D. Holliday, 25, Wesley Street.

Croydon and Thornton Heath, Mr. H. W. Child, 44, Frant Road, Thornton Heath.

Larkhall, Mr. Jas. Pollock, 57, Church St.

Our Badges.

The fresh supply of Rolled Gold Brooches is now to hand, and there will be no further delay in sending either these or any of the other patterns. I have sent Brooches to all those members who have been unavoidably kept waiting. If any have been accidentally overlooked I shall be glad to hear, and the omission shall at once be rectified.

Our New Seals.

These pretty seals have given great satisfaction, and orders are coming in by every post. The price is eightpence per hundred, post free. Smaller quantities at the hundred rate, but with one penny extra for postage. They are an ornament to envelopes, notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc., and all members should use them. They are printed in colours and gold in exact facsimile of our badges.

A Lady invalid and our Seals.

Miss L. Yalden, of Guildford, writes: "Through ill-health I have had for three years to leave off all kinds of work, but I was allowed to take up the hobby of cage-bird keeping, which I hope never to give up. I have got all my knowledge and help through CAGE BIRDS, and have become an enthusiastic bird-lover. As I am getting stronger, I would like some coloured seals, for which I enclose stamps. I do a great deal of writing, and I think they will attract others to make enquiries about the LEAGUE. I certainly shall do what little I can for CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, which cannot fail to be a gigantic success."

OUR FREE BOOKLETS.

I have still some of each of the sixpenny pamphlets on British Bird Culture and on Canary and Hybrid Culture, and, as long as they last, one of either will be sent gratis to all new members applying for a copy at the time of joining. Those of the old members who have not yet had a copy may receive one of those reserved for them on sending a penny stamp for postage. Only one copy of either book can be sent free either to new members or old, and when the stock in hand is exhausted I may not be able to get a fresh supply, so that those who would make sure of getting one of these useful pamphlets should send on their application with their membership fee without delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AND BADGES.

The subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is one shilling annually, and the badges sixpence or one shilling. The sixpenny badges are in three forms: (1) a button for coat lapel. (2) a pendant for watch chain, (3) a brooch for lapel, cycling cap, or for lady's wear. The badges at one shilling each are mounted in 9-carat rolled-gold, and are in two forms only: (1) a pendant for watch chain, (2) a brooch for a lady or for cycling cap or coat lapel. Members should distinctly state which form they prefer.

JUNIOR BRANCH.

PATRONS.

Ladies or gentlemen who are in sympathy with the objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE may give practical expression to that sympathy by becoming PATRONS of the LEAGUE and either making a lump sum donation to its funds or subscribing an annual amount of a guinea or upwards. One-half of such donation or subscription may be allotted to any individual object of the LEAGUE.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The qualification for Vice-Presidentship is an annual subscription of not less than half a guinea, and one-half of this subscription may be allotted to either the Literature Fund, the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be given at any show nominated by the subscriber. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the LEAGUE, to advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

A well-attended meeting was held September 2nd, "The Earl of Cathcart," Munster Square, N.W., Mr. W. Gilbert in the chair. A balance sheet of the Y.B. show was presented, showing a small profit. The autumn show was fixed for November 4th, at the above house, Mr. W. Shakespeare being appointed judge. Classes were suggested for champions: Nor. 2, Yorks 2, Crests and C.-B. 2, Cinn. 2. Novices: Nor. 2, Yorks 2, Crests and A.O.V. 1 each, Hybrids 3, Brit. 6, For. 1, and Scil. 2. Several specials were given and promised. Next meeting, 16th Sept., as above.—O. Heine, Official Reporter.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

The patronage of the above club has been granted to the following shows:—Champion and Novice: Birmingham, October 18th and 19th, judge, T. Heath; Wolverhampton, October 29th and 30th, judge, J. Robson; West Bromwich, November 8th, judge, J. H. Payne; Derby, December 2nd and 4th, judge, J. Robson. Owing to the close proximity of several shows applying for patronage, the committee could only grant same to four shows in the Champion section. Members will be notified in due course of the two shows to complete the competition. Members are particularly requested to mark all their entries on entry form M.C.Y.C.C.—Beck and Andrews, Secs.

PAISLEY, TANNAHILL O.S.

Meeting held September 2nd, Mr. Lockie's, 2, St. James Street, Mr. R. Neil (President) in chair. There was a good turn-out of members. Mr. T. Hamilton gave report of Amalgamation meeting re alteration of hall for our next show, which is to be held in the new Co-operative Hall, Causeyside Street. A motion was passed that the prize cards be the same as last year. Treasurer requested that all contributions be paid by the second meeting in October. All the present officials were nominated for re-election. The Chairman then took account of young birds bred, when the 13 members present were found to have between them 91 young. Sec. informed members that 16 specials had been secured for our shows. Any other member wishing to add to same might do so at once.—John Stewart, Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held ante-room of Drill Hall, Mr. Wm. Duff presiding. Very few new members turned up and membership was closed as far as competition for local cup was concerned. Secretary intimated we had received the patronage of the following specialist clubs since last meeting: Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland, and the Fife and Kinross Norwich P.C.; also the Border Fancy C.C. Mr. T. Wildridge reported he had received a silver cup for the Society, to be given to best unflighted Norwich Plainhead bred by a member, and to be competed for yearly. Mr. T. Wildridge was unanimously appointed in place of Mr. Taylor, who was unable to find time to devote to this position. Agreed, that a meeting be held at Mr. H. Kelso's, West End, 30th October, and a preceding meeting in Bay Horse Tavern, 9th Sept., when specials will be ballotted and stewards appointed.—Wm. Whiteford, Sec.

HALIFAX O.S.

Meeting held Plummet Line Hotel, September 2nd, Mr. Lee presiding, when a good turn up of members and friends listened to a most interesting lecture on "Local British birds; their habits, where found, and also how to feed and treat them in captivity," by Mr. Greenwood (Hebden Bridge), a gentleman with wide experience on this subject. He dealt with most of the numerous birds to be found in the district, and then went on to describe the different materials they use, and the shape of nest each species makes, and the various ways of catching them, and how to get food for them. His method of getting ants' eggs and wasps' nests was very interesting. He brought a good number of specimens of seeding plants, which he named and described as food for the different birds. Questions were asked and answered, after which a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Greenwood, proposed by Mr. Lord and seconded by Mr. Holroyd, for his able lecture.—F. Burdekin, Assistant Sec.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A. VERSUS WINDHILL O.S.

These societies met on Baildon Green on August 26th in a game of cricket. Windhill have not been beaten before this match, but they had to bow the knee this time in a low scoring match. Manningham 45, Windhill 35. They were beaten by good bowling backed up by good fielding, each man on the winning side doing his duty. Manningham will begin to think they are the champion bird society at cricket, having won the last five matches.—H. Grange.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Meeting held Nelson's Temperance Hotel. Mr. P. Thorn presided. Report of Mule Show read and adopted. As the members are to be favoured by a lecture from Mr. F. Bowman on "Wild Seeds and Plants" at October meeting a large attendance is requested; it should prove a most instructive lecture. Several items in connection with annual show were taken up, and decided upon. The club are about to lose one of their most enthusiastic members in Mr. R. Rennie, who sails shortly for Sydney. This being all the business a vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchinson, Sec.

CUMNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held September 2nd, Co-op. Hall, Auchinleck, President (Mr. Kinnear) in chair, a good turn-out of members being present, for the selection of a cup. Mr. Brown put before them four different designs to select from, and one very handsome cup was selected to the satisfaction of all. It has to be won on most points in any one section, and it becomes the property of the winner who wins it three times, but not necessarily in succession. The winner also receives a medal along with cup. The fixing-up of classes was gone on with; classes as follows:—Scotch Fancies 4, Norwich (natural colour class included) 6, Borders 10, British 9, Mule or Hybrid 1, British (for boys only) 1; also a gift class—a total of 31 classes, two less than last year. Next meeting fixed for 30th September.—Joseph Nutt, Sec.

We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. The handbook of the Yorkshire Union has just been issued. It is, as usual, admirably got up. The book contains, among other things, a list of the delegates' names and addresses, the general and show rules and regulations, and a list of the Union shows. But the principal feature is that under the name of each society affiliated to the Union are given particulars of its place and time of meeting, the names and addresses of its members, etc. Eleven Union show schedules are published, and the balance-sheet for 1910-11, showing a balance to the good of £35 2s. 10½d. The handbook reflects much credit on the popular hon. sec., Mr. H. Hill, whose task in preparing it must have been a very heavy one.

London is to have a Permanent Exhibition of Patents. The Exhibition will be situated in a central position, and will be open to the public all the year round. There will be no charge for admission. The object is to establish a centre where inventors may display their patents for the purpose of attracting the attention of possible purchasers, not only in the British Isles, but visitors will be received at the Exhibition from all parts of the world and conducted through the various sections by expert demonstrators, who will not only be able to point out the merits of each patent, but will be able to quote for any country in the world for same. Further particulars are contained in the prospectus, which may be had on application to the Administration Office, Patents Exhibition, 165, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Winter Visitor.

No instance of the Jack Snipe breeding in the United Kingdom has been recorded. The birds come here from the far north in October, leaving again in March and April; but they are constantly moving, and may be plentiful in one spot to-day and missing to-morrow.

Young Cuckoos.

The old Cuckoos have left us, but the big young ones still haunt the place of their birth, and some will no doubt remain several weeks yet, especially if the weather should continue to be good. As the youngsters are so loth to leave their homes, one is tempted to ask the question, Do they return to the same haunt the following season? A few rings placed upon young ones would soon furnish the answer.

A Many-nest Builder.

A peculiarity of the Sea Magpie (so called on account of its black and white plumage, although its real name is Oyster-Catcher) is the number of nests it forms and then deserts before making one quite to its liking. One may sometimes find several of these attempts quite close to each other. Whether this is done for the sake of occupation, or on account of a difficulty to please itself, it would be hard to say.

Notice to Cats!

One day last June a friend came to me to see if I could find a means of preserving the lives of a family of Blue Tits whose home was in a hole of a tree just large enough for the old birds to enter, and only a few inches from the ground. The only enemies to fear were cats, and all day long one or two could be seen watching the home of the young family. How to save them from sure death we could not think, until I remembered reading about another such nest of young birds being saved by digging a small hole in the ground and burying up to the neck a small uncorked bottle of strong ammonia. This we did with good results, for next day I saw one of the tormenting cats take just one sniff at the newly-turned earth, jump sky high, and fly towards home for dear life. After that the birds were left in peace.—Sent by Master J. F. Huckvale, 35, Rother Street, Stratford-on-Avon.

Notes on the Breeding of Norwich Canaries.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. J. Hillman before the Abersychan and Dis. C.B.S. on Sept. 2nd.

First, with regard to the bird room and cages. I prefer an 18-inch breeding cage; it is easy to keep clean and takes up less room, for most of our room is limited. It is very essential to ventilate your room well for the health of your birds; only mind to avoid all draughts.

Having got your room into shape the next thing will be to choose your stock. I would advise you to place yourself in the hands of a reliable breeder, one you know breeds his own winners. Tell him what you require, and try to buy your birds as near as possible to those depicted in Cage Birds from time to time. I also advise you to buy as good birds as ever your pocket will allow, as it is less expense to buy good stock at the start than to have inferior birds.

I like nice size on the cock's side, with as good colour as possible. The hen you must have as typical as possible. I don't mind if the hen is a little on the small side, but I prefer having the pair as good in size as possible, there is nothing worse than to have your birds with small head and neck and yet good body, or vice-versa.

Try to have your birds no later than December, thus giving them time to become accustomed to you and your room. Feed them on a good Canary seed until February, then give them a little mixed seed; on alternate days give a little food with a pinch of maw seed.

Saving Time and Trouble.

I would advise you to keep the cock in the next cage to the hen with which you intend to pair him, as some hens pair up by the call; and by doing this you will save a lot of trouble. The cock will be in full song when he is ready for breeding, and you can tell when the hen is ready by seeing her flapping her wings. By having your birds in good condition you will save a lot of time.

I always trim the hen around the vent, and cut her nails to prevent her from pin-holing the eggs. Another important thing is to see that you have your nest hanging a little above the perch, as by having the nest below the perch the hen is liable to fly out of the nest on to the perch, carrying a young bird under her wings and dropping it to the bottom of the cage. If she does so, and the bird appears to be dead, take it out of the cage, place it between both hands, and breathe through the hands until you feel life; then place it back in the nest. You will save many a bird by this method. I also advise putting sawdust on the bottoms of the cages, as it often saves eggs if they are dropped from perches.

When your birds are paired don't put the nest in too soon, but give them plenty of nest material to play with; and don't forget to give the hen a little inga seed to prevent egg binding. If you get a hen that appears egg bound make sure first she is really egg-bound. If you handle her be very careful so as not to break the egg or it may cause the death of the hen. Get a knitting pin and warm it; then with it drop a spot of castor oil into the vent. If this doesn't ease her, get a small jug or cup, and fill it with hot water; place a piece of muslin over the top, and then hold the hen with the vent as near as possible to the muslin, but be very careful to see that she doesn't catch cold after this.

Eggs and Young.

Take the egg out of nest each morning as laid until the hen has laid her third egg; then in the evening place the three eggs back. Also give the eggs a good dusting with Keating's powder. I always take the cock away, and leave the hen to sit and rear her young. You can run the cock with two hens if you wish; but some prefer to let the cock remain with the hen to help to feed the young, though there is a danger then of the hen coming on to nest again before the young are out of the nest. You will have to watch this very keenly, as the hen may commence to pluck the young. Take the young, and place them in a nursery cage, and hang this on the front of the breeding cage. Also give them a little egg food. The old birds will also feed them, but as soon as you are satisfied that all the young birds are eating I would advise you to place them in a cage by themselves; and give them a little crushed seed sprinkled on their egg food.

Now, I think, comes the most critical time—the weaning of the young on to seed. More birds die at this period than at any other time. Young birds are like young pigs—they don't know when they have had enough to do them good They gorge themselves, causing inflammation of the bowels. Prevention, of course, is better than cure, and I would advise you to give them some milk sop sprinkled with maw seed, say two or three times a week. Also give tincture of gentian (about 8 drops) in the drinking water; give this until they commence to moult.

I don't advise breeding too late, as late-hatched birds don't come through their moult before the cold weather sets in, so that they don't pay for the extra trouble. Do not take more than three nests off a pair at the most.

A strain of Norwich that will throw exhibition birds is not made in one season. A year or two may pass before you get a good grip of the possibilities of your birds or before you can pair up with a certainty of breeding birds that will hold their own in good company. The breeder who introduces birds from this, that, or the other room, and pairs up without regard to the proper shape and pedigree of his birds, is not likely to be very successful on the show-bench. But the fancier who is willing to plod on with a keen eye to type and to getting a knowledge of in-breeding will arrive at his goal the first. Now if your strain of birds is all right, in a year or two you will be able to pair up and know what to expect. But my advice is to pair old cocks with young hens or vice versa. But mind you don't pair two birds having the same fault. If you should have a hen that is a bit weak in the neck, pair a cock that is extra good in this respect to her. Don't pair birds any nearer than half-brothers or half-sisters.

The most essential thing in Norwich breeding is to select birds having good broad skulls and stout necks with good sound chests—birds that are short in body and tail and that have good bold eyes with plenty of colour.

British Softbilled Birds.

How I Feed & Treat Them.

By Miss C. D. FITZMAURICE (Kilrush, Co. Clare).

Well Worth Keeping.

I cannot speak of the Robin without mentioning the Hedge Warbler or Hedge Sparrow—"Tommy Fox," as they call it in the country. With its steel blue and brown plumage, neat demure little form and cheery song, it is well worth keeping. The same treatment as that advised for the Robin suits it. They are very wicked to each other. One bird I had was named "Jacky-kill-em-all," and indeed he deserved the title, for never an unfortunate Hedge Warbler went into the room with "Jacky," but he was sooner or later "brutally murdered." "Jacky" I had for three years, during which time he lived on yellow meal made into porridge with an egg (the food softbills ate and thrived on in my early bird keeping days), and never once was he ill. Robins, Blackbirds, Thrushes and Larks were also kept in the very pink of condition on this apparently hopeless food. I had a Blackbird then which would have turned any exhibitor green with envy—tame, large, well-formed, of intense jetty black flawless plumage, with orange yellow bill and ceres. Yet he never saw any food but the yellow meal, and, of course, plenty of garden fruits and insects in summer.

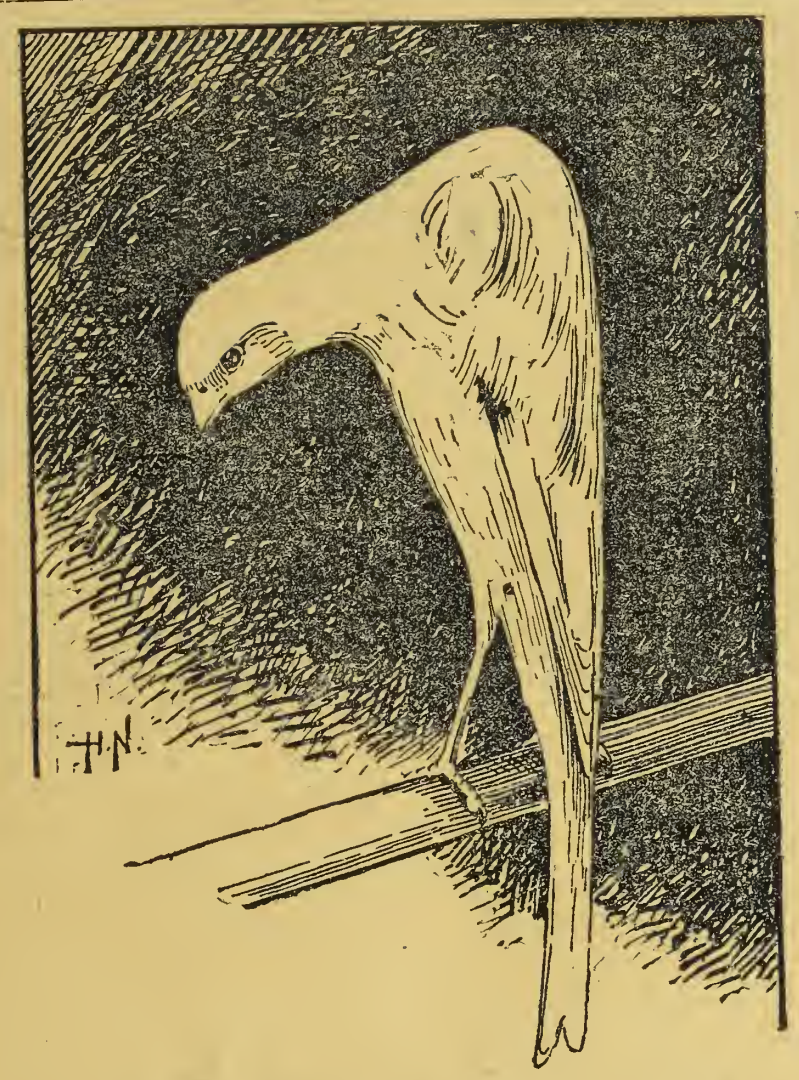
The Dainty Treecreeper.

I have one specimen of the exquisitely dainty tree-mouse, as the Tree Creeper is called, and it is kept in a cage three feet high by two feet long by one foot broad, the back of the cage being formed of a board on which is glued a piece of elm and fir bark. This idea was my own; I have always tried to imitate natural conditions as nearly as possible for my birds, and it has certainly been a success in "Midget's" case, for the tiny creature is in perfect health, and has been so for over a year. It is fed on my best insectivorous mixture, and I am constantly giving it pieces of bark from dead trees. I have never seen it bathe, and as I have never possessed another of the same kind or known anyone else to have one, I am not aware if this is peculiar or otherwise.

Tame, Dainty and Sweet Voiced.

Tame, dainty, sweet-voiced, the wee "Willow Wren" (Willow Warbler) will always claim a warm place in my heart. It is useless trying to hand-rear the species. They settle down to cage life without the least trouble, and the hand-rearing of such tiny creatures is almost a hopeless task. It is one of the birds for which I advocate an all-wire cage, provided, of course, that it is kept out of draughts; and as in the case of the Blue Tit, the wires should be close together. The bird is a bit fastidious in the matter of its feeding, and should get plenty of live food. And it is a little hard to meat the species off. It delights in a bath; but oh! be careful that the dish is not too large, or you may be grieved to find on going to remove it that "Will" is represented by a draggled bunch of feathers in the bottom of the bath.

My "Will" has a strange taste; he loves a drop of cream, and will come on my finger to get it. Fruit also he revels in, strawberries and raspberries particularly; such evidently agree with him. A fly round the room, with doors and windows well secured, is also greatly enjoyed, and a dash after a small white butterfly opens to him all the delights of the chase without any of its attendant heartless cruelty. Curious to say, "Will" and "Fairy," to whom I will shortly refer, are the best of friends, and when let out fly about together with cheery chirps, while they keep up a constant conversation, like the naughty little gossips they are when in their respective homes.



A Winning Little Pet.

Ever since reading Mrs. Brightwen's charming account of her Lesser Whitethroat "Fairy," I was possessed by a desire to own a similar bird. Quite unexpectedly I stumbled on the Wren-like, feather-lined nest of this bird which is not nearly so well known as its larger relative. Of course, two had to be taken, and of these I actually succeeded, by constant care, in rearing one, and she was, of course, also named "Fairy." It is a queer coincidence that my "Fairy," like Mrs. Brightwen's should have escaped and come back of her own free will, though as I have not the time to attend so closely to her I have not made her quite so tame as that lady's. Yet she is a winning little pet, and she and her wee sweetheart "Will" are a pretty sight.

"Fairy's" favourite tit-bit is an aphis infected rose shoot, and she make short work of the herd of "ants' cows." I fancy, did she live near an ant hill, the ants would have to shut up their dairy if they keep such a thing. She, like "Will," inhabits an all-wire cage, and she has beech twigs for perches, for she prefers them to the ordinary fixed ones. Certainly they keep her feet in splendid order. "Fairy," after the manner of all good little ladies, is not a suffragette; she follows "Will" about most dutifully, and listens to his sweet little song attentively. Her own song is very meekly proffered, sounding more like a compliment to "Will" than an effort on her own part.

Some Softfood Recipes.

I will close these few notes by giving my recipes for softbill food, as I prefer home-made to packet mixtures. For delicate birds: three parts biscuit meal, two parts best ants' eggs, two parts ground silkworm cocoons, one part egg flake, one part dried flies; for Robins, etc.: two parts pea meal, two parts biscuit meal, one part egg flake, one part ants' eggs, one part dried flies. I do not, of course, stick up for my mixtures as being the best, but I have succeeded in keeping my birds in good health on them, though I am a great believer in live food and fruit.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(For rules, see last week's "Cage Birds," page 138.)

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Prolonged Moult, etc.

Bert Johns.—You omit to say how long the bird has been moulting, though you should know the moulting season is not near the end yet for a great number of birds, and if this one only commenced dropping feathers at a reasonably early time, there is really nothing to worry about. Some birds naturally moult very gradually. To hasten matters, keep bird quite on the warm side and cover cage over so as to keep it in semi-darkness for a time. Before covering it see it is quite free from red mites. To cure the perverted appetite give ten drops syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops whisky and four each tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba for two or three days. Also give a green plantain stalk each day, and a bit of cuttlefish to peck at; and a mealworm occasionally will prove beneficial. You must not expect it to sing until moult is finished. In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake twice a week, on two other days a similar quantity of the mixed seed advised to "Pit Laddie," and on two other days a pinch of maw. Yes, egg-food substitutes certainly have their uses. As tit-bits during the winter and spring, and for birds not breeding, many of the foods on the market may be most usefully employed, but whether they can wholly take the place of home-made egg-food is a matter of opinion.

More Indian Seeds.

F. H. C.—Since replying last week your other samples have come to hand. The gingelly I can only describe as I did last week. It appears to be merely colour varieties of what we know as sesame, and until I had made prolonged trials with it in actual practice, I would not undertake to advise its use in any other way, which is, to give it in small quantities in conjunction with gold of pleasure to help to bring backward birds into breeding condition. This is the best use I have ever found for these two seeds. In a climate like yours I should certainly be chary of using such oily seeds liberally. The inga, or niger, is the same as we use, and is of very excellent quality. It is a very stimulating seed, for which reason, and its exceptionally oily qualities, it is, even in this country, more suitable for very moderate use as a tit-bit, or occasional change, than to form a material portion of the regular diet. The rape is practically the same as would be termed here "summer," or "German" rape. It differs only in being decidedly larger, and lighter, and brighter in colour. These differences may be due simply to climate and soil, if, as I take it, this seed is grown in India. If my surmise is correct, I should term it a very fine sample of summer rape. It is probably a new crop, being a trifle strong in flavour, but this would largely disappear, and the seed be improved, by a few months' careful storage. As regards tests, I would not mind trying the effects of, say, a few pounds of cumbu, korra, and gingelly—these being the most likely to be serviceable.

A Mixture.

Pit Laddie.—Sorry you had so much difficulty about papers. The latter was an error which has now been rectified. For the prolonged moulting of the Yorkshire follow general advice given in last reply. Keep in separate cage, rather on the warm side, quite free from draughts; and cover over cage front until feathers cease dropping. Feed on plain Canary as staple. Every second day give a pinch of rape, and on the alternating days twice each week for a month half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, dusted with flowers of sulphur each time for the first fortnight, and afterwards with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it; in both cases sprinkled finally with maw. On two other days each week give a pinch of a mixture of two parts each hemp and inga, one part each black rape and millet, a half part each linseed, teazle, maw, gold of pleasure, and a sprinkling of yellow mustard and chopped sunflower seeds. Add to the water every second day for a week, 20 drops of whisky and so much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence; then omit the potash and add six drops oxymel of squills and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Continue this for another week. (2) See if ruffled hens are pestered with red mites. If not, treat as above for a fortnight, excepting the eucalyptus mixture. (3) Seeds are much the best stored in canvas bags provided they are safe from mice attacks, etc.; wood, or cardboard boxes, with lids are next best; tins are least suitable of all on account of liability to "sweating" the contents, but this can be obviated by piercing the lid with a number of minute holes to allow free ventilation. Then they are very suitable, and safe from rodents. (4) The following are titles of coloured plates, all of Yorkshires, which our manager will send you post free for 2d. each. The first-named is probably the one you most want. "Extremes in colour," "Three Champion Yorkshires," "Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires."

Blind and Bald (E. Higginson).—(1) There is absolutely no cure for the bird that has gone blind. No treatment will be of the least service, so you may as well refrain from worrying bird with supposed cures. Cage it by itself in a nice bright place, arrange its perches, and seed and water vessels, as conveniently as possible, putting seed and water in small vessels inside cage if necessary, until it has found the way to the vessels hung on outside, when it will very quickly accommodate itself to the conditions and live quite comfortably for the term of its natural life. (2) Treat the hen on the general lines advised to "Bert Johns," to get it to go through a quick and good moult. But give a pinch of maw every second day and as soon as she shows signs of beginning to moult give the crushed sponge cake every second day alternately with the maw, and for the first fortnight dust it lightly each time with flowers of sulphur. During this fortnight add to the water on the days when you give maw 20 drops of whisky, a few blades of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece. Slightly moisten the bare place twice a week for a month with a feather dipped in strong vinegar.

Roller Cock (I.D.).—There is probably nothing at all wrong with the bird, the manner of sleeping being most likely due to habit. You might add a pinch of Epsom salts to its water for two days, and a few quassia chips to its bath daily for a time in case it is troubled with grey lice. Examine the bird to see if this is so.

Two Questions (A Constant Reader, Rotherhithe).—(1) No, sawdust will not hurt the birds, but you must supply gritty sand also in a shallow tin in one corner of the cage. Possibly your birds are too loose in bowels owing to wrong feeding. You should send a query on the subject separately for Mr. Weston. (2) A good "seed mixture" for a tit-bit consists of two parts each hemp and inga, one part each black rape and millet, a half-part each linseed, teazle, maw, gold of pleasure, and a sprinkling of yellow mustard and chopped sunflower.

Samples of Sand (A. W. H.).—No. 1 sample, from the Trent, is a very nice gritty sand, and would do very well indeed for general use for birds. It is just a trifle dusty, but not more so than some samples on the market. Still, if you can contrive to collect it quite free from dust it will be all the better. Of course, you must get it from a portion of the river which is free from contamination. No. 2, the white sample, is, I believe, simply "silver sand," which can be bought at almost any florist's. Except as an aid to cleanliness it is quite useless in a bird-cage, and as No. 1 will serve this purpose just as well, No. 2 is not worth your consideration.

General (Somerset).—You should have sent queries on separate sheets for Messrs. Page and Weston. See their replies. Practically any kind of Canary would answer your requirements as regards thriving and breeding under conditions described, but I really do not know whether they would answer the clause about being "not noisy." This depends solely upon your own ideas regarding quietude. Trained Rollers or Border Fancy would be the most likely candidates among Canaries, but a really healthy cock in breeding form even of these varieties can make himself heard. Personally, I should not call him very noisy if there were not "too many of him."

Sore Feet (Constant Reader).—See the cage floor is kept strewn with clean gritty sand to prevent moisture laying about or excreta adhering to the feet. Also see that the bowels are kept regular, and if loose and watery regulate this by proper food, for which you might get the No. 5 Nutshell booklet. To relieve the condition, dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in a saucerful of hot water, and whilst still fairly warm catch the bird and bathe the feet and legs for a few minutes, carefully removing any dirt or filth adhering to the feet and continuing the bathing a minute or two after they are quite clean. Then dry, and gently anoint them with a little zinc ointment, wiping off any surplus before returning bird to cage. Repeat this daily for a few days until the feet are well. If the bird is an old one with large, coarse scales, treat as advised to "G.J.F.Y." a fortnight ago.

Flying Loose in Room (Urias Mason).—Yes, the birds would undoubtedly breed successfully under these conditions, but it would be advisable not to introduce the cocks until about the middle of next March at the earliest, otherwise you would probably have a great number of unfertile eggs, representing so much wasted energy. You would do well to get the early parts of "Our Canaries," which deal with all such matters as these. A small fir in a tub would be as good a centre-piece as anything, as you could remove it occasionally outside into a downpour of rain to get a needful washing. Plants in such situations soon get unsightly, and require a good wash occasionally, so that two or three in tubs are best, one or two remaining outside recuperating whilst one is "on service" indoors. You should also fix up a few evergreen branches around the walls.

Norwich Hen and Hemp (E. T.).—The hemp is a very poor sample, and not fit for feeding Canaries. Discard it, and if you cannot get some which when broken open shows a milk-white, oily-looking kernel, use none at all for a time. Try following treatment for a fortnight or so. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a quarter teaspoonful of maw, and either a morsel of banana or a green plantain stalk, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw. If she refuses the sponge cake with oil, omit the latter and add two finely minced mealworms each time instead. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give the iron, soda, and acid mixture in water as previously advised.

Sits Puffed Out (Mrs. Christie).—The recent egg-binding has evidently weakened this hen considerably, and I doubt whether she will regain her former activity now until she has got well through the moult. Give a staple of plain canary seed, with half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately every second day. On the alternating days give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and in the first week dust it with flower of sulphur each time. Also give a pinch of maw every second day, and a morsel of banana or green plantain stalks three times a week. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. See Mr. Weston's column for Linnet and Mule replies.

Losing Young (B. W. Silvester).—There must be something seriously wrong with your feeding, or the condition under which your birds are kept, for these deaths to occur so persistently. Had you given full details regarding these matters I might have been of some assistance to you, as it is, I can only advise you in a general way, but if you will send on particulars indicated I will do my best to help you. Meantime, see that the cage and perches are quite clean and well strewn with gritty sand. Keep seed and water vessels scrupulously clean. Feed on plain canary only as staple. Every second day give about half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and twice a week on the alternating days a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "Bannockburn," and on two other days either half a teaspoonful of egg food per bird, or, as a variety, an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, or crushed sponge cake. As soon as a bird shows signs of "going thick," cage it separately, give a morsel of bread and milk, as above, with the addition of two drops of cod liver oil emulsion, each day for a week or so, and ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food daily for a week or two. You would be well advised to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our Manager, and see if you can discover where your treatment fails. If another death occurs soon send the body to Mr. Yates for post mortem, as per rules, and let me know report, then I shall be in a better position to give you good advice.

Difficulty in Perching (E. S. M.).—You should have examined bird's feet as it stood on perch to see if any accident had caused deformity of toes. Do this at once, and if any toe (or toes) is deformed adopt one or other of the devices frequently named in this column to correct it, using, of course, the one that is most applicable to the case. If nothing is wrong with the feet, treat as follows for a fortnight. Give a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and either a piece of ripe banana or a green plantain stalk, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and well sprinkled with maw seed. Stop all other seeds and foods for the time being. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey, 10 of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, for one day, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight.

Persistent Diarrhœa (E. D.).—You ought to have said whether your water supply was "hard" or "soft." Try following course, which I think will be all that is necessary. Keep a staple diet of equal parts canary and summer rape available, and see that the rape is sound, sweet, mild to the taste, and quite free from a very small mite that sometimes infests this seed. In addition to this staple give a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed and a morsel of ripe banana every second day, and on the alternate days a little dry crushed plain biscuit and a few grains of hemp—see that this also is quite good and sound, and has a milk-white kernel when broken. Give no green-food for a time. Add a teaspoonful of lime water to each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water daily for a time, gradually withdrawing it when the bowels appear quite healthy again. If this does not set matters right in a few days give a morsel of bread and milk instead of the dry biscuit a few times, and dust with carbonate of bismuth.

Sleepy and Ruffled (A. M. P.).—It is quite possible a chill from the open window might have brought about a crisis, but I think the real trouble is a rather hard moult. Keep it caged separately, and in a fairly warm and equable temperature, and cover the cage over to expedite the moult. Give a staple of plain canary, and each day for a week (and every second day afterwards until better) give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cage with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Every second day for the first week slightly dust this with flowers of sulphur. Give also every second day a pinch of summer rape, and either a morsel of ripe banana or a green plantain stalk. Limit the diet to this for a fortnight or so. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whiskey and 5 or 6 of malt extract every second day for a fortnight. A mealworm a day, if available, would be beneficial.

Lost Use of Legs (Bannockburn).—You should have given more details as to symptoms and your general management, as the relief or cure of this condition must depend very largely upon the cause. Try what a month of the following will do. Keep in a moderate-sized cage with firmly-fixed, suitably-sized perches, and in a bright, well-ventilated position, but quite free from draughts. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day add half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana or green food, and on the alternating days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle and broken groats. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the wires for it to nibble at. In the drinking water give 20 drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, then four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for the remainder of the month.

Garden Aviary (Novice).—I presume you intend to let the birds fly loose in this aviary, in which case the covered-in portion will accommodate at its full capacity about 25 birds and the wire flight about 20 more. But as the birds will occupy both portions simultaneously and will, or should, all sleep in the covered part, 30 birds would be ample to put in. You omit to say whether you have bred with birds flying loose, or in cages, so I cannot suggest the cause of your rather poor results. I hope what is lacking in quantity is well made up in quality. As regards your definite queries: (1) If well sheltered from rain and cold winds I think the aviary will answer admirably for your intended purpose. (2) Answered above. (3) I do not think it would be quite safe to introduce the Budgerigars. The space is too limited to risk such an association. (4) A staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and three to four times a week, according to severity of weather, a little of the seed mixture advised to "Pit Laddie."

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Choice of British Birds.

Robin.—You put a very big proposition before me. There is a wide choice indeed, but as you are a beginner, some of the very best singers must be left out for the present. The choicest musicians are to be found among the insectivorous birds, but you would do well to limit your early ambitions within the ranks of the seed-eaters. There will be time to think of such superlative songsters as the Blackcap and Nightingale after you have gained some experience among the more easily kept birds. Fortunately it is easy to name a bird which possesses a high degree of musical ability, and which offers little difficulty in its keeping. This is our little brown friend the Linnet, a bird kept by thousands of enthusiasts who have a separate name for each little turn of the bird's song. The Goldfinch is little inferior to the Linnet in musical talent, but many beginners fail in keeping this beautiful bird. The Chaffinch is degrees behind these two in natural song, but may be trained to vary the monotony of its own repertoire by indulging in imitations of other birds. You might make a start with either or all of the three birds named, and in your first attempts you cannot do better than obtain the "Nutshell" booklet on each bird. Nutshell No. 12, "How to Moult British Birds," and No. 6, "Ailing Cage Birds, and how to cure them," will also be of great assistance to you in any little difficulties that may arise. It is of course unnecessary for me to say that these columns are always at your service if further advice is needed.

A Muling Query (Ignorant).—Of course a Norwich Canary can will breed with a Linnet, hundreds of Mules are so bred.

A Linnet out of sorts (H. W. Wood).—Give your bird on alternate days for a week an aperient of sulphate of soda as recommended to Mrs. Christie. This will probably be all that is necessary, but if the bird seems somewhat low in condition after treatment, write again and I shall be pleased to help you.

Sexing Redpolls (V. Moore).—In a wild state there can be no mistaking a hen for a cock Redpoll. The cock has crimson upon his crown, breast, and upper tail coverts, and a well marked bib, while the hen has very little red on her crown, none on her breast or tail coverts, and scarcely any bib. After the autumn moult the crimson markings of the cock are hidden by the pale edges of the new feathers but can generally be seen if these are blown up. In captivity the cock does not reproduce his crimson, but shows a dingy orange crown in place of the red, which he would have attained in a wild state. His bib generally gets smaller, but is always larger than that of a hen. The lacing of the under body is generally more heavy in a hen than in a cock.

A Goldfinch Query (Campion).—The bird has evidently been kept in a small cage, and is not yet used to the more extensive quarters. He will soon appreciate the change, and be all the better for it. There is no means of telling his exact age. At two years and a half, which you think he has reached, he should be at the tip-top of his form, feet clean and free from scale, eye bright, and plumage at its best, and he should do well for several years.

A Linnet Killed in its Cage (J. Atherley).—It is quite evident that your bird met with a violent end, presumably at the claws of a cat, although you say no cat could get to the cage. Cats are resourceful creatures where birds are concerned, and they will reach apparently inaccessible places. I don't think the bat you noticed was responsible for the murder.

Treatment of newly received Linnets (Linnet).—Your birds were probably suffering from want of water, especially in the torrid weather which we have lately experienced. They should have been offered water from which the chill had just been taken, and watched to see they did not at first take too much. Perhaps you gave them cold water, and they overdrank themselves after their journey. Prepare for your next lot by having ready some wild seeds or some soaked rape or charlock seed, and put them very gradually on to hard seed. See "Nutshell" on the Linnet (No. 2), for full information as to the treatment of freshly-caught birds.

An Outdoor Aviary (Mrs. Christie).—Your Twite-Canaries should do quite well in the position named, especially if you let them have the benefit of your commodious outside flight. The Linnet should have a gentle aperient, say as much sulphate (not sulphite) of soda as will lie on a shilling dissolved in two ounces of water. Give this on alternate days until you see the bird is relieved, afterwards once a week for a time. It is quite natural for it to be getting on to the hard seed now. Please see "Nutshell" (No. 2) for very full information on the proper feeding of a Linnet. Your flight should accommodate quite a number of small birds, fifty or sixty. The sheltered portion should be well lighted or the birds will not use it as they should.

Birds for a Large Cage (Somerset).—"Large cage" is somewhat indefinite. Many of the small foreign birds—Cutthroats, Nutmeg Finches, Mannikins, Bengalese and such like would do well if not too crowded, and would fulfil your requirement of not making too much noise. Nearly all the small foreigners will breed in a cage, but not if they are kept indiscriminately together. Much information is conveyed in "Nutshells" No. 14, 16, 18, 19, and 20, all of which treat of small foreign birds, and you should certainly have these as guides to your first steps. (2) Yes, Bullfinches would do in the conditions named, but the cock Bullfinch is not much of a success as a breeder. You would be more likely to succeed with some other Finch paired up with a Bullfinch hen.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Treatment for Amazons.

J.L.B.—Its diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, with grit, cuttle-bone, and water. I take it from your note water has been withheld for a time, so do not leave it in the cage at present, but permit it to satisfy its thirst two or three times daily; at the end of a month the water can be left in cage continually. As the bird is rather thin, give it a little boiled maize daily—say one tablespoonful—boil till soft, drain off all water, dust with flowers of sulphur, and supply to the bird (this only keeps fresh one day). The boiled maize is in addition to seed mixture, etc. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Keep bowels moving freely (not really loose) with either a few grains of Epsom salts or a little fluid magnesia in the drinking water. Give one quart each: Canary and millet seeds, and one pint each: hemp, wheat, oats, paddy rice, maize, dari, and sunflower seeds. Well mix together, and keep a supply in cage, adding a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply. Report progress a month hence.

What Parrakeet?

A.R.—Your description is not quite complete, but if any have seen the bird they would hardly be likely to make an error, and I expect it is a Quaker. To be quite clear, a rough description of the Quaker Parrakeet would be: Top of head, sides of face, throat and upper breast grey; remainder of under-surface light green; above it is dark green, with the exception of the larger wing and tail feathers, which are blue; beak, legs and feet, flesh colour. Its value is but small, 6s. to 7s. 6d., and the majority of specimens do not talk. Its principal seed mixture should be canary and white millet mixed, and give separately a little hemp, oats and sunflower (mixed), in about equal parts. Lettuce, groundsel, seeding grass, according to season, are the best green foods. Also give a little ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, with water, grit, and cuttlebone. Do not on any account give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. It is more an aviary than a cage bird.

Show Cages.

Zebra.—(1) A glance at a show cage will help you more than yards of print. A good size for a single bird the size of a Pekin Robin, or for a pair of smaller species, is 12 inches across front, the same height, and about nine inches deep—this is a good general size. As regards perches, these are usually fixed to the back of cage, and do not extend right to the front. Personally, I like three—two near bottom of cage, convenient for food hoppers, and one in centre higher up, so that head of bird will not rub against it when on the lower perches, and the latter should be so arranged that the birds do not fray their tails against sides of cages when on them. (2) If the soft food mixture is made merely crumbly moist and not wet, it will need no preservative. If food is sent for use at show it must be sent dry, leaving the show stewards to moisten it when feeding the birds.

Ailing Budgerigar.

S. Tulloch.—I am afraid the hen will never be any good for breeding purposes, and I personally consider the kindest thing would be to let your chemist chloroform it for you. However, you may not care to do this; if not, cage it separately, keep its bowels moving quite freely (not watery-loose) with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—four drops given direct to the beak from a quill—as often as may be required, but once or twice weekly should suffice. Put into the drinking water (Budgies are small drinkers, and only a small glass drinking vessel is required) six drops of Allen and Hanbury's byno-phosphates to each tablespoonful of water. Supply it crushed oats and plain biscuit crushed to the size of oats, in addition to the usual seeds. Do not omit green food—lettuce and seeding grass are about the best.

Improving Plumage of Amazon.

T. Williams.—If you are not giving boiled maize do so, about one tablespoonful daily—boil till soft, drain off all water, and then dust with flowers of sulphur. Also give byno-phosphates in the drinking water, and an aperient as necessary to keep the bowels moving freely but not watery loose. I consider fluid magnesia, one teaspoonful, water two tablespoonfuls, best—this to form the day's drinking water. Yes, birds have parasites; no bird entirely free, but a weekly spray with quassia solution will keep them within natural limit. A good seed mixture is given under our reply "West Indian Parrot" in this issue—fill the hopper in the morning and do not give more for the day so long as there is sound seed left. The following morning clear away all husks and dust out of hopper and refill same. The mixture given makes a good whole; the large seeds may be eaten first; it will then take the others according to its fancy. It should also get ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, grit (not sand), and cuttlebone.

Birds for Northern Aviary.

Freda.—I must repeat what I have said in previous replies that, excepting the Quails, unless you purchase birds that have been out of doors at least two months you must not put them out till spring. You can have Cockatiels, but not Budgerigars; the former, however, while agreeing with Finches, etc., will I fear soon destroy any plants or trees the aviary may contain. You can keep all the birds named in both replies, but it would be necessary to house the Indigo Buntings indoors for the winter months, taking them in about the first week in November, and any of the Waxbills appearing to feel the cold should be similarly treated. You can easily discern this, as normally they are active, cheerful birds with their little voices scarcely ever still, and if they are fit, and cold is not too much for them, their demeanour will be very similar, even during the coldest weather; if they are mopy and dull they must be taken indoors till spring. I trust this makes all clear. As your situation is quite northern, could you arrange a covering for the front of aviary for night use only during winter. Many northern aviculturists tack roofing felt over the roof of aviary in winter, removing it each spring.

Books (H. W. Fennessy).—The only book we publish dealing with this subject is "Foreign Birds for Beginners," which contains a chapter on the general treatment of Foreign Doves. If you choose to send me a stamped addressed envelope (large), per Editor, I will send you a reprint of an article on keeping the Diamond Dove. I have one by me.

Budgerigars (Budgerigar).—(1) The husk should be hung up horizontally, and with the opening on top and towards the light. They are usually so wired; those wired perpendicularly are intended for Finches. (2) Leave them just as they are; there is still time for them to bring off a brood. Get our Nutshell booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our manager; it will help you.

Budgerigars Not Breeding (R. Armstrong, Junr.).—Remove the box and put in a couple of coco-nut husks, as the nesting receptacle must have a concave bottom, or the eggs roll about and get spoiled. If your birds are in breeding condition, the cere of the cock will be blue and that of the hen brown. One often has to wait a year for foreign birds; they do not settle down as quickly as Canaries, and patience must needs be exercised, but I have no doubt but what you'll have some luck next year. Send me a rough sketch of your cage, and I will see if any revision is necessary. Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d., from our Manager, would help you.

Owing to pressure on our space, several answers to Foreign Bird Queries have had to be held over.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. M. Potter.—Upon examination of bird I find a fatty degenerative disease of the liver, and enlargement of the spleen, better known as the milt. Fatty changes of the liver substance sometime arise from a diet too rich in fats and oils. At other times due to a specific organism. In those cases where splenic enlargement accompanies this, it is invariably due to a contagious element, which further occurs as an epizootic, and is responsible, as in your case, for the loss of several birds. It is a contagious disease, the infective material being taken in with the food, and food soiled by the excrement of diseased birds, and not carried in the air. I would advise you to segregate those affected, and to give to each once daily on every alternate day one grain of ammonium chloride (white crystals), and on the intervening days a small pinch of sulphate of soda, each dissolved in the drinking water. It will be necessary to thoroughly clean the cages, and well wash the feeding and water pans, the latter once daily at least, and any cages occupied by the deceased birds should be well disinfected before using again. I have no doubt but that you will soon by these means disperse this troublesome disease.

H. J. Bunyard.—Acute inflammation of the bowels and pneumonia resulting from the introduction of ptomaine generated within the food. Death from this cause is often very sudden, and it is the pneumonia which in nearly all cases is responsible for death. Practise the most scrupulous cleanliness by thoroughly washing the utensils daily in a weak solution of Condy's fluid, giving a little also in the drinking water to which a little glycerine may be added.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Two Snapshots (W. Rolfe).—Thanks for photographs, which we will try and have reproduced in an early issue.

Cuttings (W. Turner, G.H., B.W., and others).—Please accept our thanks for the interesting cuttings sent.

A Report, etc. (E. R. Ridley).—Your communication was addressed to us at 154, Fleet Street, Hull, and consequently did not reach us until after "C.B." had gone to press.

A Doubt About the Peacock (Peacock).—The doubts of your friends have no foundation. The eggs of the Peafowl are fertilised in the same manner as the eggs of other fowls.

Club Notices, Etc. (G. Lawton, G. A. Watson, J Ashurst, and others).—Your communications reached us too late for insertion in our last issue.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held Sept. 5th, Mr. J. Stenhouse (president) in chair. The chairman feelingly spoke of the loss our treasurer, Mr. McConville, had sustained in the death of his infant child, also of the loss to our last secretary, Mr. Ford (his six-year-old boy). A motion of sympathy with both gentlemen was passed. The delegates to the West Fife League gave a satisfactory report. It was agreed that Mr. A. Anderson be appointed auditor in place of Mr. J. Ford. The books that were issued for donations and specials were drawn in, and all the members present paid their membership fee. We are looking forward to having a record show for this part of Scotland. We have the essential things—specialist judges, plenty of specials, and a good classification. We have six cups this year (that is five more than formerly), which says a lot for the way in which our committee have been working. We have a cup for every section (of which there are six), except the Yorkshires; also the Laing cup for best bird in show. We have also secured the patronage of the West Fife C.B. League, Border F.C.C., Fife and Kinross N.F.C., Scottish Crest Club, and the full patronage of the Scottish B.B. and M.C., which means four cups, one trophy, and nine medals—a total of 12 cups, 1 trophy, and 18 medals. I should consider this a record for a show outside a city. I hope the outside fanciers will rally round us, and give us a bumping entry. They need not be afraid to send their birds to Kelty, for the birds will be in the hands of one of the most experienced and best working committees to be found in the whole of Scotland.—A. Dickson, Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting held September 4th. Our chairman and vice-chairman both being absent, Mr. Smith (Gosforth) presided. The following new members were elected: Messrs. J. H. Elliot (Edmonley) and R. Christer (Wallsend). Correspondence was read from the Blayden C.B.S. re classes; it was considered satisfactory. Letter read from Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) offering a paper on any subject the club desired; it was unanimously agreed to ask for a paper on "The Breeding and Staging of the Border Fancies"; and it will be given at our next meeting. Agreed, that we give following specials to be competed for at the shows which have received our patronage. At each show; 2 silver medals (one for champion and one for novice) for member gaining most points with 3 highest birds; also a gold medal for most points over season, and a silver medal for second most points in both champion and novice sections. A silver medal was given by a fancier for best bird at Blayden show. A silver medal for 3rd most points in champions was given by the president, and a hand-painted mantel-piece border will be given for best young bird bred by a novice at Newcastle show. This makes a total already of 18 specials; if any member wishes to add to these, we will gladly accept. The Scotch Fancies compete for a medal for most points, and one for 2nd most points over patronage shows. Messrs. Johnson and Scott were elected representatives for the annual social and distribution of prizes. Novices were then given a half hour, and right good use they made of it. Mr. Johnson was asked a question, and once they got him started they kept him at it, and before he had finished it was as good as a lecture. The secretary is going to be hard on his heels for a lecture. This club is now an assured success, and is already nearly the strongest in the North.—J. N. F. Scott.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held September 7th; chairman, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson. Our chairman performed the pleasing duty of presenting Mr. A. C. Young with the N.F. cup for best British or foreign bird at our late N.F. Show. Following new members elected: Messrs. C. Cattell (Newcastle), J. Johnstone (Wallsend), and Winter (Gosforth). The following clubs' patronages were received: Northern Yorkshire, Green C.A., Cinn. C.C., Northern British B.M. and F.B.C., Northern Border and Scotch F.C. The wording of the Scotch Fancy classes was altered so that all varieties may be shown. Closing date of members' entries was discussed, and the opinion was we could not close earlier than the Monday before the show, but that members could facilitate matters by having their entries in by Saturday or Sunday early. The secretary will not mind the number of callers on the week-end. Will novices please note that in future they may show only in two sections, either open and members or open and novice members; but not in three sections as previously. The secretary received several specials, and would ask members to put their best efforts forth and get all they can, collected or promised, by the special meeting, September 21. We have plenty of room in our new hall for a few extra stalls also. Breeders' adverts., cards, etc., will be arranged for at special meeting, when schedule will be closed.—J. E. Atkinson, Sec.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting held 142, High Street, Edinburgh, 2nd Sept. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. J. Hector (President), the chair was occupied by Mr. T. Adamson (Vice-President), others present being Messrs. W. Aitchison, S. Buglass, J. Logan, J. McLay, J. Winter, J. Young, and the Secretary. Following new members were elected: Messrs. A. Hirst (Accrington), W. M. Cubbin (Motherwell), J. Braidwood (Hamilton), D. J. Kidd and J. Bowman (Forfar), B. Welsh, J. Peters, D. Thomson, and J. Lawrie (Buckhaven), P. Honston, A. Crawford, and A. Paterson (Glasgow). Club patronage was then considered, there being 23 applications. After careful study of dates and judges, same was granted to the undernoted shows: October 20th and 21st, City of Glasgow (A. Cant and A. Chalmers, judges); November 4th, Brechin (W. Bishop); November 10th and 11th (Kirkcaldy (J. Logan); November 18th, Kilmarnock (G. Mitchell); November 25th, City of Dundee (W. Hampton); December 15th and 16th, Aberdeen (J. Sandison); December 30th and Jan. 1st, Scottish National (A. Hirst and J. Sandison). Patronage also granted to Edinburgh, Norwich, Musselburgh, and Glasgow and West of Scotland club shows. Decided, to hold annual club show in conjunction with the Scottish National, Mr. Hirst to judge the unflighted classes confined to members of S.P.C. For the part he took in what has been called the "City of Glasgow scandal," Mr. D. Graham was expelled from the club for all time. Will those members who have not yet paid their subscriptions note that same must be paid early? I would also appeal to members on behalf of the special prize fund, which must be greatly augmented before club show comes off. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated a pleasant meeting.—J. Brown, Sec.

HOLYWOOD & DISTRICT C.B.S.

General meeting held Old Masonic Hall, Ean Hill, Sept. 5th, Mr. W. J. Hunter in chair. A very good attendance of members. Business: Election of show committee, stewards, etc., to discuss arrangements for forthcoming show and passing of show schedule. Correspondence was read and discussed. Some very interesting letters were received from Belfast, Dublin, etc., as to advising us how to arrange annual show to suit all exhibitors. After some general discussion it was decided to ask for patronage of the Y.C.B.S. of Ireland, agreeing to abide by their rules and carry them out as far as possible; secretary to apply for same as early as possible. Show committee elected: Messrs. Hunter, Malcolm, T. Dunwoody, Cole, Devlin, McDowell, Jack Patty, and J. Patty. It was further passed that the arranging of the schedule and catalogue should be kept in the committee's hands. As it was not possible to get through all the business, it was decided to hold a meeting on Oct. 3rd. As business is very important, will all members please attend? There are a few subs. due; it is to be hoped members will pay these as early as possible, so as to get the books cleared before show.—F. Cole, Hon. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Committee meeting held Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, September 9th, Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) in the chair. Owing to the serious illness of the secretary, the undersigned, in accord with the unanimous wish of the committee, accepted the secretaryship until such time as Mr. Mitchell feels himself able to resume his official duties. It was resolved to forward an expression of the committee's deep sympathy with him in his present indisposition, with the hope that his recovery would be rapid and complete. Reference was made to the great loss the club had sustained by the death of a prominent member and fellow-committeeman in the person of Mr. J. Calam (Hull), and the committee requested that a vote of condolence be sent the relatives of deceased. It was unanimously decided to ask Mrs. C. M. Sunderland to allow her name to be added to the list of vice-presidents. The thanks of the meeting were tendered to Percy H. Illingworth, Esq., M.P. (president), for his handsome gift of £5 to the funds, which amount was allotted to the competitions for the coming season as follows:—First prize, open section, £2 10s.; first prize, amateur section, £1 10s.; first prize, junior novice section, £1. Also decided to increase second and third prizes in the junior novice section to 15s. and 10s. respectively from the club funds. It is hoped this generous treatment of the last section (for juniors who exhibit in the novice classes at the Yorkshire Union Shows) will result in a substantial addition to our membership from their ranks. The committee appointed a sub-committee to transact any business of minor importance, not necessitating the calling together of the full committee. The following members were elected as sub-committee: Messrs. H. J. Chittenden, W. A. Cowgill, S. Dean, T. Fortnam, A. Haigh, and H. Simonett.—Fred. Hammond, Sec., pro. tem.

Hints Wanted on the Catching of Robins.

Sir,—I have been trying to obtain a pair of Robins for the winter months, but have been, up till now, unable to find a bird dealer who will trouble to get them for me. Could any of your readers give me a hint as to the best way of catching them?

A Suggestion for the Millom Health Authorities.

Sir,—It was a belief in the days of my youth that wayfarers were at liberty to help themselves to a turnip from a field, and it was said that in some places notice boards were erected bearing the following legend: "Take one; take two. Take three, I'll take you." Might I suggest as a notice from the Millom health authorities to the local fanciers: "Keep one; not two. If you do, we'll summon you"?

Queer Names for Foreign Birds.

Sir,—In an account of the French Congo region which appeared in the "Daily Telegraph" of the 6th inst. I note that the following, among other birds, are given as inhabiting the district:—Ice-birds, Rhinoceros-birds, Butterfly-finches, and Helmet-birds. I have some knowledge of foreign birds, but I confess that these names are all "Dutch" to me, and I should be obliged if one of the numerous experts who delight us from time to time by their interesting articles in Cage Birns would be kind enough to enlighten me a little further on the subject. I douht not that some other of your readers will be interested in particulars of birds with such unusual names.

Wasps' Nests and Food for Insectivorous Birds.

Sir,—Since I wrote my letter in your issue of August 26th I have received a letter respecting the same, so it appears to have been appreciated by lovers of Softhills. During the last few days I have tried to get some good cakes of grubs, hut I found in all the nests brought me that most of the grubs have turned to wasps, and have gone. Some nests have heen very large indeed—larger than I havo known for years. The season has been so hot that most of the nests have now hatched out their grubs, and it is quite a job to get a cake half-filled. As the fly nuisance has also becn very had, a good supply of flies could still be saved hy using the wire fly-catcher, or the glass globe. The flies could be dried, and kept in air-tight tins for future use—to be mixed with any kind of soft food.

A Pair of Cutthroats and their Domestic Troubles.

Sir,—Seeing recently an account of a pair of Cut-throats, the following may he of interest to your readers. Last Septemher I had a pair of these given me, and not possessing an aviary, I put them in a fair-sized cage, and hung up a husk in case they wished for a family. At the end of four weeks the hen laid two eggs in the bare husk. Although well supplied with hay, grass and feathers, they did not attempt to make a nest. The hen sat close for 12 days; the cock did not sit at all (although I have read that he shares the duties of incuhation). I was in high hopes of seeing some young, but on the 13th morning I found her dead on the bottom of the cage; and the eggs proved to be clear. I don't know what killed her, unless she sat too long without feeding, as the cock never fed her. Nothing daunted, I procured another hen and introduced her. The cock seemed to be very pleased, and made a great fuss, preening her head and neck feathers. After a few weeks I saw the cock taking up some feathers, and he had a nice nest, the hen looking on very interested, hut not helping at all. She laid two eggs, hut threw them out on the fourth day, and two days after started to lay again, laying four eggs. Then began a fight as to who should sit. The cock wanted to, and she wouldn't let him, fiercely chasing him out of the nest if he ventured in. They fought in the nest, and broke two of the eggs. The cock eventually sat on the other two for nine days, when he picked a hole in both. Both eggs had young in them, and I felt inclined to wring his neck, but didn't. After another fortnight, she laid three more eggs, and the fighting began again, so I took the cock away, when the hen promptly threw out the eggs. Thus ended nest numher four. A fifth attempt resulted in three eggs again, which I took away and gave to a Canary that had made a nest and only had one egg which she had been sitting on for two days. She accepted the addition, hut strange to say threw her own egg out the next day. She sat close on the others. On the afternoon of the thirtecnth day, two hatched, and the other hatched during the evening. I prepared some "Cecto," hut, as I expected, the hen would not touch it, so I made some egg and biscuit, and thought to myself, "if they die, they must." The next morning one bird was dead in the nest. Another survived for five days, and the third managed to live, but I feel sure it was due to my feeding it three times a day with live ants' eggs I got out of the garden, and once a day with "Cecto," but it was a very sickly-looking bird, and very weak in the legs. It left the nest when nearly five weeks old, and could scarcely stand. But it got on wonderfully once out of the nest, and lived almost entirely on live ants' eggs as long as I could get them. It was a cock, having the red throat mark in the neck. During this time the parents had had another nest of two eggs, which the cock picked holes in. But they were not half done, the hen laying four more, which, as per usual, they fought over, the cock eventually sitting on them for nine days, when they threw them out. The eggs all had young in them. The hen is now sitting on two eggs, having laid three, but I recently found one thrown out, which was clear. As the hen has been sitting for eight days very close, the cock not interfering at all, I still have hopes of their bringing off some youngsters themselves. I have adopted "never despair" for my motto.

A Canary Breeder's Method of Feeding.

Sir,—I have been most lucky always with my young Canaries, and have never lost one. If it is worth anything to any of my fellow-readers, I may say that this is how I feed my Canaries from the first:—I give half a hard-boiled egg and half a tea biscuit rolled small and well mixed with a little maw seed (dry—no water with it), and plenty of chickweed every morning. I give the food three times a day—first at 5.30 in the morning.

(Mrs.) J. F. Mannsell-Eyre.

Late Nesting of Swallows in Newcastle.

Sir,—I notice to-day (September 10th) that there is still a nest of House Martins being fed in the Cartington Terrace, Newcastle. I noticed it first fourteen days ago, and thought it strange then, as all Swallows were supposed to have left the country earlier than usual this year owing to the dryness of the weather. Maternal instinct must in this case have predominated over the migratory one; and yet in text-books we are often told that the migratory instinct is predominant over all other instincts.

J. N. F. Scott.

P.S.—Since writing the above I have been out and noticed on the Heaton Road another nest of birds being fed, Swallows this time.

An Appeal on Behalf of a Northampton Fancier.

Sir,—At our last monthly meeting Mr. Arthur Clements, of Lark Hall Lane, Harpole, felt compelled to send in his resignation, having lost the whole of his stock hut two. He being a man of very small means, and at the same time every inch a gentleman in his dealings and character, it is the wish of the members of my society to ask you if you would allow us to make an appeal through Cage Birds on his behalf; so that we may give such a good fancier a fresh start. Any fancier who can spare a bird for so deserving a case will have the heartfelt thanks of the one in distress. I enclose his letter for your perusal.

Moulting British Birds Out of Doors.

Sir,—I generally save the best of the British birds I can get hold of each year and moult them out of doors in as large a cage as I can, putting some shade (oilcloth) over the cage top to prevent too much sun getting at them; this also protects them from the wet. I always take good care never to put the birds in a draught, and I put them out of the reach of dogs and cats. And on several occasions when I have had birds hung out like I have mentioned I have had them killed by both Sparrow and Kestrel Hawks in the early hours of the morning, as I used to leave them out all night. I gave the birds all the wild seeds I could get, besides fruit and berries for the different birds which will eat them, and a good supply of clean water twice daily for bathing (they will bathe several times a day, particularly in very hot weather). Bathing gives the birds a good gloss and bloom. Birds moulted outdoors are apt to be a bit more wild than those moulted indoors, but the colours are much better, even if moulted out of doors in towns.

The "Champion" Singing Linnet

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Brown in your issue of September 9, I accept his challenge with pleasure. Birds to be judged on quality singing, length, turns, and form. Both birds to sing. As I have to do the travelling, also to sing at Mr. Brown's Club House, I am sure he cannot object to my choosing a judge. If Mr. Brown will let me know by Monday, September 18, I will send my £5 along to the Editor of Cage Birns. Hoping the best bird wins.

Questions for Bird-catchers.

Sir,—Will the reader who signs himself "Spring Net Trap" in your last week's Cage Birns be kind enough to let me know through your columns what he finds to be the best baits for the different kinds of Finches, as I have some net traps and have not caught any with them yet? Linnets, I find, do not seem to go for the seed on the bait board as I expected they would. Would he much obliged for information as to where to set and how to arrange them; also the hest baits.

Tasmanian Rosellas and their Diet.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent, the Rosella has what is called "French moult," and will never, I fear, get its flights. I believe it is caused hy taking the birds too young from the nest. I have had Bourke's Parrakeets just the same, and they never grew their flights; or they produced only small, useless curled feathers. Your correspondent might try "Chemical Food," but I don't believe it will do any good. If the bird is a cage pet, it won't matter much. In some nests of Budgerigars there will be two or three such cripples. I generally introduce them to a pail of water to put them out of their misery.

The Green Canary Association.

Sir,—I notice in Cage Birds of Septemher 9th a few notes from the secretary of the G.C.A., which I don't think coincide with what he states, viz., that the society was formed to be run on business lines. The other part of sentence, "and not as a philanthropic institution," I put down as sarcasm, which should not be connected with any business. And I fail to see where the business lines come in if he is going to receive subscriptions now, when he remarks that the "rule" distinctly states they shall be paid "on or before August 31st." Therefore, I think that if he wants the society run on "sound business lines" he should not strain a point anywhere, but carry out the rules of the society to the letter, which would no doubt satisfy the remaining members, and also

A New Cage Bird Society for Annfield, Everton & District.

Sir,—I have been requested by a large number of fanciers to form a society to be called the "Annfield, Everton, Walton and District Cage Bird Society," open to all classes for Canaries, British and Hybrids. There is quite a colony of fanciers springing up in and around the above-named districts. I am asked to state that the society would be willing to receive members from all parts of Liverpool and neighbouring towns. The subscription is to be 2s. 6d. per annum. I have a good list of fanciers willing to join. There is every reason to believe that a good society would flourish, and be an immense boon to the very numerous novices and genuine fanciers, 50 per cent. of whom belong to no society. I should esteem it a favour if anyone willing to join would drop me a postcard. I would then notify him by return when and where we propose to hold our first meeting to elect officers and enrol members. One of the best-known fanciers in Liverpool has very willingly consented to act as secretary, if elected. There are some excellent rooms to be got for shows, etc. The date and place of meeting will be published in Cage Birds. Send your applications in at once to me.

Bird Organs and the Training of Young Birds.

Sir,—My sole reason for writing to you upon anything that has appeared in your pages from the pen of Mr. Claude St. John is to save one of his correspondents, "F. H. Goffe," the trouble and expense of purchasing a Roller organ. In the reply to Mr. Goffe—I am assuming your correspondent is of the male sex—your expert says that Mr. G. could "get a bird organ for tutoring Yorkshires, though, etc." I myself would go further, and advise him not to go to this trouble and expense, for the results would he anything but satisfactory. Even amongst us Roller fanciers there is a diversity of opinion as to its value in tutoring even the high-class Roller Canary, which has a song approaching to, and more like, the tours and rolls played hy the organ than any other variety of Canary. I suggest choosing the hest singer of the variety you have, then place the young cocks out of hearing of your stock birds, and this will give far better results than tutoring Yorkshires under a Roller organ. I do not wish Roller fanciers to think that I do not advocate the use of an organ in Roller training, for my own results, with deep-toned birds were quite satisfactory, as these youngsters brought out the bass and water glucko tours in a deeper tone than their sire did.

An Escaped Canary Follows Its Owner to Work.

Sir,—The following, which was published in the "Ripley Advertiser," may be of interest to my fellow-readers:—It appears that a Canary belonging to Mr. W. Cutts, jun., of Pinxton, escaped from its cage and flew away. The following morning it returned and settled on the house. Failing in his attempts to capture it, the owner started off to his work at the Langton Colliery, and he had gone about half a mile when, to his surprise, he discovered that the Canary had followed him. He again lost sight of it, but later in the morning, whilst he was at work in the weigh office, his feathered pet calmly hopped in and allowed itself to be taken into custody.

Redpolls Breeding in Captivity.

Sir,—Since writing you respecting my Redpolls which have paired, the hen sitting on three eggs, you may be interested to hear that on August 28, in the morning, I noticed the hen flying excitedly about the cage with something in her beak. This, upon investigation, proved to bo a young bird—I think only just out of the shell, as she had only been sitting nine days. She settled upon the perch, gave her offspring two vicious nips, and dropped it on the bottom of the cage. My wife picked it up and returned it to the nest, in which was another young one and the remaining egg. When we examined the nest this morning (Wednesday) there was a little one alive, one dead, and the egg had entirely disappeared. I am in hopes of her rearing the one left, as it appeared quite lively; but what she feeds it on I am at a loss to say, as she entirely ignores the food we prepare for her, such as chopped egg, etc., and the male bird never goes near the nest. I have got chickweed and other small weeds for her, of which she seems to approve.

A Canary that Sings by Request

Sir, Being a regular reader of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, I thought it would be of interest to some of your readers to relate the following:—I have a Norwich cock Canary which, when called by his name "Dick," and asked to sing, immediately gets upon the top perch of his cage and pours forth his beautiful song. During the fine days he has been hung out in the garden some distance from the house, and it has amazed many friends who havo visited us when I have gone to the door and asked him to sing to notice the willing way in which he has obeyed. He has in no way been affected by the moult, which he is just completing, but has been just as ready as ever to do his duty when called upon. He is naturally the favourite, and he certainly appears to realise his position. I have also a good number of Roller Canaries, but have found it impossible to get any one of them to do likewise. No doubt many of your readers could give similar and perhaps more unusual accounts, and it would be interesting to hear from them. I might add that the truth of the above can he vouched for by a breeder friend of mine in the neighbourhood, who has had many years in the Fancy, and who admitted that he had never come across such a bird before.

Was it a Case of Suicide?

Sir,—It is rather late to reply to a letter in your issue of August 26th, headed, "Was It a Case of Suicide?" but as I have not seen any other answer I venture to reply in the negative. According to my thinking, animals and birds enjoy life too much to do anything of the kind. That is reserved for the higher order of beings to which we belong. What would "Border Blend" say of a hen found drowned in a drinking glass in the early morning of hatching out three youngsters, and themselves dead in the nest for want of feeding; or of a most promising young cock, let out for a fly round the room, and with four baths opposite his cage, goes into another cage and wedges himself in the drinking glass, where, after a short absence from the room, I found him dead? Some birds seem seized with an overmastering desire to wash all over directly they begin to bathe. I had several fatalities through having the small covered drinkers fixed on outside of cages; then I changed them for the larger size fixed inside, hut both the above incidents occurred with them. I have now discarded covered drinkers altogether, and I use open "Thrush glasses." These glasses may be used for washing, and will, consequently, set up decay of the woodwork of cages, but this can be renewed, whereas your drowned birds cannot be recalled to life. During the hot weather I have given fresh water twice a day, remembering Mr. Hollins' letter of some months ago, re cleansing drinking vessels. Is that a preventative of "going light"? By the way, has any reader noticed if he has been plagued with red mites, after using "Kerol" disinfectant in the water for ordinary cleansing purposes?

Belfast Norwich C. and Y.C.C. Meetings.

Sir,—Being a member of the above club and unable to attend the meetings, I am naturally anxious to know how the last summoned meeting was attended and the decision of the members re the prize cards and the classification. I am sure I am voicing the feelings of all true fanciers when I say that the secretary or assistant secretary should report through CAGE BIRDS at least the summoned meetings of the society.

ANXIOUS MEMBER.

Where are the Yorkshires at Glasgow City Show?

Sir,—I am very sorry, and so are others, to observe from Mr. MacDonald's list of class judges that there is no mention made of Yorkshires. Is the "Gentleman of the Fancy" not worth even mentioning? There is surely something wrong here. I understand the City Show professes to be "open to the world." The little village shows in Fifeshire give four or six classes for Yorkshires, and the Glasgow and District are giving nine, but the old show is evidently giving none at all! At least, they don't mention them, nor have they a judge on their list who is supposed to know Yorkshires.

Northampton St. Crispin C.B.S.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Nason's letter of the 9th, I should like to inform him that the Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. consists of a body of fanciers who have paid their subscriptions as members of this society, which our recent nest feather show proves; our membership is not "imaginary," as Mr. Nason states. And I am glad to say that new members are being enrolled each meeting night, which augurs well for a record show at Christmas. Mr. Nason has so much imagination as to get entirely out of his stride, and I would willingly be one of the first to congratulate Mr. Nason if he would only practise instead of preach his motto: "If you cannot do anybody any good, don't do them any harm." I would advise Mr. Nason to adopt the motto instead of the dog-in-the-manger motto, which is no good to any true fancier or anybody else. The "general disposition" of the writer I am fully prepared to leave in the hands of fanciers to decide. Hoping all will have a successful moulting season, and then an even more successful show season.

Canaries at Batheaston Show.

Sir,—I shall esteem it a favour if you will allow me a space in your valuable paper in which to reply to the disappointed exhibitor at Batheaston Show. In the first place, I will remind Mr. Lanham that when anyone has to resort to incorrect statements, that person has a very poor case indeed. In regard to the Batheaston Show, I was given to understand that all exhibits would be ready for judging by ten o'clock. I arrived a few minutes after this time, and was informed by the steward that the birds were ready for judging. Quite naturally I walked into the tent, and, only finding four birds staged, I went to the other side of the tent, where I must have been when you, Mr. Lanham, and Mr. Follwell entered the tent. Mr. Follwell had his birds staged before I knew he was present, and as to a conversation which we had, your remarks remind me of that old proverb, "He that evil doeth evil thinketh." Such remarks as yours tend to show childishness. Do you think that because a man is asked to judge at a show it is his duty to ignore every fancier friend he may meet on the show ground previous to judging? Such ideas as these one would only expect to find in the undeveloped mind of a schoolboy. After the way you have "swanked" your Crest-bred to the readers of CAGE BIRDS, no doubt every fancier of this variety will be looking forward to the great doings of your "champion" during the coming show season. But, readers, wait and see! I can tell this great breeder and exhibitor of eighteen years' standing that I have seen and handled nearly all the champions of this variety at the leading shows of this country during the past eight years, while he has been admiring his "champions" at home. I was greatly amused at his remarks respecting his Yorkshire and his ideas as to how these "champions" are bred. He thinks that because his bird's uncle may have won at the Palace this fact alone should make his a topper. It is common knowledge, even to a novice, that some of the biggest "wasters" are often bred from the same parents as our best birds, and when a man of eighteen years' experience talks in this way, every reader may know how much he understands about bird-breeding. I see by his letter that it took me nearly two hours to judge nine birds at the Batheaston Show. Your "tout" that gave you this information has sadly led you astray, Mr. Lanham, as it can be proved that my judging slip was in the secretary's tent twenty minutes after judging commenced. Now, Mr. Lanham, with regard to the Bath F.S. members' show held in September, 1906, I, like you, have great cause to remember one thing, which is still very vivid in my mind. On the last day that entries were to be accepted you stated at the meeting, with a face as long as a wet week, that you had no birds to enter because your birds were all dying. Yet two or three days before the show did you not enter birds which, if our secretary had done his duty, should never have been allowed in the show room? No wonder some fanciers had their suspicions aroused as to where these ten birds came from! Now, Mr. Lanham, did you or did you not purchase some young Norwich from a gentleman at Bristol a few days before the show? Having our suspicions aroused, I and other members of the committee decided to send a member to inquire whether you would take £5 for the medal winner. The sole reason for this was to discover, if possible, whether you still had the bird in your possession, and not because anyone thought it was worth £5. Now, Mr. Lanham, were you compelled to resign? As Mr. Lanham has fully stated in his letter, he exhibited the ten birds, with the result as he has given, but as he had previously stated that all his birds were dying, where did these ten exhibits come from? I think that your readers will agree with me that if he bred them they were bred and exhibited in record time.

T. TAYLER.

Sir,—I must again ask you kindly to favour me with space in your always interesting paper to reply to Mr. Lanham's latest, in which I note he states that if the birds my wife exhibited were her own property, then he is still in the position to state that he has beaten my birds every time that he has met them for the past five years in succession. Now, I do not think there is a single reader of this paper who will take this boastful, unfancierlike statement to mean other than that he has met my birds in competition each year for the past five years and defeated them on each occasion. Let Mr. Lanham kindly state when, how, and where he did these gallant deeds. As to whether I exhibited the birds that my wife showed at Weston and Batheaston at any other show or not, this is none of his business; it will be sufficient for him to remember that they will beat his, and that he has not beaten my birds for five years in succession, and never under a specialist Canary judge. In another portion of his letter he states that Mr. Tayler was present when I staged my birds at Batheaston. This is not correct; Mr. Tayler was not near me when I unpacked and staged my birds, but came in the tent a few minutes after. Mr. Lanham also states that my Yorkshire was all up in a "ball" and had only four or six feathers in its tail; this is another incorrect statement. My Yorkshire in the afternoon certainly did not look well, which could not be wondered at considering the heat of the tent; but in the morning he looked well in spite of the fact that he had lost three tail feathers and a few on the chest, but not sufficient to mar his appearance. It may interest Mr. Lanham to know that this bird, unlike his, has won firsts at Hoyland, Keighley, Windhill, and Gateshead; second at Halifax; and fourth at the Crystal Palace. Now these prizes are what this bird actually won for its owner before it became my property, not what its great-grandfather or its uncle or a near relation has done. Fancy Mr. Lanham trying to "cod" your readers up to thinking that a bird whose relations have been champions must also be a champion! Why, the novice can teach him something here. Towards the close of his letter he states that he has been offered £5 for his Crest-bred. I should not have been surprised if he said he had been offered £100. Surely he must think the readers of CAGE BIRDS are a lot of "thick-heads." Is there anything to prevent me from getting a friend to offer me £20 for my unflighted yellow Norwich, and then "swank" it in the Press that I have been offered that fabulous sum for it? In conclusion, Mr. Lanham states that this is his final letter on the subject. If so, I shall conclude that it is his way of admitting defeat in an argument which he himself started.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1911 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address

Stamford (Lincs.) and District.

Being on business at Stamford (Lincs), I thought I would look up a few of the fanciers there, and see what sort of a breeding season they had had; below you will see the results. The first I called on was Mr. Clarke. This gentleman goes in for Yorkshires, but does not personally keep many of those he breeds. He also had a pair or two up for Hybrid breeding, but has had no luck so far. Mr. Baker goes in for British birds and for Hybrid breeding. He has bred two very nice Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids, but I am sorry to say that one has a deformed foot. Mr. B. has also bred a few Goldfinch-Canary Mules. Mr. A. Harrison goes in for Yorkshires, and has bred a fine lot this season—56, and some of these look like making a name for themselves. He has one or two fine yellows which will take some stopping if they go through the moult all right. Mr. Welch goes in for Norwich, and is a novice. He has bred about 20, with one or two fine birds amongst them. One I noticed was a nice yellow hen, not over large, but of good type. Through the kindness of Mr. A. Harrison, I got a few more breeding results:—Mr. Sprigg, 20; Mr. E. Harrison, 20 Yorkshires; Mr. Fancourt, 12 Yorkshires; Mr. T. Wright, 6 Yorkshires and 15 Norwich; Mr. T. Wood, 20 Norwich; Mr. G. Grimes, 16 Norwich; and Mr. B. Grimes, 10 Norwich.—C. H. Cooper (West Ham).

Wild-Bird Life.

September Notes.

The harvest is over. The last load has rumbled down the narrow lane, which is plentifully decorated with ears and stalks snatched from the passing loads by the thorny brambles. Some of these ears will hang until Christmas, when possibly the first fall of snow will cause the Buntings and Finches to seek for food about the white mantle covering their daily fare. At present the fields are bare save for the golden stubble which is here and there broken by long strips of rich brown earth where the farmer's team is already preparing for next season's sowings. Pied Wagtails are busy seeking among the upturned soil, generally selecting the more recently exposed furrows as more likely to contain the insects they need. At the further end of the field a few Lapwings are busy. They will allow the team to get much nearer to them than an ordinary pedestrian, so by keeping close to the horses one is able to note the crests of the old birds, their brightly burnished wings showing a bright bronze green in the morning sun. They rise with the old familiar cry—not with the anxious solicitude of the early spring, when, with every device known to wild birds, they seek to lure one away from the pointed eggs or downy young reposing near by. The fledged young, not quite so wary as their parents, nor so familiar with the danger of too near an acquaintance with mankind, linger after the old ones have flown, but at length they too take wing and follow their leaders—broad dashes of black and white against the bright sky. The companies of Sand Martins down by the stream have been larger than usual this season, and several freshly-made holes for nesting have been scooped out. These can be noted by the piles of earth lying at the foot of the bank. It is a marvel how such soft-billed and feeble birds can cut their way even into this yielding soil. Their labours are over now. The old birds and their broods are out all day together. The morning and evening are spent with the House Martins and Swallows on the river. Where food is abundant, they dip their wings now and again with a light splash, making ever widening rings of silvery ripples.

Country Rambles

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Third outing, held September 2, to Strines. The weather was all that could be desired Starting from Hillsborough Bridge, we were soon away from bricks and mortar, and making our way along the New Road, which runs through the beautiful Rivelin Valley. This is one of the numerous beauty spots to be found on the outskirts of Sheffield. Many items of interest were noticed. The Linnets were very numerous, and the Starlings, as they followed the cattle in the fields, looked very beautiful. We saw several Wagtails, and the Swallows congregated in large numbers, preparing for their autumn flight. Reaching the summit of the hill, we came in sight of the moors. Nearing the famous hostelry at Strines the scene is magnificent. To the left is one unbroken stretch of moorland, while on the right, far below the road, lay the Strines and Dale Dyke Dams. After partaking of a good tea we set out to inspect the woods and lanes. We made our way down the steep road on the side of the hill, one side of which is overhung with huge rocks and trees, the other being a sheer drop of some hundred feet, covered with trees and undergrowth—reminding one very much of some Alpine pass. Reaching the bottom, we crossed the bridge and came upon our friend the keeper; he proved a good "find" indeed, for he was our guide for the rest of the ramble. Turning to the left, we ascended a delightful road, leading directly on to the moors. The road is some four to six feet below the surrounding level, and the banks are covered with beautiful heather, ferns, etc. We traversed the moors for a little way, and on the summit of the hill (1,535ft. high) we came to Fulstone Cottage, one of Earl Fitzwilliam's shooting boxes. The surrounding country from this spot is magnificent. To the right is Back Tor (1,765ft. above the sea level) in the distance; Moscar, Stanish Pole, and other places were pointed out. All were loth to leave this enchanting spot. Descending the hill we found the vehicle ready to convey us on our journey home. Going via the village of Bradfield, we were again delighted with the grandeur of the scenery. We reached our starting point at about nine o'clock.—J. Woolhouse, assistant secretary.

WALLASEY C.B.S.

The second ramble took place on Sunday, August 27. Wallasey is noted for its British bird fanciers, and a goodly number of them took this opportunity of gathering all the wild seeds they would require for the coming winter. The company included Messrs. Reed and Barker (two Cheshire botanists), who acted as guides and explained in detail the various seeds as they came across them, Mallinson, Howard, Holden, Benson and two sons, Alston, Young, Metcalfe and son, and one or two fanciers from Liverpool whose names we did not catch. Everybody was armed with a goodly-sized bag, which evidently meant a rare treat for the pets at home. A start was made at 10.30 a.m. through Wallasey Village on to the Marshes. Here almost all the wild seeds that are worth gathering for Britishers were to be found in abundance. Those of the company who had not been on the Marshes before promised future visits. After our bags were well filled (the children vied with one another who could gather the most), we strolled up to the River Birkett. It might have been a river once, but now it looked more like a pool owing to the prolonged drought. We rested here while our two guides visited a noted rose garden owned by a friend of theirs. Some one suggested a glass of wine, and as it was about time the inner man was looked after, out came our parcels of sandwiches. It was hard lines for the fancier who had got up before his breakfast that morning when he found that instead of salt on his snack it was carbonate of soda! That's the worst of keeping a medicine chest for the birds. However, he got "his own" back. Another start was made at 2 p.m. for Bidston Woods. A steady climb brought us to Bidston Observatory, and then on to the Woods; we arrived just when it commenced to rain. Fortunately, we found a shelter, and then we saw what is worth going miles out of your way for: the rain drove the birds into the trees, and then our friend Mr. Mallinson began to enlighten us on the various species that frequent Cheshire. The trees were full of them, from the Tree Creeper to the Jay. What amused us all, especially the children, were the Squirrels. A mile on through the woods and we came to the famous Bidston Church. Unfortunately, rain came on again heavily, so we had to make our nearest way home, arriving at headquarters at 6 p.m., each one acknowledging it was the finest day's outing he had had for years. We were sorry for the Liverpool fanciers, who had to trudge home on their bikes in the rain.—J. W. Metcalfe.

OBITUARY.

Mr. JESSE CALAM (Hull).

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. E. R. Ridley, hon. sec. of the Hull C.B.S., that I write to tell you of the painful death of that esteemed fancier, member, and friend, Mr. Jesse Calam. Death took place on September 5th. Mr. Calam had been in failing health this last few months, but it was only for the last nine or ten days that he became bed-fast; and no one had the least idea the end was so near. Mr. Calam was a keen and thorough fancier, having bred and exhibited birds for about thirty years. He was one of the select few who founded this society, and helped to put the Fancy on its present strong footing in Hull. He was a hard-working and enthusiastic member. His genial smile and help will be much missed at the forthcoming open show, which event he had not once missed attending for seventeen years. Mr. Calam was also a member of the Grimsby O.S., the Norwich Plainhead Club, and was on the committee of the Open Norwich P.C. Mr. Calam was the elected judge for the Belfast C., N., and Y. C.C.'s show in November, and he was looking forward with pleasure to the opportunity of seeing Belfast and of meeting Irish fanciers. The funeral took place on September 7th, and amongst a host of beautiful wreaths I noticed those sent by the Hull Society, Grimsby O.S., Mr. and Mrs. Clews (Grimsby), Messrs. Boyle, Richardson, and Hunter (York), Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Pepper (Hull), Mr. and Mrs. G. Harland (Hull), Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ridley (Hull), and others. The following members of our society were present:—Messrs. G. W. Oliver (chairman), W. H. Stamford (vice-chairman), E. R. Ridley (secretary), W. Clews (Grimsby), W. T. Pepper, T. Perkins, D. D. Longhorn, G. Harland, H. Sowden, W. Calvard, S. Hogg, and several others. Mr. Calam was 62 years of age. Mrs. Calam wishes to thank all fanciers friends for their expressions of sympathy in her trouble.

We have also received from Mr. Geo. Harland (Hull) and Mr. Samuel Dean (Great Horton, Bradford) similar letters of condolence with the deceased gentleman's relatives.

SITTINGBOURNE & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 4th, Headquarters, nearly every member being present. Mr. F. J. Gibbs (Canterbury) was decided upon to judge at annual show. One more new member made. Decided, to hold members' monthly show October 2nd.—B. Tidy, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held Grange Park Hall, Sept. 4th, Mr. J. A. Bartlett in chair. Chairman announced that the table show of Norwich had been postponed till next month to allow more of the birds to be finished the moult, and that next month's fixture, viz., "Questions and Answers," would be taken this evening. The hat was then passed round containing the slips with questions written on them, each being answered in turn. As usual, the result was most interesting and instructive.—Forse and Son, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Well attended meeting held Red Lion Hotel, September 11th, when the classification for open show came up for further consideration. Decided, to add one additional class in the Norwich section, and one in the Yorkshire section, which will make seven in each. Also decided, to accept the patronage of the Midland Counties' Y.C.C. Much other show business was transacted. Some very handsome specials were promised, including a valuable oil painting, by one of Minton's artists. I shall be pleased to hear from any of our friends who have not already promised a special prize, before next meeting, Oct 2nd.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

No. 13.—My Turquoisines.

I wonder how many years ago it is since a hen Turquoisine was offered for sale in England. At one time Turquoisines were fairly plentiful; the time I refer to is some 30 years ago. This to me now seems but a little while; so quickly does the water slip under the bridge of Time. I remember paying a visit to the late Mr. Joseph Abrahams, of St. Georges in the East, and in one of his big cages I saw a hen Turquoisine, sitting on the floor. I was so eager to become her possessor that I never stopped to wonder why she preferred the floor to a perch, but Mr. Abrahams, who was the soul of honour, explained. "She is a cripple," he said, "at least, she can't fly; and if you like to give me a sovereign for her she is yours and welcome." I positively jumped at the offer, as I fancied that in a big flight, the defective wing would become strong, and then what a bargain would be mine!

A hen Turquoisine for twenty shillings! I gleefully carried her off to Yorkshire, and gave her her liberty; but, alas! she could do nothing but run swiftly about on the sand, giving an occasional half-spin round. I knew in a moment what was wrong; she had received some injury to her spine, and would, I felt sure, be a cripple for life. I gave her a season to recover, but as she made no signs of mending, I foolishly sold her to a brother aviculturist; and then the unexpected happened. It always does; that "wretched" hen went to nest and reared a fine brood for her happy owner.

Feelings Akin to Napoleon's.

Try to picture my feelings when I heard the news! They resembled those of Napoleon after the battle of Waterloo. In the flight from the battle Napoleon showed great depression. The member of his staff who was riding by his side thought he might be sorrowing over the loss of so many old companions in arms, and tried to comfort him by saying that Wellington also must have lost many old comrades. He has not lost the battle was the only reply. What did it matter to me that some people had lost Turquoisines by death? I had suffered something far worse. By my own insensate folly I had lost the chance of breeding Turquoisines, all for want of a little patience. Need I tell my readers that I went home and kicked myself without mercy?

I felt, however, that it was no good to cry over spilt milk; so I made up my mind to try again. A man is never happy with the second best or the third best, with anything less than the ideal he is capable of imagining. So long as he can imagine something better than which he possesses already—so long as he can feel that he has missed something he might have had but for ill luck or no chance—he's bound to be miserable.

Is not the whole machinery of Heaven and Hell and Earth perpetually set in motion to dissociate those who were born to be together, and disorganise things which were created to work in unison? I certainly thought so. Here, so to speak, I had held the trump cards in my hand, and like a silly fool, I had thrown them away. I knew very well that if ever I was lucky enough once more to alight on Turquoisines for sale, the price would not be 20s. each. What was Iago's advice to lovesick Roderigo? "Put money in thy purse." I did so, and then looked abroad to find adventures.

How eagerly I scanned the advertisement columns of the Press for Turquoisines. I never could find any for sale. There were plenty of folks wanting them; but their price must be moderate. One day I saw an advertisement (not in Cage Birds), which nearly made my eyes drop out of my head. Two pairs of Turquoisines for sale; perfectly healthy and acclimatised, price £5 the pair.—Apply Dr. X., a certain street in the West Central. To rush out and jump into a hansom was the work of a moment. I was staying in London at the time. I told the cabman to "drive like blazes" to the address named, for I imagined hansom cabs converging to the same direction from every point of the compass. Strange to say, I could not notice any great congestion of traffic, though so rapid was our progress that I quite expected to be shot out on the pavement at any moment without further warning.

Disappointed Again.

Arrived at the street, what was my disgust to find it a dirty little shop where letters might be left till called for. In vain I begged the woman to give me Dr. X.'s private address. She blankly refused, but promised to forward any letters I might entrust to her. I wrote offering to take every Turquoisine he had and promising to meet him at any given time and place with the money. But from that day to this I never got a line in reply. I now firmly believe that those Turquoisines never existed. They were simply a trap to catch the unwary. Had I sent the money, the doctor would have skipped, and no doubt tried the dodge successfully again.

Some months after this I was in a fashionable West End bird shop, when I lighted on a pair of Turquoisines once more. The price asked was £15. After a long survey of the birds, I said, "Get thee behind me, Satan." Resolutely I turned my back on them, and by walking rapidly I soon got so far away that it became too much of a task to return for just a couple of birds. At least, that was how I tried to argue.

One day I was rewarded, as the good always are—in story books—by getting a letter from a friend, telling me that he had eight young Turquoisines for sale at £2 each. As I read that letter slowly over, I felt something of the solid joys and lasting treasures that the hymn wrongly tells us none but Zion's children know. I was certainly not one of Zion's children, but I was sure nobody felt more happy than I did. I wired off to say I would buy the lot; but, alas, someone had been before me, and I only managed to secure two pairs. How I hated the man who had got the other two! Still, to have secured four Turquoisines was something. For one who has had so many bitter disappointments, it was like a green pasture and waters of comfort.

Of course, I knew that nothing could be done that year. I must possess my soul in patience for another twelve months; and then, who could tell? I might be the happy possessor of a nest of Turquoisines. Anyhow, I said, fortune favours the brave. The only question was: Do I individually come under that class?

Young Ones At Last.

Next year I put my precious charges into the nicely sheltered garden aviaries and awaited events. I had not long to wait. Turquoisines love to nest. Within a fortnight both pairs were busy, and soon the hens disappeared into their respective logs, and their mates gave themselves up to melancholy reflection. The allotted days of incubation passed rapidly, and in the first nest I soon could hear the sounds of young life. I had, however, made one sad mistake.

My friend had told me at the time I bought the birds that they were great lovers of grass. "Mind," he said, underlining the words, "you give them a small grass plot to go at." I was young and conceited in those days, and did not always take good advice. In a moment you will hear what it cost me. For many days all went swimmingly by. The cock was a perfect paragon, and fed early and late, but he knew that baby Turquoisines wanted something beyond dry seed; they must have green stuff. There was no grass in the place. In Australia he would have fed his babies on soft-growing, half-ripe grass seeds; here in England what could he do? In the aviary was growing a vivid green elder. It caught his eyes, and he fed greedily off it. I saw him doing it; but thought nothing about it. I saw him fly up to the log and return. Still, I thought nothing. It was towards evening that I felt a bit anxious, as I noticed the old birds around the log. Still, I did not realise the dreadful truth. It was only the next day when they still kept away, that I knew that something was wrong.

After waiting till I could wait no longer, I went and opened the box and looked in. I did not need anyone to tell me what had happened. It was a hot July day, and before I got near the box I noticed that the smell in the aviary was violent, and it was unmistakably organic in its origin. I proceeded to investigate. Meanwhile, the bodies (there were five of them) were going bad, rapidly bad, and the smell for a mile around was strong enough to take the paint off the doors.

The other nest fared better. Luckily there was no elder tree in that run, and the babies were younger. By keeping fresh turfs in the place, I managed to supply the requisite green food, and this, with plenty of ripe flowering grass and groundsel supplied all the green stuff that was necessary; and one day I found myself the happy owner of my first nest of young Turquoisines. How proud I was of my good fortune; how I admired these wonderful babies with their great soft black eyes and gentle ways!

One season I was fortunate enough to rear something like ten youngsters; and if you have any for sale, people fairly pull you out of the house for them; you can imagine that I was consoled for all my past troubles and disappointments. Still I was dog in the manger; most birdy people are, and I was determined to have a corner in Turquoisines.

The Obvious Moral.

I was reminded the next season of a quaint story told by Hellewell Sutcliffe of a farmer high up in the Dales. "He was fearfully soft-hearted was John Preston. A good worker, a good farmer, but he got that fond of his stock that he couldn't bear to part with them. Once I found he bought half-a-dozen geese in September, and he said to his wife that they'd fatten them one by one, killing three or four as green geese, and leaving t'others for Christmas. Well, the time came for killing the first of a grand lot, and Preston rubbed his chin in a way he had when bothered, and told his wife they were too good for such like work, and that he'd keep them all to make rare birds at Christmas; he could sell what they didn't want, he said, and make good profit by it. His wife knew well enough, but Preston didn't that he'd grow so fond of his six geese through watching of 'em and feeding of 'em, and talking to 'em, that he couldn't for his life have dared put a penknife to the throat of one of them. Well, Christmas comes, and Preston rubs his chin again and says he reckons he'll keep 'em all for laying in the spring. His wife says nothing—being a little quiet body who knew her place—and the spring comes. And then it seems that, by some mischance or other, they were all ganders, and not the chance of an egg among them. But Preston had got fonder and fonder still about them, and the end was he kept 'em all, eating their heads off out of his pocket, as you might say, and for all I know they are there to this day."

Well, I was not quite as bad as that, but I kept my Turquoisines too long. It often happens in the case of Parrakeets that a nest will be all of one sex. It was so in this case. When the next year came, all my young Turquoisines proved to be of the male persuasion, and so there was not a chance of an egg amongst them. The obvious moral of the tale is: Don't be greedy, or you may possibly over-reach yourself.

Turquoisines are very easy to keep; they only need good Canary seed, and an abundance of green food; but they will not stand severe cold. They are far too valuable to run any risks about; so if ever you are lucky enough to get hold of some, take them in when the days become chilly, and keep them in a cold birdroom during the winter. By a cold birdroom I mean, of course, an unheated one.

It was Herry Quatre, who said to Montague, "I like your books," and who got in reply, "then sire, you will like me, for I am my books." I am sure that if ever you meet me in the flesh, you will like me, and for the same reason!

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects. Harmless to everything.

Under the White Rose.

IN a very short time we shall have the show season upon us. Some of the birds are getting very nearly through the moult, though by far the greatest number will not be ready for the first few shows. But this year will be somewhat in advance of the previous one, the weather being very suitable for a quick moult; and if no cold snaps come the birds should get through in good time, and be in prime condition. The specialist clubs are now busy preparing their year books. That of the Cinnamon Marked Club is already in the hands of the members, and is of very handy size to carry in the pocket. It contains a full list of officers and members, particulars of competitions and shows where patronage is given, special prize list and conditions for same, and much other useful information. Intending members who apply may have one free, and any other information desired, from Mr. S. B. Grayshon, Wormald Street, Flush, Heckmondwike, Yorkshire.

THE O.N.P.C. secretary is unfortunately very seriously ill, though the latest news is rather pleasing, he having now got a turn for the better, and it is hoped that all danger is now past. Typhoid fever is the fell disease, and at the best it will be some weeks before Mr. Mitchell is able to be out again. In the meantime, Mr. F. Hammond has kindly consented to undertake the secretarial work of the club, and, under the circumstances, members and others are specially requested to have patience. The year book will be got out as soon as possible, though, of course, it will be somewhat late.

BRADFORD WEST C.B.A. have removed their headquarters. For some time they have put up at the Red Lion Hotel, but in future their home will be the "Shoulder of Mutton," this latter being very near the school where they have their open show, which, by the way, I hear is to be on quite a large scale, larger than anything they have attempted before. May it be a success, and may they grow strong in their new home.

DURING the week end I was shown quite a novelty by one of the members of the Bradford West Society. Mr. W. A. Cowgill, besides being a birdy man, is also interested in horticulture, and from one of his plants, a delphinium, or something in that line (am out of my latitude here), he had a seed stem the pods of which represented, as near as possible, so many birds growing up the stalk—beak, eyes, wings, all quite life-like; in fact, when looked at from a distance they looked just like so many birds perched on a branch.

THE Cinderella Club Show is proceeding apace. A lot of the work has been done, but there is a lot still to be done. The next move is the classification and allotting of judges; and at the next full meeting the details in regard to same, as suggested by the sub-committee, will be brought forward for approval and revision. Tickets are now to be obtained from all members of the committee, and are, I hear, selling very well.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

*A Thoughtful Mother Bird.

The other day I saw a poor little Greenfinch in the hedge. It could not fly, as something had hurt its wing, and it was a very young bird. I took it home, gave it some food, and put it in a cage, hanging it out on the wall. The next day I heard a great twittering outside, and when I went out I saw a hen Greenfinch at the cage trying to feed the young one. It was evidently her own bird, and she had come to feed it. The young bird is now well enough to fly, and has in fact flown away with its mother.—Gladys Harris, 7, Decoy Road, Newton Abbot, South Devon.

Polly's Impertinence.

The parents of a friend of mine asked me one day if I would keep their son company while they were out. I readily consented, and went to my friend's house. For some time we played with the Parrot, until there came a knock at the door. My friend rose, saying "The milk, I suppose," and went to answer the door. "How much milk will you have to-day, please?" asked the milkmaid. "Oh, only a penn'orth, the same as usual, thank you," replied Polly, who had followed his young master to the door.—H. G. Howells, aged 15, 7, Francis Terrace, Carmarthen.

*Dickie's Adventure.

My dada has a bird-room. One day, when Dada was going to feed his birds, one little Crest three weeks old had escaped from its cage, and flew out of the door as Dada entered, down the stairs, and out into the garden. We did not know where Dickie had flown, but in the evening we were attracted by its crying, and it was hovering around the chimney-pots close by. But we gave up all hope of getting our bird back again. When we were at dinner next day a boy brought our bird home. It had fallen down the kitchen chimney. Dickie was no worse for its adventure—only it was a different colour—and when restored to its parent she did not know it.—Sent by Miss M. Farmer, aged 12, 106, Beresford Road Walthamstow.

MAGNIFICENT SUPPORT.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

A Generous Patron.

The distinguished aviculturist Mr. E. J. Brook, of Hoddam Castle, whose services in the way of extending our knowledge of the most beautiful and the rarest of all foreign birds have been absolutely inestimable, writes as follows:—

Dear Sir,—I do not care to add to my subscription list just now, but I enclose a donation to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I am afraid the members of the Humanitarian League are, many of them, hopelessly ignorant of the matters about which they agitate. If these people would confine themselves to real cruelty, such as the absolutely unnecessary docking of horses—I write as one who was Master of Fox Hounds for fifteen years—they would do a lot of good, and get much support. However, they are bent on making out cruelty in everything they possibly can, being carried away by ignorance and false sentiment. I certainly think that there might be great improvements made in the methods of importing birds and in the sanitary and other conditions of bird shops; but that is another question, and too practical a one for the League of Humanitarians.

E. J. BROOK.

With the letter is enclosed the munificent donation of £10, and I am sure I am only anticipating the unanimous wish of the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE in conveying on their behalf our joint and very full appreciation of Mr. Brook's great kindness, and our entire agreement with the sentiments expressed in his letter. It is to be thought that those who are so frantically inveighing against the delightful hobby of bird-keeping have been somewhat under the impression that they have only to deal with a number of individual bird-keepers of more or less limited income, without any organisation to defend them against oppressive action, and that the monetary backing which is so freely afforded by the wealthy patrons of the so-called Humanitarian Societies would be lacking from any defence which might be set up against their misguided attacks. That they were mistaken in the first of these premises we have shown them already by the successful organisation of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and that they are equally wrong in the second we hope to show them by the kind support of such generous patrons as Mr. Brook and other aviculturists who are more blessed with the good things of this world than the great majority who find pleasure and instruction in the pursuit of a hobby which appeals alike to the inhabitant of the cottage and of the palace.

The Views of H. D. Astley, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U.

Mr. Astley in enclosing subscription for two years as Vice President, writes as follows:—

Dear Mr. Fulljames,—I do think that something ought to be done to stop the wholesale catching of our British wild birds, which are now not only caged at home, but are exported to Australia, North America, etc. North America and Australia have made laws forbidding the exportation of their birds, and we should do the same. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE should show that it is not in favour of indiscriminate imprisonment of birds, and should set its foot down against Nightingales, Stonechats, etc., etc., being caught in the spring and nesting season.

HUBERT D. ASTLEY.

Mr. Astley has for many years been known as one of the most eminent of British Aviculturists, and his wonderful collection of the larger birds is perhaps unrivalled in its way. It is with great pleasure that I publish Mr. Astley's letter, and that I assure him that his sentiments are exactly those of the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. If the Humanitarian Societies were to devote their efforts to the establishment of salutary laws, and to the proper enforcement of the existing regulations, they might reckon upon the wholehearted support of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. To take wild birds of any kind during the nesting season is not only against the law of the country; it is cruelty, and useless cruelty, for there are very few birds indeed which will live if they are taken when they have eggs or young, and I am sure that every member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE would do his utmost to prevent the perpetration of an outrage which could only be inflicted by the ignorant schoolboy or a degraded person whose only object could be to dispose immediately of the freshly-caught birds before they had time to die. But when these Humanitarians seek to abolish in its entirety the wholesome hobby of keeping a pet bird or a collection of birds for study or interest, and when they advance as a reason for their crusade a solitary case or two which should be entirely preventible, and which even as they stand bear a smaller proportion to the immense number of cases where birds are sold, bought, and kept than could be quoted in connection with any other carthly thing, it is then that it behoves us all to make a stand in our own defence. That stand is now being made, and I hope every reader of CAGE BIRDS will express his (or her) appreciation by becoming a member of a LEAGUE which is proud of having at its head such gentlemen as Messrs. E. J. Brook and H. D. Astley.

I have the pleasure also of acknowledging the receipt of a donation towards the funds of the LEAGUE from Lady Morshead, of Bodmin.

Marking Time at Millom.

Mr. W. R. Watson, Hon Sec of Millom C.B.A., and Mr. W. J. Park write as follows:

The health authorities of our town seem to be at a standstill, for the present at least. They recently visited a room belonging to a friend of mine, and ordered him to get rid of his birds. They have told us all that tale, but we are taking no notice. All the bird-rooms here are big, clean, and healthy, and are mostly at the very top of the houses, away from everybody.

W. R. WATSON,
Sec., Millom C.B.A.

Sir,—In reference to the Millom case, I was visited on August 29th—that is, a fortnight ago—by the Nuisance Inspector to see if I had disposed of my birds. Of course, I had not, and said I did not intend to. He said he would have to report it to the Council, but I have heard no more so far. Another of our members had his room inspected about a fortnight since, and he was informed that he must get rid of them, although he has not been served with a formal notice. He also is sticking out against them. We cannot learn anything yet as to what steps they may take, but we fancy they will let the matter drop, as they do not seem to be bothering any other fanciers now, and the local papers are speaking on the fanciers' side. Many thanks for the badges sent, which are quite neat and effective. We shall not forget to wear them and point out to other fanciers the necessity of joining CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE as a protection to all birdlovers.

Millom. W. J. PARK.

"The Cumberland Pacquet" has an article on the subject from which I have pleasure in quoting as follows:—

"The action of the Committee, it is almost needless to say, is being strongly resented by the bird fanciers of the town, as well as by others all over the country, with whom birdkeeping is a most enjoyable and profitable hobby; and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE—a Society founded purposely to protect, further the best interests of fanciers, and contest cases of this kind—is, I am proud to note, bestirring itself in the matter, prepared to see that its members get fair play so far as rightful consideration goes. Personally speaking, my sympathies lie with the bird fanciers, and I think it will be very hard indeed if a person be prohibited from keeping a few cage-birds, providing they are kept in a perfectly clean and healthy state. If those kept in Millom are not kept clean and healthy, then I quite agree that steps should be taken to compel the owners to do this, but where they are kept—as I say—healthy and clean, I do not see any occasion why the Committee should rigidly insist on such an apparent drastic step being taken. As I understand, the Committee will be dealing with the matter again very soon, I will reserve further comments for the present, merely hinting in concluding these notes that it behoves every bird fancier to join the LEAGUE in order to have his rights and hobby protected."

"The Ashton-under-Lyne Reporter" in its issues of 26th ult. and 2nd inst. published a very long and interesting article entirely supporting the views of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I am sorry that I may not be spared room to publish this week an instalment of this, but I hope to be able to insert a portion of it next week and to continue it in subsequent issues.

Secretary, CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE,

YORKS. C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Meeting of Council held September 4. Present Mr. C. Holley, in chair; also Messrs. Bowerman, Birse, McDonnell, Sheridan, Callaghan, Stewart. Communications were received from Larne, Dundalk, Ulster, and Holywood Societies, re patronage for forthcoming shows. Unanimously decided, to grant the patronage to Larne and Dundalk shows. Also decided, to hold a draw for Canaries on the second night of show, and to abandon gift class. Other business of a general character relative to schedule and rules was adjusted.—C. Holley, Hon. Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting held headquarters, Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, Mr. J. Hannah (president) in chair. Secretary gave report of F.F. show, with balance on right side. The great success of this show stirred up the desired enthusiasm, and a good amount of annual show business was got through in a short time, each member present promising a special, the secretary intimating it was not bad for a start to receive 30 specials. Several applications for membership were considered, but it was finally decided to adhere to rule. Mr. W. Connelly (Glasgow) has kindly consented to judge all classes on November 18, except Scotch Fancies.—A. H. McLean, Hon. Sec.

WREXHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 8th, when we received a visit from the well known fancier, Mr. Wilson (Bradford), whom we were pleased to see. A start was made with the arrangements for the adult show. Date fixed for November 11th. It was pleasing to note that our members present had had fairly good luck, which augurs well. Decided to have a draw for a bird and cage in connection with the show, the price to admit purchaser of ticket to both the draw and exhibition. We hope this will be a help to members to get rid of a nice number of tickets, and also an inducement to would-be purchasers. Will members please note that we are having another meeting on Sept. 22nd to draw up schedule and select judge, etc.? Kindly make effort to be present. Fanciers and friends wishing to join please drop a card to me.—B. Bennett, Hampden-road, Wrexham.

HULL C.B.S.

At the last meeting a Wild Seed and Berry Competition was held, the number of competitors being very disappointing, only two competitors taking part, viz., Messrs. Riley and F. F. Potter. They were both very interesting collections, Mr. Potter's consisting of a grand selection of fresh gathered seeds, etc., looking beautifully fresh and natural, but none of them was named. The collection staged by Mr. Riley consisted of a rather larger variety, the majority being pressed, and all of them named, which was very entertaining to the large number present. Mr. T. Perkins was the elected judge, but he being absent Mr. G. W. Oliver kindly officiated, and awarded 1st prize to Mr. Riley, but would have great pleasure in giving the 2nd prize (which was awarded Mr. Potter) to the value of the 1st. A vote of sympathy was unanimously accorded to our esteemed member Mr. Jesse Calam in his serious illness. (Mr. Calam has since passed away. ED.) —Ernest R. Ridley, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa House, September 5th, Mr. Bracegirdle in chair. Messrs. Bracegirdle and Gardner kindly consented to give a washing exhibition at next meeting (October), and we hope there will be a good attendance of members and friends. Some minor matters in connection with the annual show were discussed and satisfactorily arranged.—J. Swindley, Sec.

WARRINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held August 31st, Mr. Knowles presiding, Mr. H. Pitchford was proposed. Classification for annual show (open) drawn up as follows: 5 Yorks., 5 Nor., 5 Bord., 3 Green Yorks., 3 Mules, 5 Brit., 2 Sell., 5 Novice Yorks., and 5 Novice Nor. Several specials were promised, and full prize money was guaranteed in the Border section. Prize money, 10s., 6s., 4s., and 2s. This ought to make an attractive schedule. A splendid room has been engaged.—G. M. Nelson, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Meeting held Tokio Cafe, Sept. 7th. Business was mostly in connection with the big show in November. Secretary read a notice from the secretary of the Green C.A., allotting us their patronage. The schedule was decided on as follows:—Open Section: Nor. 11 classes, Yorks. 2, Borders 2, Greens 8, 1 Mule, British 6, Foreign 2, 2 Selling and Gift. Open Amateur Section: 6 Nor. New staging was arranged for. All the Norwich section will be staged on the three-tier system. As this was the most important meeting of the year I was much disappointed and surprised at the poor attendance.—J. P. Leeming, Sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Entry forms were dispatched to members on Sept. 4th. Hope to be favoured with a large return of exhibits. Closing date, September 21st. One entry form has been returned minus name and address of member. The entries made were: One in each of the classes 2, 3, 5, and 6. Price of first two put in at £3 3s. each, and of the latter two £2 2s. each. Stamps in payment of catalogue also enclosed. Should the member see this notice, will be kindly send on at once his name, etc. I would impress upon members being very particular in giving all the information desired as per entry form. Show hall will be open on the Friday evening, Sept. 29th, for taking in of birds.—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held September 7th, Mr. F. J. Weaver in chair. A good number of members turned up to "thrash out" the schedule for our open show. And right well it was done. We decided to make the 41 classes as in previous years. There was one alteration from last year, and that was the cutting out of the natural colour class, which in previous years has not come up to expectations; so we decided to put in its stead a novice hen class for Norwich, as it seems hard on the novice to have to keep his hens at home and only send his cocks and unflighted birds out; so we hope the novices will patronise this class and make it a success. The club has been favoured again with the patronage of the M.C.Y.C.C. for champion and novice classes, and are providing two cups for competition.—J. Gibbons, Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held September 6. Two new members were elected—viz., Mrs., Wright and C. Sugden, Esq. A discussion took place as to whether F.F. Show 1st prizes should affect the amateur definition, but it was finally decided that neither pair shows nor F.F. show should count. Members please note this. The hon. sec. intimated he had been appointed local hon. sec. for CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and pointed out several ways in which it would be a very useful body. It was hoped the schedule for the November show would be gone through, but it was agreed to leave it till next meeting, October 4, when it is hoped every member will turn up. Local fanciers are reminded that according to rule their names must be proposed as would-be members at next meeting, or they will not be eligible to compete at November show. Secretary would also be glad to receive outstanding subs., as several are overdue. Secretary handed round a microscope containing some red-mites; this caused a lot of interest.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Meeting held Co-operative Hall (St. George's Cross), vice-president Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a good attendance. Usual club business transacted. Secretary intimated the change of hall for annual members' show. After negotiations, the "Co-operative Hall," 40, Gladstone-street (St. George's Cross) has been secured for this event. It is within a few yards of our old quarters, which we have been obliged to vacate. The chief business was a paper on the "Border Fancy Canary," by Mr. Andrew Miller. This gentleman is not a stranger amongst us; he is well known in the Fancy all over Scotland as a judge, breeder, and exhibitor. Much as he admired Crests, Plainheads, and Yorkshires, he said, he did not consider his bird-room complete without a few pairs of Borders. He advised those about to start to go in for a good pair of Borders. They were hardy and easy to keep. Buy a first-class pair, and they would repay one. As to size, no Border should be over 5½ inches long; it must be true to type, lightly made, well filled in at the shoulders (no hollow in back), head neat and round, wings just meeting at tips, tail nice and compact (crossed wings and "fish-tail" is a bad fault in a Border). Colour: rich and level; carriage gay and jaunty, bird standing at an angle of 45 degrees. Some birds, Mr. Miller said, were disqualified for being colour-fed when there was not the slightest colour-feeding about them. It was purely the rich colour which some of our judges suspected very often. With regard to hand-washing, fanciers in the country had a great advantage, as they scarcely ever required to wash a bird for a show, whereas we in a city like Glasgow had always to wash our birds for every show. The washing had one fault: it tended to lessen that rare bloom we all liked to see in a Border. Mr. Miller dealt at great length on marked breeding. This, he said, required to be watched and thought out very carefully and judiciously; sometimes it took years to get the much-desired even marks. Regarding Cinnamons he had never kept very many of these, only an odd one or two for stock purposes, and he thought this subject would make another lecture. In closing his very interesting paper, Mr. Miller thanked the members for their attention, and said he would be pleased to answer questions. A great many questions were asked, and were very ably answered. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer and to the chairman brought a very pleasant and enjoyable evening to a close. Will members please note that the monthly meetings (until further notice) will be held in the Co-operative Hall, 40, Gladstone-street (St. George's Cross)?—William Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

WHO'S THE FANCIER

who has not yet given me a trial? He is the man I particularly want to read this advt., as once I get a person's custom I know I can retain it, if sterling value, low prices, and honest dealing mean anything. My conditions of sale are these: Everything is sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of "Cage Birds," on the distinct understanding that unless every satisfaction is given birds have only to be returned and every penny of your money is promptly and cheerfully refunded. Thanks for kind attention to such a small order. Yours, E. Dann." "Soldiers' Rest, Amuitsford, Northumberland, Sept. 18. Sir,—Birds (12 Linnets) arrived all healthy. I give you every credit for the way you pack your birds, with plenty of room and light. They are the finest lot of birds I ever had from any dealer, and I give you praise against all others. I have had birds from all over the country, and if I had sent to you first I should have saved pounds. Yours, Thomas Gates." Please note all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester by expert catchers employed solely by myself; none are sent out until thoroughly on hard seed, and a signed guarantee sent with every bird that they are not recently taken and do not come under the various Bird Acts, and an indemnity given by me in every case taking all risks against prosecution arising therefrom. I am only dealer in this country giving this guarantee and indemnity. I make no idle boasts, but am open to prove at any time that I sell more British birds and have a larger stock always on hand than any other two dealers in Midlands, and that I sell more Worcestershire birds than the whole lot put together (professional copyists note). Visitors are requested to call and see hundreds upon hundreds of Britishers all caged separately. Note name and address; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

An all-important fact to every purchaser is: Where can I get THE BEST VALUE FOR MY MONEY? That is the question every intelligent buyer puts to him or herself before deciding on a purchase; yet may find it most difficult to decide owing to the claims of such numbers to be the very ones to give it. Hence I ask your careful perusal of the following words—which are not mine, not solicited, not raked up from past years, but are Nineteen Hundred and Eleven.

Treorchy, Sept. 18th, 1911.—Received bird safely, and was surprised to get such value for money after having seen the class of birds received from other dealers at the same prices. Shall send all orders to you in future.—J. Rees to W. Rudd.

Belfast, Sept., 1911.—Birds arrived safely in excellent condition. I think it splendid value for money. Will recommend you to all my friends.—J. Somers to W. Rudd.

Plumstead, Kent, Sept., 1911.—Sir,—I have done all right with the young birds bred from birds purchased from you. I got two specials, two firsts, one second. Judge, Mr. Gardner. I have in all won eleven prizes at two shows. I let everyone know where I got the old birds that bred these from, and you can use my name if you think fit at any time.—D. C. Williams to W. Rudd.

Westport, Sept., 1911.—Bird arrived safe and sound. I am delighted with it, especially as I was afraid to invest without seeing the bird first, until I thought of you. I must say you are a very straightforward man.—P. J. Lynel to W. Rudd.

Many more in a similar strain could be given, and all received during this month (September, 1911). The originals of all testimonials I publish can be seen by anyone calling at my office, in the ENVELOPES BEARING OFFICIAL POSTMARKS. This is the part of "ancient" testimonials that will not bear scrutiny. The above, however, should suffice for all those that are still wondering, to prove that they will receive both value and satisfaction if they will entrust their orders to W. Rudd, Bird Specialist, Norwich.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held September 16th, Mr. Farrer presiding. Schedule for open show, January 12th and 13th, was considered. Decided, to have 40 classes, particulars of which will be given later. Messrs. Stanger and Maddison were appointed judges. Shall be glad if every member will now consider it his duty to seek specials and subscriptions. At next meeting the schedule will be further considered, and members are urged to attend promptly at 7.30 p.m. on September 30th. We have accepted the patronage of the N.J.C.C.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held Crown Hotel, Sept. 6th, Mr. Burke in chair. Mr. Raby was elected a member. Secretary reported we had received the M.C.Y.C.C. patronage, both champion and novice classes for open show. A long discussion took place regarding show expenses, the printing bill for last show again coming in for criticism, in which matter the late Sec. ably held his own against the opposition. Eventually the printing and other matters were left in the Secretary's hands to deal with. Mr. de Maillet proposed that a second judge be appointed, and Mr. J. C. Barnes was engaged, the show promising to be a great success. The allocation of special prizes could not be dealt with as time was short, and these have to be fixed at a special meeting, Sept. 20th.—J. H. de Maillet, for present Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held headquarters, "Feathers" Hotel, Great Chapel Street, Westminster, Aug. 31st. Present: Messrs. J. Dewhurst (in chair), T. R. Trower, J. H. Shepherd, C. Botting, A. Silver, G. Mortlock, C. T. Maxwell, A. J. Mariey, W. Page, G. Crabb, R. A. Newley, A. Plumbridge, and J. P. Carr. It was unanimously decided, to hold Club show in conjunction with the L.C.B.A. show, Nov. 24th to 27th, Horticultural Hall, under same conditions as in previous years. A gold, silver, and bronze medal will be awarded for first, second, and third most points in each of the three sections. Mr. Trower has very kindly given a silver medal for each section, for most points gained by a member who has not previously won a medal. A silver medal, given by the Toronto C.B.A., will be allotted to the best bird in the three sections. The silver "Hybrid" Cup and the silver "Nomination" Hardhill Cup will be competed for at this show. It is hoped that the club show will be better supported by the members than it was last year. Application for the Club's patronage was read from Swansea C.B.A., and two silver medals were granted. Bournemouth C.B.S., having forfeited the medal allotted them, there remains one silver medal to be allotted. Brighton C.B.S., was allotted a gift medal. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Committee met September 12 in Duncan's, 71, London Street, Glasgow, Mr. W. Hutchison, vice-president, in the chair, before a large turn-out of members. Letters of resignation were read from Mr. R. B. Jarvie (president) and Mr. D. Graham, and after a good deal of discussion it was decided to accept these. A motion was also unanimously carried, debarring Messrs. D. Graham and A. McFarlane from exhibiting at our open show. A rule was also made, "that any fancier found entering birds that were not his bona-fide property shall be debarred from exhibiting at any future show." The members were very fortunate in persuading Mr. W. Hutchison, the popular sec. of the West of Scotland, to accept the position of president. Mr. M. Craig was also elected to fill Mr. Hutchison's place as vice-president, and with two such experienced and hard-working fanciers at the head, there is every prospect of the show having a successful termination. The secretary then informed those present that the club had been successful in gaining the patronage of the S.B.B. and M.C. and their full complement of cups, trophy, and medals will be on competition at the show, also the Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland have granted us their club show and specials. The Border Fancy Club medal for best bird, and possibly one of their novice medals, will also be on competition. The club were unfortunate in not getting the patronage of the S.C.C. owing to the judge appointed not being a member of that club. It was decided to again purchase Garrison's prize leather cards. Several other items were decided, after which the meeting terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—F. Bowman, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 14th, Wentworth Cafe, Pinstone Street, Mr. A. Bradshaw in chair. Arrangements for our 32nd open show, Dec. 9th, Montgomery Hall, were made. Everything is being prepared in the hope of having a record show. Popular prize money fixed, viz., 10s., 6s., 4s., 2s., in Canary, Hybrid, and British Bird classes, large Foreign classes 15s., 10s., 5s.; small Foreign, 12s., 8s., 4s.; entry fee 1s. 6d. all sections. All prize money is guaranteed. Also decided, that we engage an additional judge. Several specials were promised, as also were birds for the Gift class. The two secretaries have guaranteed to the amount of £3; also Messrs. Cowley and Thorpe the auditors' fees. Arrangements are being made re adverts. in schedule and catalogue. The following classes for the various sections were decided upon: Yorks. 11, Nor. 8, Crests 4, Mule or Hyb. 3, Brit. 7, For. 2, Sell. 2, Gift 1, Extra Stock 1. Novice exhibitors are being specially catered for, having 7 classes. Secretary gave a detailed report of the N.F. show. All members who have not brought their ticket money are asked to bring it in on next meeting night. Previous rambles having been such a marked success, it is proposed to have another on Sept. 23rd to Redmires. Wagonettes will leave Hillsborough Bridge at 2 o'c., and will meet friends from the other side of the city at the top of Townhead Street at 2.30. Return fare 1s. 6d. Members and friends invited. October meeting is a washing exhibition by Mr. G. Browning (Rotherham) and nominations for officers for 1912. In addition to the judging competition on Nov. 2nd, a table show of unflighted Yorks. and Nor. has been arranged; two classes each variety; full particulars later. Mr. P. Jackson was elected a new member.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

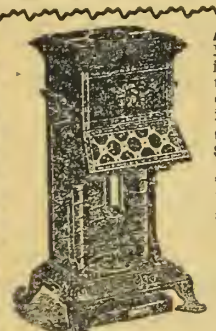
DONCASTER

C.B.S., Nov. 24th and 25th. 40 classes; numerous specials. Popular judges, Barnes and Maddison.—G. BESCOBY, 26, Duke Street.

It was a pleasaut surprise to me on Friday last when I got my copy of Cage Birds to find the picture of one of my birds occupying such a coveted position as the front page of this bird-fancier's encyclopædia. The bird did fairly well for me last show season for a young bird, as I only bred it last year. I might say that I breed all my own winners. The bird was out five times, and its record is: 1st and gold medal, Rochdale; 1st, Liverpool; 1st and B.F. C.C. Proof Model and special for best Green at Swansea; 3rd at Manchester; and 2nd at Palace. Being one of the team that won for me the Green Canary Association Silver Cup, I think readers of Cage Birds will agree with me when I say that the honour you have conferred on it is a just reward. I must also thauk your artist, Mr. Norman, for the pleasing and lifelike reproduction, and I trust that our owu weekly budget, "C.B.," may keep on prospering, which I am sure it richly deserves. James Johnston (Wallsend-on-Tyne).



A Large Migrant.

Tho huge Stork, a bird measuring three feet in length, was at one time common in these islands upon migration, but times have changed and although the species still freqnuent Contiuental northern districts, these birds no longer visit us, although the couditions under which they flourish are to be found here, and no doubt, if unmolested, they would again soon become fairly plentiful.

Country Rambles

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

A nice party assembled at headquarters on Sunday, September 3, to take part in a ramble to Moddersall, one of the prettiest spots in North Staffordshire. Before starting, the party was photographed. We went by train to Blyth Bridge as arranged, the weather being gloriously fine. We had a lovely walk across the fields and along pleasant lanes. Arriving at Moddersall, everyone was ready for refreshment, and full justice was done to a capital tea at the Boar Hotel, Mr. H. George rendering great assistance to the management. Starting off again for Barleston Station, we had a most enjoyable walk. The sun having gone down, the weather was much cooler and pleasanter than in the afternoon. Several members of the party expressed regret that more fanciers had not taken part in the ramble. Stoke was reached at 9.50 p.m., everyone having thoroughly enjoyed the outing.—J. Pitchford.

OBITUARY.

Mr. W. MILLWARD (Blackburn).

It is with deep regret that we report the loss of our worthy president, Mr. W. Millward, of Blackburn, who died on September 14 after a very short illness, write Messrs. Flint and Swarbrick, secs. of the Tideswell C.B.I.S. Fanciers and friends who knew him in the Lancashire district will kuow the loss we have sustained, and will share our sympathy towards his wife and family.

Mr. EDWARD SCOTT MUIR (Eaglesfield).

There has just been removed by death at Eaglesfield, on September 11, Mr. Edward Scott Muir, ono of the oldest fanciers in Dumfriesshire, writes Mr. W. Muir (Edinburgh), a nephew of the deceased. Born at Ecclefechan 81 years ago, Mr. E. S. Muir from boyhood had a love for birds and all that pertained to them. The Belgian, Scotch Fancy, and Goldfinch were his favourites, he retaining these to the last. He was an exhibitor in a quiet way at local and other shows, where he was very successful. Not later than September 2, at a local show, his birds graced the bench, where again he met with success. Besides being a fancier, in his earlier days he was a champion draughts player over a wide Border district, where he had always lived. He was a winner of many tourneys, and in later years he was always looked upon as an authority of the game. He was held in esteem hy all who knew him. On September 13, in Hoddam Churchyard, amidst sympathy of many fanciers and friends, he was laid to rest.

The Eastern Counties C.B.S. have arranged a series of tahle shows to take place this coming season, the first to be held on October 5, at 8 p.m. sharp, at our headquarters, the Social Settlement, Fore Street, Ipswich, writes Mr. W. Barrett, the hon. sec. Two classes aro provided, viz., A.V. Norwich P.H. Adult Yellow, and ditto Young Buff. Mr. J. Bevan (Ipswich) will judge.

The 1911-12 handbook of the Southern Yorkshire C.C. has just been issued. It contains the rules of the club, the scale of points for exhibition birds, the committee bye-laws, the 1910-11 halance-sheet (showing cash in hand £7 17s. 11d., as against £6 9s. 11d. in the previous year), a list of the special prizes, etc., for competition, and the members' names and addresses. The sec. is Mr. J. W. Rennie, The Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants.

Many thanks for the portrayal of my Palace winning Belgian in the place of honour in your valued paper, Cage Birds. I must compliment your artist, Mr. Norman, on his lifelike drawing of same. I am pleased to say that the bird has again moulted out grand, and should he heard of later. I have to thank your paper for my success. "C.B." always contains sound advice, and as an advertising medium it has no equal.—Harry Lohr (Carmarthen).

We will forward a schedule to all who patronised our shows last year, write Messrs. King and Joiner, secs. of the Portsmouth C.B.S. We are equipped with one of the finest halls for a cage bird show that it is possible to obtain. It is capable of staging from two to three thousand exhibits. The society has been to the expense of new staging, which will prove a boon to visitors and exhibitors. The hall can be heated to requirements, and contains every possible convenience. We have received congratulatory letters from fanciers in all quarters on our past shows, and we trust to receive every support for our show on October 18 and 19.

IMPORTANT TO SHOW SECRETARIES & OFFICIALS.

Kindly Give This Your Attention.

We invite the co-operation of show secretaries, managers and others in the preparation of Cage Birds annual "Guide to the Season's Open Shows." This "Show Guide" has proved enormously popular in the past, and the help we have always received in its compilation encourages us to hope for similar assistance now. We should be glad to learn from the officials of every cage bird show already fixed the following particulars:—(a) name and date of show; (b) names of judges officiating at same; (c) the approximate number of cage bird classes; (d) name and address of secretary (or show manager); and (e) whether show is open to the United Kingdom.

The list is already a fairly full one, and we print the names below. We should like to hear from all societies whose fixture is not included in this list.

Kindly note: A POSTCARD WILL DO. POST SAME AT ONCE.

Fanciers generally can help us materially by bringing the above to the attentiou of the society to which they belong.

I have had so many applications in reply to my advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS," that I find it impossible to answer them all. I have had letters from all over the country, and could have sold the birds, etc., two or three times over. — Geo. W. Wright (Fallowfield).

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; The Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, Maldon. Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; Sir CHAS. LAWES-WITTEWRONGE, Bart., London; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; GERALD E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; CHAS. CUSHNY, Esq., London.

The Views of Our Vice-Presidents.

Sir Chas. Lawes-Wittewronge writes: "I shall be pleased to become a Vice-President or Patron, or whatever you wish, of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Why do not these people stop the shooting of wild birds? There would be some sense in that. But they are too cowardly to attack the real thing."

Mrs. M. B. Partridge, Worthing, who is already a member, writes: "I shall be very pleased to be a Vice-President of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. My interest is very strong, and I am recommending the LEAGUE to all my friends who are interested in birds, and am trying to enrol all my fellow members of our local Fanciers' Association.

Gerald E. Rattigan, Esq., London, writes: "I thoroughly approve of the objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and shall be very pleased to be enrolled as a Vice-President.

The Rev. G. H. Raynor, Maldon, in sending a donation to the funds, writes: "By all means add my name as a patron of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Personally I don't think that such a thing as putting an entire stop to bird-keeping in England could ever come to pass, but it is of course as well to take preventive measures."

(I quite endorse Mr. Raynor's opinion. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is here to see that an entire stop is not put to bird-keeping. There is, however, a section of so-called Humanitarians who are leaving no stone unturned to effect this object, and we need all the support we can get to put up such an opposition that they will see that their efforts are futile).

Booking Clerks and Bird Parcels.

I have now completed the enquiries into the alleged refusal of the Nottingham booking clerks to accept for transmission parcels containing birds, and of the three companies serving Nottingham, two, the G.N.R. and the G.C.R., inform me that no instructions had been given their clerks to decline to forward these. The third company, the Midland, writes as follows:—"As the Nottingham City Bye-laws make it an offence for anyone to have in possession certain scheduled birds at any time of the year, we do not, therefore, accept these birds for conveyance." I have written to the District Superintendent of the Midland to the effect that it is only an offence to have "freshly taken" birds in one's possession (this has been already decided in the Law Courts), and that no bye laws could legally make it an offence to have in possession birds other than those "recently caught." Anyway, two of the three Companies say that they do not refuse to carry birds, and there would therefore seem to be facilities for despatching birds without troubling the Midland Railway Co. to add to their traffic receipts.

More Groundless Assertions.

The letter to which Mr. Watson in another column refers is written over the nom-de-plume of "Sheffielder," and consists mainly of the hysterics to which we have become accustomed. It displays the usual amount of ignorance of the circumstances under which many thousands of birds are kept in happiness and comfort. One quotation will be sufficient. The pseudonymous writer says of the birds which are taken during the close season "Of these an enormous percentage die almost at once, while the rest lead a more or less wretched existence in cages, until death, hastened only too often by neglect, brings release." Of course, after the "enormous percentage" and "the rest," there are no birds left at all which are being kept in rational conditions. No pet birds! No birds living from ten to twenty years in the loving care of their owners! No exhibitions of cage-birds with hundreds of competing birds, each and all in such perfection of plumage and healthy condition as would never have been attained if they had been left to fight for their food and life in freedom! No anything; except corpses of the birds which have immediately died or have perished from neglect! Could anything be more absurd? Yet there are some people who are misled by such vapourings as those of "Sheffielder" and his kin, and who honestly fancy that the caging of a bird is an act of monstrous cruelty. The doctrine is promulgated by paid preachers, but it is accepted without question by a proportion of kind-hearted people who know, if possible, less of the subject than the stump orators; and it is this section who find the money and who would vote for any prohibitive legislation. It behoves all real bird lovers to face the danger which threatens the entire banning of their hobby, and to do so now. It will be too late if ever these perfervid opponents get in the thin edge of the wedge, and we can only by united efforts prevent its insertion. Bestir yourselves now, and join CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The rest is easy.

Practical Help Indeed.

Mr. F. J. Wickham, of Chatham, kindly writes as follows:—"I shall offer prizes during the season at shows around Kent of one year's subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, with pendant or brooch at winner's option." This is a very practical method of helping the LEAGUE, and one which is open to many who are unable to make a substantial donation, but who would be willing to support it by a means which is within the scope of their power. Our strength lies in numbers, and every new member not only helps himself but helps his fellow members in making the stand which has been rendered imperative in the defence of our joint hobby.

A Coincidence.

It happens very curiously that the idea of Mr. Wickham has simultaneously occurred to another member, Mr. Hinckley, also of Chatham. Mr. Hinckley has, however, "gone one better," for he has already put the idea into execution, and has presented a subscription and badge to be competed for at Chatham Show in any class at the option of the Committee.

A Newspaper Article.

I referred last week to an appreciative article which had been published in the "Ashton-under-Lyne Reporter," and in another column appears a reprint of a portion of this. I hope to publish in subsequent issues the continuation of this interesting contribution. I am sure it will be appreciated not only by new readers, but also by those who have already seen my own reply to the exaggerations contained in the pamphlet published by the Humanitarian League.

The verdict to which Mr. Colville refers has already been upset. In the case of the R.S.P.C.A. v. Bennett the Society sought to establish that birds which had been kept for seven weeks by Mr. Bennett were "recently taken" within the meaning of the Act. They contended that a wild bird if caught at any time within the previous six months was "recently taken." The police magistrate decided against them, and they took the case to the Divisional Court. Here, the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Ridley, and Mr. Justice Bray unanimously upheld the magistrate's decision. Mr. Justice Bray, in giving judgment, said he "should be very slow to find that any bird which had been taken even for fourteen days was 'recently taken.'"

Clackmannanshire C.B.S. Support.

Mr. Arnott, the Hon. Sec. of the above Society, writes as follows:—

Sir,—At a meeting of our society on 16th inst. I had the pleasure of laying before the meeting your letter dated July 27 last, and I was asked to take up the position of local hon. sec., and to endeavour to get as many members for the LEAGUE as possible. Will you kindly, therefore, forward pamphlets for distribution, so that I may get to work at once?

Alloa, N.B. PETER ARNOTT.

This week I have the pleasure of announcing additions to our list of Local Hon. Secs. as follows:—

Camborne, Mr. F. Collins, 60, Union Street.

Some Recent Arrivals from Abroad.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

Uncommon Song-Tanagers.

It is quite a puzzle why rare Tanagers should be more frequently imported now than formerly in view of the fact that some of the best sources of supply are now legally protected, such as British Guiana and Jamaica, and that a well-known professional, who used to make a practice of travelling with birds between South America and English ports, has gone out of the business. I can only suppose that the British sailor-man, who I fancy does a good deal of the importing nowadays, has acquired wisdom and can now spot a good Tanager in a mixed lot. Mr. C. T. Maxwell, the well-known exhibitor, writes me that he recently picked up three Tanagers of the Euphonia type but with blue caps. The description given me is not detailed and, as there are at least five members of the genus Euphonia which have a blue cap, I am not too certain as to their identity, but it is probable that they are E. sclater, a rare species hailing from Porto Rico.

The male has the upper surface blue-black; the underparts and forehead orange; the cap bright blue. A singular characteristic of these blue-capped Tanagers is that the females, though their body colour is mostly the usual olive green, also have the blue cap which gives them a very distinctive appearance. Mr. Maxwell's are doing well and will, I daresay, make their appearance in due course on the show bench; but two other aviculturists have not been so fortunate with the same, or a similar, species.

Habits of the Violet Tanager.

I have been quite content for the past year or two to keep only Song-Tanagers in my aviary, and have found them most interesting, especially the little Violet, a species which most aviculturists seem to think too common to be worth notice. In some previous notes I alluded to two odd habits of this species—its queer hobby of building domed nests at all seasons of the year, and its curious knack of hanging, head downwards, from a branch in a shower, presumably to allow the rain to penetrate to the skin and dislodge red mite. I could mention many others. I find that, if there is no cock in the aviary, hens will sing quite as well as cocks. One day I surprised the hen of a breeding pair in the act of feeding the male with regurgitated food, which seems to me to be quite interesting as suggesting a close connection between the Tanagers and the Finches. One would not have been so surprised to detect this habit in a species such as the Black Tanager, which eats a little seed, but the Violet has always been regarded as essentially a fruit-eater. I find, however, that it has really very catholic tastes in the matter of diet; it is fond of the flowering heads of groundsel and milk-thistle; it is partial to slugs—the larger the slug the more it is appreciated, and it is quite an epicure in the matter of gentles which it chews—perhaps I should say mandibulates—slowly and with great relish.

Concerning Hoopoes.

A few of these handsome birds have been imported lately, but by no means so many as last year—in fact, I fear that, what with the bitter spring which killed vast numbers of the migrants returning to their breeding areas and the extraordinary drought of the past summer which has caused a great shortage of insect food, there has been a considerable reduction in the numbers of European birds. Reports just to hand state that the recent winter in parts of Australia and New Zealand has been more severe than any during the past thirty years, and, if this fact indicates (as it is supposed to indicate) that the coming winter in our country will be exceptionally severe, bird life will be scanty indeed next spring. A notable success has lately been attained by the rearing of five young Hoopoes in the aviary of Mr. Armstein, of Cork—a success which will rank with the nesting of Princess Stephanie's Bird of Paradise in Mr. Brook's aviary, and the partial rearing of three broods of Gold-fronted Fruitsuckers in Dr. Amsler's aviary at Eton as among the most interesting events of the year from the aviarist's point of view, though the brood of Striated Colies, which Mr. Thorpe tells me are now feathering in a Newcastle aviary, will also be a noteworthy record if fully reared. Of course, Hoopoes as they were kept in Bechstein's days, in a stuffy, stove-heated bird-room, could not be expected to do well, but when we reflect that, even with the skilful, out-of-door treatment provided by our Zoo, they have never done well for any considerable length of time and that scores of experienced bird keepers have failed with this species, we shall all admit that the greatest possible credit is due to Mr. Armstein. Our readers will find particulars of the occurrence in the August and September numbers of "Bird Notes," from which it appears that the eggs were laid in a chocolate box in a dark corner behind some cages. The beaks of the young were no longer at first than those of young Thrushes and, even when the young Hoopoes were fully feathered and could erect their crests, their beaks were only 1¼ inches long.

Two points may be noted. The first is that the parents were obtained in the month of May. Many worthy people, whose knowledge of practical trapping is probably rudimentary, seem to imagine that birds caught in the spring do not prosper: my own experience is that they do every bit as well as those caught in the Autumn, and on several occasions I have known them to go to nest very shortly after capture. Of course by Spring-caught birds I mean those trapped before pairing has taken place; after that date no experienced or humane person would do any trapping.

The second point is that Mr. Armstein tells us that his aviary is of very moderate size and contains a fair number of other birds. This shows us that it is not necessary to have a palatial aviary to command success even with such a difficult subject as the Hoopoe—indeed we must all have noticed how very barren of results these costly structures are. Though it is the greatest possible treat to me to be allowed to visit these aviaries, I never feel a pang of jealousy.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Indian Seeds (Correction).—A little printer's error occurred, I find, in the reply on this subject on Sept. 9th. Will the querist please note that the words "crushed grain or cholum" should read "crushed gram or cholum."

Reply by Return (C. Tyrell).—A reply should have reached you before your second letter reached us. You may not be aware that queries have to be re-posted to me after arrival at the office, thus occupying at lease two "posts" before reaching me.

A Tender foot (Anxious).—First examine feet as bird stands on perch to see if the toes are normal in shape. See that it has suitably shaped and well fitting perches of a proper size. Keep cage floor and perches clean, and the floor strewn with clean dry gritty sand. Then treat the feet for a day or two the same as advised to "C. Tyrell."

Cause of Clear Eggs (12 clear eggs).—It is quite impossible to put the finger on the cause of this without very full particulars of the management and general condition of the stock.. It is not at all uncommon for a pair of birds to appear in the very pink of health and condition, to pair freely, and apparently perform all necessary duties with the greatest freedom, and yet absolutely fail to produce a fertile egg. They do not 'hit," as an old hand would term it, and that is about all that can be said of many cases. Either one or both birds may be sterile; excessive fatness of one or both birds; a snap of chilly weather, especially East winds, when the eggs are being produced; and accidental obstructions are only a portion of the possible causes. You should read up the chapters on breeding in "Our Canaries."

Colour-fed Border (Border Novice).—(1) Colour-feeding is strictly prohibited in this variety; therefore, if your bird shows evident signs of colour-feeding it would be passed unnoticed, either in an A.O.V. class or a separate Border Fancy class, or, which is still worse, it might possibly be disqualified. (2) No; a colour-fed Border would not stand a better chance than a "natural" colour one in the A.O.V. class. Quite the reverse would be the case. (3) No, not unless the two birds were sold at the limit price of the class, as, for example, a matched pair. Each cage represents a separate entry.

A Window Songster (Novice).—For mercy's sake do not keep the bird in the window. It is absolutely the worst position you could choose for the health and well-being of the bird. Keep it in a nice, bright position within the room, in a box cage for preference, but in any case quite out of reach of draughts, foul air from burning lights, etc., and extremes of heat and cold Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give separately half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture you now use as staple, and once a week a small teaspoonful of egg-food, or crushed sponge cake, or the equivalent in bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a little greenstuff about three times a week as long as the weather keeps open, then substitute a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or boiled or raw carrot. Supply a bath two or three times a week (daily in summer), and keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand. You should get the Nutshell booklets Nos. 5 and 10.

Constantly Picking Itself (J. Whitfield, St. Helen's).—Catch the bird and see if it is troubled with grey lice. If it is you will soon be aware of the fact by their running about your hand, in which case take the necessary steps to eradicate them, as frequently detailed here. Feed as advised to "Novice" in this issue, except that for the first week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the intervening days add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash to the drinking water. In the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Keep it in an equable and fairly warm temperature to expedite the moult. You should read our No. 10 Nutshell booklet.

Acknowledgment (M. E. W.).—Thank you for letter. Sorry to hear another death has occurred. I think it rather a pity you did not send this body to our post-mortem examiner for an ordinary report as to cause of death. This would have cost only 1s. 6d.—not a guinea—and would doubtless have indicated whether it was worth while investigating further for poison.

Feathers Ruffled (Anxious).—It is quite usual for birds to appear somewhat loose-feathered and ruffled when at roost, so if this is not excessive in your bird it may not mean much. The digestive organs are evidently somewhat out of order. Give plain canary only as a staple diet. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw and either a green plantain stalk or a small spray of watercress. Limit the diet to this for a fortnight. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and see that all food and water vessels are kept scrupulously clean. See Mr. Weston's column for reply re Ortolans.

Moulting Lighter (Esparto).—It is quite a trifle uncommon for birds to lose markings of plumage at moulting, but by no means unknown. When there is a cinnamon taint in the blood these light changes are often met with. Providing the birds are in apparently good normal health, you should do nothing at all. Certainly anæmia has nothing to do with the change. As regards your poor results, I would advise you to try to get a little lettuce drawn up in a cellar or under glass for the first round, or use tender young groundsel, and do not pair up until quite the end of March or first week in April. It is quite possible to be too fussy and interfering during the nesting time, but it is still essential that scrupulous cleanliness be observed. The type of management you instance is as dangerous as it is disgusting. It succeeds for a time, but when nemesis steps in in the form of disease, there is generally "a clean sweep" in double-quick time.

Cannot Perch (Imprimature).—See if bird's toes are perfect and in a normal condition, and also see that the perches are of a proper size and shape, and fixed firmly so that they do not wriggle about when the bird gets on them. In addition to the staple of plain canary give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and either a morsel of banana or greenfood every second day. On the alternate days give a scrap of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "Pit Laddie" last week. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the wires for bird to peck at. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence; in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid. After this for a fortnight give 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day.

To Cure Fits (Auld Killie).—Your system of feeding is decidedly bad, and I cannot help thinking the position in which bird is kept is also a very bad one. Any position in a window is almost invariably draughty or extremely fluctuating. The fits are due to excessive nervousness, which might have been brought on or aggravated by the unsuitable conditions. Keep it in a box cage, out of draughts, in an equable temperature, and a nice bright position further in the room. Let it be where it will see people constantly moving about, but not too prominent, or near to the movement, until some of the nervousness has worn off. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one summer rape; once a week a small teaspoonful of egg-food, or the equivalent in bread and milk, and once a week a similar quantity of mixed seed as advised "Pit Laddie" last week. Give a little green food three times a week and a bath about as often. In the drinking water give every second day for a week as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half as much bromide of potassium; in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day. Afterwards repeat two weeks' treatment in same order. Get No. 23 Nutshell booklet.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Some of the appended replies have been kindly supplied by Mr. H. J. Fulljames in the absence of Mr. Weston on holiday.

Feeding of Ortolan Bunting (Anxious).—Yes; the principal seed eaten by all the Buntings is canary seed. In an outdoor aviary your bird would doubtless have the opportunity of eating other seeds if it should care to do so. A mealworm or two occasionally is appreciated, and most Buntings will eat a little soft food such as is given to insectivorous birds.

"Six-by Three" (J. H. E.).—I have heard of at least three varying explanations as to the meaning of the term "three-by-six" (or "six-by-three") applied to the Goldfinch. The most general and I think the correct one is that it refers to the white markings (or "moons") found on the underside of the outer tail-feathers. These more-or-less oval white markings are generally four in number; two at each side of the tail. But in a few Goldfies three "moons" are found at each side—six in all. Hence the term "three-by-six." A bird so marked is generally held to be of some extra value by the "knowing old fanciers" (as "sure mulers," and the like). It is a fact, which I have verified myself, that "three-by-six" birds are practically always exceptionally good in colour and quality (silkiness) of feather.

Which Hen Finch (E. D. G.).—Quite a number of hen Finches will breed with a cock Canary. I may mention the Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Linnet, Redpoll, Goldfinch and Siskin. The size of the Canary should be regulated somewhat, of course, to agree with the size of its partner. The hen Greenfinch is at all times a likely breeder in a cage. The hen Bullie, too; and from this hen you would get, if successes attended your efforts, by far the most valuable progeny. You will be well advised to let the couple (whichever mating you decide to try) run together through the winter. The hen should be well domesticated (tame, and used to cage life) before the breeding operations are due to be embarked upon.

A Hen; and a Goldfinch (Iredale).—A Roller hen is quite a good mate for a British Goldfinch when Mules solely for singing purposes are desired. They will be small, of course. A great deal of their proficiency in singing will depend, however, upon the tuition the Mules get in their early days. If you keep them, for instance, within earshot of a Goldfinch, a Linnet and a Canary, all of them good singers, the Mules will pick up a far greater variety of notes than would be the case if they heard only the song of their male parent. It is quite possible that the change of cage has caused your Goldie to go off song temporarily. Or can it be that he is about to commence moulting You do not tell me whether he has moulted this season. Let the couple run together during the winter.

Sexing Goldfinch and Linnet Mules (A Weekly Subscriber).—I presume you mean young Mules? If so, there is, as I told another querist a few weeks ago, no method by which the cocks and hens can accurately be told, for both sexes are alike when in nestling plumage. It is true that the experienced breeder can make a practically accurate forecast, but I am thinking of the man of small expericnce in muling. And it adds enormously to the difficulty when the young Mules are seen singly. Get the whole of a brood together and then it should be possible for a cock or two to be sorted out with some certainty. In the case of Linnet Mules, go for the birds which are the warmest in ground colour—the likely liens will be of a decided silvery-grey tone, especially on the throat and breast, whereas the likely cocks will be a warmish-brown, often with a faint tinge of yellow on the throat. The same applies to Goldfinch Mules; choose the deepest coloured youngsters (especially at the throat and on the breast) with the brightest wings and longest heads (when viewed in profile). Size, of course, is in all cases a promising sign. The stumbling block for beginners will be any yellow hen Mules (when a yellow hen Canary has been used), for these are better so far as colour goes, than cocks bred from buff hens. They are generally, however, appreciably on the small side, and not hard to spot when viewed with other Mules which may have been bred from the same parent.

Sexing Blackbirds (H. Phillips).—This is a very easy matter after the first autumn moult. The young birds are nearly alike—browns of different shades, and showing the mottled markings common to all Thrushes, of which the Blackbird is, of course, one kind (scientifically, that is). After the first moult the new body colour of the cock birds is blackish brown, still faintly showing the mottling, while the hens moult only a little darker. The cocks get blacker with each succeeding moult until the mottlings are not visible, and their bills turn to bright orange-yellow. The hens never lose their brownish tinge, and their mottlings are always to be seen; neither do their bills turn yellow, except slightly so when they are several years old. If your bird is "very dark," as you say, with the spots only faintly showing, it may be a young cock, but if the spots are plainly visible and the bird is more than a year old, it is certainly a hen. Any way, it is not a Song Thrush, as suggested by your friend.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrot (with Growth on Tongue.

C. R. Adams.—If there are indications of the growth being full of pus, it should be lanced and cleansed, and this should really be done by a vet.—he has the proper instruments and necessary skill. A great deal depends on the character of the growth. It may clear itself away if treated with honey and borax (put on with a camel hair brush, well cleansing the brush after each occasion) daily, but only an examination could determine this. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. As the bird has been accustomed to sopped bread, soak the bread in chemical food and water (equal parts). Twice weekly give as drinking water one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water. While the mouth is sore, give about one tablespoonful of boiled maize daily. Also give seed mixture, grit, ripe fruit, shelled nuts, plain biscuit, and a little boiled potato. Note: Boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and a crock or glass drinking vessel should be used when giving drugs. I certainly advise letting a vet. see it, as it may be necessary to cut out the growth.

Parrot in Poor Plumage.

M.T.D.W.—It is very difficult to check a Parrot pulling if he is determined on it. You do not state how you have been treating and feeding the bird. Our Nutshell Booklet, the "Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager, would help you as to diet, etc. Every fourth day in lieu of plain water give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to two tablespoonfuls of water, and on the intervening days put one teaspoonful of byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. If the voiding should become watery-loose you must cease the magnesia for a time. As a last resource you must get a broad thin metal (or leather) collar fitted, sufficiently broad that it will prevent it getting at its feathers, but not its food and water; if of metal, the edges must be turned over so as not to chafe the neck or cut the feet if bird tries to get rid of it. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sop, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever. Spray once or twice weekly with quassia solution, using a mist sprayer.

Aviary Queries.

Mixed Birds.—(1) About thirty-five to forty; number could be increased with smaller species. (2) Grey and Green Singing Finches, Alario, Zebra, Ribbon, Jacarini, and Grey (S. Grisea) Finches, Black-head and Hooded Siskins (not cheap, but handsome and good songsters), Common (Red) and Green Avadavats, Common, Golden-breasted, Orange-cheek and St. Helena Waxbills, Long-tailed and Rufous-tailed Grass Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Java Sparrows (White and Grey), Bengalese and Diamond Sparrows, also Napoleon, Madagascar, and Half-masked Weavers, for plumage only. Note: Chaffinches, Brambles finches, and Greenfinches must be accounted dangerous, though remaining apparently amiable for a time. I have interpreted your query as applying to Hardbills only. (3) I have found that, excepting Cockatiels, mixing Budgerigars and other Parrakeets with Finch-like birds sooner or later spells disaster. Note: Unless you purchase birds that have been out of doors at least two months, you must not stock the aviary till spring. Several of our Nutshell booklets (2½d. post free from our manager) deal specially with some of the above, and would help you as to treatment.

West Indian Parrot.

J. B.—The West Indian Parrots are almost legion in variety, and your description is altogether too vague for me to be sure as to its species, but I am assuming that it is a Yellow-fronted Amazon, which is a larger bird than a Grey Parrot, but somewhat similar in form, and has a short tail. Unless a bird has been denied water for a time it should have continuous access to same; it is safe, perhaps, to offer it three or four times a day at first, then in about a month it should be safe to leave it in the cage altogether. Seed mixture: Canary and white millet one quart of each, and half-pint each of maize, oats, paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds—well mix, and keep a supply in the cage. I should spray it during fine weather (use a mist sprayer) twice weekly with quassia solution; this will keep it free from insect pests. In addition to seed supply ripe fruit, little potato (dry), nuts in variety, and plain biscuit. A pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seed mixture, and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept hanging in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Sexing Grey Singing Finches. (B.K.G.).—The distinctions between the sexes is almost infinitesimal as regards plumage and size, but if you closely observe them when they are singing or calling, you will notice a small pea-shaped white patch under the lower mandible of the male; this is only visible when he is warbling. It may still be a cock in spite of the nest building. It would mate with either a small variety of Canary or the Green Singing Finch. The bird is a Grey Singing Finch, and I opine a cock—if it is a strong singer it certainly is. Put a certain hen in of some species of Serin or Canary, and you will soon settle the points by its demeanour.

No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

South African Birds (T. A.).—Here are a few, all of which would, I think, be obtainable in Cape Town, though some may be common to a neighbouring district: Cape Canary, the Cape White-eye, Alario Finch, St. Helena and Sulphur Seed-eaters, St. Helena Waxbill, Violet-eared Waxbill, Red-headed Finch, Silverbill, Combassou, Pin-tailed, Paradise, Long-tailed, and Red-collared Whydahs, Yellow-shouldered and Grenadier Weavers, and several species of Dove, including the Cape Dove, should all be worth bringing over. There are undoubtedly many other species, inhabiting neighbouring districts, which would be obtainable in Cape Town.

What Parrakeet (Mrs. B.).—It is a Ring-neck Parrakeet, and should do well with you, and improve in talking capacity; but it must not have the bulk of which is Canary and white millet seeds and the other half of hemp, maize, oats, paddy rice and sunflower seeds in about equal parts; well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, greenfood, nuts, and plain biscuit, with grit, cuttlebone and water for drinking and bathing ad. lib. The above will give an ample and varied dietary, and if kept out of draughts the bird should thrive generally in the temperature of any ordinary living-room.

Parrakeets in Large Cage (Rosella).—Red-rumps, once they have settled down, would be almost sure to breed; very doubtful if Rosellas would. Twelve inches of the front (at one end) should be boarded in and the nest log hung behind this, near top of cage. If the top of cage is made waterproof, and a cover be tied in front of cage each night, the cage could be left out-of-doors all the year round in any sheltered position, where the birds would get some sun during the day. If kept indoors, the cage must be kept in coolest corner of kitchen, out of draught, yet in the part farthest removed from fire, so that they will not suffer from a sudden rise of temperature.

Are Zebra Finches Gregarious? (T.).—Several pairs of Budgerigars are kept together that they may stimulate each other to nest; Zebra Finches do not need this stimulus. Several pairs will agree together in one aviary, if it is large enough for them to find nesting receptacles without encroaching on each other. Your aviary, I take it, is small, and I should not include more than two pairs. You could keep with them Silverbills, Bronze Mannikins, Cut-throats, Bengalese, and Waxbills, according to capacity of aviary, and this company should supply the necessary stimulus. But Zebra Finches are always anxious to nest, and you will get ultimate success with your pair in the cage, though they will do better in the aviary. "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1s. 2d. post free from our Manager), would help you.

LEGAL QUERIES.

Answered by A BARRISTER.

H. O. (Glossop).—Your query raises an interesting point, assuming the following to be the facts. O sends by train 3 birds consigned to H by a certain railway, and pays this company a higher rate in order to ensure their safe delivery. The birds leave J at 9.50 p.m. and reach H's station at 5 p.m. next day. The next day O sends a further consignment to H, which leaves J at the same time and reaches its destination at 9 a.m. He learns later that the three birds when they arrived at H's station were dead; and he says that the death of the birds was due to the unreasonable delay in the journey. The explanation of the station officials was that the day was Saturday and that they were short-handed, and for that reason could not send the birds to H, who had to send for them about 6 p.m. On these facts, O asks is the Company liable? If O's contract with H was that the birds were not to be H's till they were delivered at his house, the property and the risk in the birds lay in O during the transit. If by the negligence of the company's servants the transit of the birds was so delayed as to bring about their death, the company is liable to O for that negligence. Moreover, as he had paid the company at an extra rate to secure their speedy arrival, he can claim damages for breach of contract. If all the facts are as stated in O's letter, he has a good cause for action against the company.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 1s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Blue Pigeon.—Death arose from bronchopneumonia, the most fatal form of lung affection. It had its origin in a common cold; bronchitis following, as evidenced by the wheezing sounds produced during respiration. Later, owing to the disease being unchecked, the smaller bronchial tubes and the substance of the lungs taking on inflammatory changes. Catarrh of the upper air passages is such a common condition, many recovering spontaneously, that very little importance is attached to it; but in all cases it is absolutely essential that early treatment should be adopted so as to minimise risk of loss from any one of its many complications. I have carried out your wishes with regard to disposal of remains.

Brownie.—Your bird died of congestion of the liver, this organ being much enlarged, soft, pulpy, and engorged with blood. There were also upon its surface a number of blood spots or small hæmorrhage. Such post-mortem symptoms are indicative of irritant substances introduced into the digestive system with the food, and unassociated with contagion. Generally where several deaths occur the source is to be found from one common cause, viz., the food. I have occasionally noticed this similar condition at the commencement of colour feeding, but whether this bears any relation to the disease it is difficult to determine. I would suggest the occasional use of a little glauber salts dissolved in the drinking water.

F. S. Berg.—The Canary you sent me for examination I found to be in an ill-nourished condition, intestines practically empty, resulting, I conclude, from its illness. It was similarly very anæmic, lungs very pale, and the body contained very little blood. If you are not already doing so I should supplement their diet by allowing a little egg food, and to give them night and morning in their drinking water a few crystals of citrate of iron and quinine as a blood tonic. The organs were healthy in other respects, the anæmia being in my opinion the cause of loss.

The committee hope as many members as possible will attend. Will they also please note that this meeting will be practically the last opportunity of proposing any new members before show, as the association has passed a resolution that no new member be admitted within one month of date of forthcoming show? Nor shall any member be eligible to compete unless subscriptions are paid at least one month before date of forthcoming show. Fanciers residing within 12 miles radius wishing to join please communicate with me.—F. W. Capell, Hon. Sec., 121, Brighton-road, South Croydon.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Committee meeting held September 14, Mr. A. Wasey in chair. Resolved, to postpone lecture by Mr. T. H. Harrison on September 28, owing to the East Ham Show being held on that date, and to have same on October 12, to commence 9 o'clock, fanciers and friends cordially invited; to be held Workmen's Hall, Romford Road, E. Schedule for Y.S. Show was drawn up. Judges for both shows elected as follows: Y.S., Oct. 25, Messrs. J. S. Chatterton and J. Waters; Annual, Jan. 10, Messrs. T. B. Mason, W. W. Broomhead, J. HANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Albion Hotel, September 16th, when there was a good attendance of members. The classification for open show, October 19th: Eight classes were put on for Norwich, eight for Yorks, and three for Clunamons, which we hope will be better patronised than in previous years. Also decided, to add two Lizard classes (one Gold and one Silver). Another selling class to the open section. Ten classes were provided for Mules and British birds; also four for foreign birds, making an addition of two classes on last year's. The open novice section: Six classes were provided for Norwich and six for Yorks. We are also putting on two selling classes (one for Nor. and one for Yorks, price not to exceed 12s. 6d., bird and cage). Members' classes stand as last year. We hope fanciers will rally round. Messrs. Mundell and Trengove are the judges.—G. Lawton, Gen. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held Sept. 6th, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in chair. There was a good attendance. Correspondence was read from the secretary of Whitehaven C.B.S., arising out of which the following resolution was passed: "That owing to Whitehaven not being able to return birds on the Saturday, we adhere to minute passed at previous meeting, that we do not grant patronage at above show." A discussion then arose as to which show was to have our one remaining patronage. It was decided to grant same to Sunderland show, our club to guarantee two of the champion classes. Mr. Crawhall kindly proposed to pay half loss, if any, in the two novice classes. We hope to have our year book of rules, etc., ready in a week or two; will fanciers and others desirous of having an advert. printed in same kindly let me know as early as possible? Mr. J. T. Carrick (Jarrow) was elected a member. Next meeting fixed for Sept. 27th, when the secretary will give a travelling case making demonstration.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Well attended meeting held Old Boar's head, Manchester, Sept. 16th, Mr. J. Garner in chair. A mass of correspondence was gone through, relating to patronage, etc. After a lengthy discussion it was decided that we give the patronage to the following extra shows, viz., Rochdale O.S., Sheffield O.S., which, with another show to be agreed upon with the Northern Lizard Club, to have our first annual competition with them, will complete our season's patronage shows, as follows:—Rochdale O.S., Oct. 21st and 22nd; Manchester, Oct. 28 and 29; Sheffield, Nov. 3 and 4; Nottingham, Nov. 11 and 13; L.C.B.A., Nov. 24, 25 and 27. It is also proposed to have two shows confined to members of L. and L.F.A., at Hyde and Shaw, dates to be decided later. A proposal to alter standards, etc., of the Lancashire and Lizard, was lost, owing to rule, calling upon any alteration as to rules, etc., only being made at general meeting. Secretary requested to inform members that subs. are now overdue, and that all subs. must be sent to arrive Sept. 23rd, to make members eligible to compete for club specials at opening show at Rochdale. There seemed to be a general cry of losing promising youngsters, but it is to be hoped when the shows come round again, the classes will be well filled. We have fanciers of the right sort, both in the open and novice sections, and are looking forward to a good season. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman concluded meeting.—J. Rukin, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Committee meeting held Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Glasgow, September 9, Mr. Noble (president) occupying chair. Previous to commencing business, the Chairman very feelingly commented on the great loss the club had sustained by the accidental death of Mr. J. Sanderson (Port-Glasgow), an office bearer, who was a keen Crest fancier, and who always took an active interest in the affairs of club. Secretary was asked to forward to the family a note of condolence, expressing the sincere sympathy of the members. Mr. Sanderson was a good husband, a kind father, and a friend. Correspondence was read, in which several members expressed their regret at being unable to attend. Additional applications for club patronage were duly considered, and the following associations have been successful, viz.: Lochgelly, Kelty, Kilmarnock, Dundee, Dunbar, Dunfermline, Scottish National, and Kilsyth (conditional). Secretary was instructed to proceed with arrangements for club show at Kilmarnock, Nov. 18 next, in conjunction with that association's open show. The question of club drinker tin came up again for discussion, but as no definite finding could be arrived at, it was ultimately agreed to leave the matter open for this show season. The President kindly offered a prize at club show for best drinker tin most suitable for a Crest show cage (open to all exhibitors or otherwise), when a small committee will be appointed to adjudicate and report. Following gentlemen admitted to membership:—W. J. Summerhill (Glasgow), and A. J. Howie (Dunfermline). I would like to draw the attention of those having fees still unpaid to the fact that, owing to near approach of show season, we will require to close our list; therefore, I would esteem a great favour if they would kindly remit at once.—John Young, Sec. and Treas.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Meeting held Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, Sept. 5, the chairman, Mr. T. Down, presiding. A fair number of members were present, but not so large as we anticipated. We considered details in connection with the All-England Show in the Cutlers' Hall, November 3 and 4. Unanimously decided, to invite the president, the Right Hon. Earl Fitzwilliam to open the exhibition. Secretary announced we had been successful in obtaining the patronage of the following clubs: Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., National British B. and M.C., Yorks. Marked Y.C.C., National British B. and M.C., Yorks. County B.B. and M.C., and Foreign Bird Club. The Crested C.C. we have not yet heard from definitely, but are hoping to receive a favourable reply in the course of a few days. We trust the members of the above-mentioned clubs will rally round us and give us a bumping entry, as we are giving good prize money and a fine lot of valuable specials. Prize money was fixed as follows: Canaries, Hybrids, and British bird classes, 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, and 2/-; the foreign bird section we are doing more for as a special inducement for their owners, viz., 12/-, 8/-, 4/-, and 2/-, all for a 1/6 entry fee. Classes for the various sections were decided upon as follows: Yorks., 9; Cinnamon Marked Yorks., 6; Nor., 7; Crests (left over pending reply from Crested C C; which, if we are favoured with their support, 8 classes); British, 12 (including Albino class); Hybrids, 4; Foreign, 6; Selling, 3; Gifts, 1 and 1 Extra Stock. The special prizes promised at the meeting totalled £7 in cash, together with several other specials. This is not a bad start. A discussion was opened as to judge for members' show in December. Several names were submitted, three being decided upon for the secretary to write to. We again had the pleasure of adding several new names to our list of members. Don't forget next meeting, Oct. 3; this commences at 7 o'clock, not 8. Subject, "Washing Exhibition," by Mr. J. Bailey (Bradford).—J. A. T. Woodall.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Committee meeting, held Portland Arms, Sept. 16, when the passing of the open show schedule was the principal item. Mr. R. Cooper in chair. We have made a good classification for all sections, with 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d. as prize money. Schedule consists of 9 Nor., 6 Yorks., 2 Crests, 1 A.O.V. Can., 1 Selling, 2 Mules and Hybrids, 6 Brit., and 9 Members' classes. Mr. J. H. Roe is judge. We also have a good number of specials, and more to come. Members' challenge cup is put up for most points gained throughout show; gold centre silver medal is for runner-up, 2s. 6d. cash for fastest loser. Schedules are in printer's hands and will be out shortly. Will members please note their subscriptions must be paid up by September 30th to enable them to show as members. A general meeting is called for Sept 30th, so please try and attend; all welcome.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

HALTWHISTLE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held September 11th, Mr. W. Pape in chair. Date of annual show fixed provisionally for November 10th. It was thought that Friday is a more suitable day than Saturday, as all birds can be sent off on the Saturday morning to reach destination better than is sometimes possible with Saturday shows. We are endeavouring to get the patronage of one or two of the Northern clubs; also we are making an open membership this year. The subs. is 2s. 6d., and we are hoping quite a lot of North Country fanciers will join, seeing we are provided with such a splendid train service from both east and west. Application for membership to be made to the secretaries at Westgate, Haltwhistle. Four judges were nominated, and the selection will be made at next meeting, when the schedule will be drawn up. We have engaged the spacious Mechanics' Hall, it being an admirable place for the occasion, and we are looking forward to quite a great show at Haltwhistle this year.—Nicholson and Tallantyre, Hon. Secs.

The Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C.

Sir,—Would you please allow us to call the attention of Yorkshire fanciers in the Midlands to the above Club? We are in a good financial position. We have a silver challenge cup for competition in the champion section and a cup value two guineas to be won outright in the novice section, with silver medals for runners-up in each section. All members joining before the date of first show on October 18 will be able to compete. Now, Yorkshire fanciers, send your names and addresses at once and help to make the Club one of the strongest specialist clubs in the kingdom. The annual subscription is 2s. 6d. and 1s. nomination fee.

Where are the Yorkshires at City of Glasgow Show?

Sir,—If my friend Mr. Hendrie had been very closely in touch with the Fancy he would have known of the classes provided for Yorkshires at our forthcoming show. There will be four classes, which are the same as last year, and an increase of one from the year previous. Even at this date there may be two more classes if the generous offer of a Yorkshire fancier is successfully arranged. It is all very well for Kelty and the Glasgow and District to give so many classes when they only pay restricted prize-money. Glasgow pays full prize-money in all classes, and fanciers should bear in mind that this involves a great financial loss over all the classes. Fanciers can rest assured that an efficient judge will be appointed.

The Green Canary Association.

Sir,—Referring to the article in last week's issue, signed "No Dollar," doubtless he is one of the defaulters. If not, then my notice in the previous issue of Cage Birds should not have interested him. I reiterate, the Society was formed to be run on business lines. The rule re subscriptions does not debar my accepting same after the date mentioned. There are such things as overdue accounts connected with the most up-to-date business concerns. It is such as "No Dollar" who is the cause of the Society not being able to carry out its object, and any member whose name appeared on last year's balance-sheet, and did not intend continuing his membership, should have tendered his resignation months ago; otherwise he has an obligation to fulfil—common courtesy calls for that. Probably there are a few who come under this heading, and who have had the Society's money expended on them since the end of March; hence the remark "philanthropic institution" is quite relevant and not "sarcasm." I have no desire to enter into a controversy, the only endeavour being to fulfil the duties connected with my office, which is that of hon. secretary, and not "secretary." Surely it is not asking too much when I request the favour of a postcard? I am sure "No Dollar" will never be missed. Let him disclose his identity, when I shall be delighted to expound my views in person.

A Handsworth Fancier's Splendid Outdoor Aviaries.

Sir,—Started in the end of December and finished in the end of August, I now have my new range of seven outdoor aviaries finished with the exception of a little paint and a few odd details. These are without doubt one of the finest ranges of outdoor aviaries in the Midlands. They are situated under the shade of an old apple tree, at the bottom of a very pleasant garden 155ft. long. My bird-room (where all new arrivals are caged up before being turned out) comes first. This is made of matchboard, and, being covered all over with tarpaulin, back, front, top, and ends, is nice and warm and quite draught proof. In the back of this room is a doorway leading into the corridor (about 30ft. long and 3ft. wide), which runs the full length of the aviaries. The corridor is lighted with a skylight which runs the whole length. This skylight answers a double purpose, viz., lighting the corridor and also the sleeping compartments of the aviaries, all of which open into the corridor. Six of the aviaries have flights about 8ft. long, half of which is a board and felted span roof; the front half is a little lower, with open half-inch mesh wire netting with a flat top. The sleeping compartments are about 1½ft. higher, and well lighted. I have no difficulty in getting the birds to sleep in the proper places in these aviaries, although in the seventh aviary (which runs across the bottom of the garden and is much larger) the sleeping compartment is never used except by an odd bird or so. This sleeping compartment and the flight are the same height, and birds seem to like to fly up to go to bed; but as the weather gets cooler I fancy they will go in rather than sleep out in the cold. If at any time any reader of Cage Birds is in Birmingham, I should be very pleased to have the honour of being visited. I make all the nest boxes and wire all husks, I may say, to supply the many customers from my advertisement in Cage Birds Annual.

Northampton St. Crispin C.B.S.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Allen, the main question at issue was who wrote the scurrilous report re the St. Crispin Cage Bird Society, and not a free advertisement for the Hand-in-Hand Society. If he knows anything about who wrote the report, let him say so; if not, dry up! The "dog in the manger" sneer can be put aside, as the dog can rest contented and sleep with one eye open, scorning those that are off the chain and prowling about looking for scraps of malice. I say again, Mr. Allen, if you cannot do anybody any good do not do them any harm. You ought to know what that is by now, especially as you designate yourself a true fancier.

The Breeding of Nightingales in Captivity.

Sir,—I was very pleased to read Mr. Mallett's letter on the breeding of Nightingales. Ever since I first bred these birds and wrote the article that won your first prize essay competition I have been trying to persuade different people how readily these birds would nest in confinement, but have made very slow progress, for, as far as my knowledge goes, only Mr. Sills and Mr. Mallett have made the attempt, and I am very pleased they have both been successful. Perhaps it will now begin to dawn upon fanciers that the thing is possible. I have tried to convince a good many, but they would have none of it. Let them give it a fair trial; they will soon see for themselves.

J. Jeffrey.

A Word to Show Secretaries.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper on behalf of a few of us novices? Now the show season is at hand I hope secretaries will put in their show advertisements the county in which the shows are to be held. I am sure they would get more support from us if we only knew where some of the shows were situated, as some are held in places of which we seldom hear. Another item I should like to point out is, when paying prize-money, let us have postal orders instead of cheques for small amounts. For instance, last season I got a third prize in a class of under eight entries, and therefore received a cheque for the large sum of 1s. 3d., and I think I wore a pair of boots out trying to change it, as I am not lucky enough to possess a banking account. I hope this may meet the eye of some of the secretaries.

One of the Novices.

The Foreign Bird Fancy in and Around Cork (Ireland).

Sir,—What is the cause of the scarcity of the small foreign birds in the South of Ireland? Although in an hour's walk through the suburbs of Cork you may see hundreds of Linnets, Goldfinches, and Canaries hung outside houses, I do not remember having seen a foreign bird of any description. I am sure that if the fanciers of Cork were only brought into contact with a few of the small Waxbills (which to my mind are the most charming of pets) they would soon take up this most interesting branch of bird-keeping. Although they are not very great singers, a large amount of enjoyment may be had by watching the amusing and engaging habits of these charming atoms of bird life. They are much easier to cater for than the Linnet or Goldfinch, and the price is well within reach of the working man. If any fancier thinks of taking up this branch of the Fancy, I shall be pleased to give him any information likely to assist him in this pleasure-giving hobby.

Another Faddist on the War Path.

Sir,—I see by a letter in the "Yorkshire Telegraph and Star" that we have one of the faddists in our midst. He has written asking for the help of the public to stop bird-catching, and has told them what to do. I think he would be better employed in writing to Earl Fitzwilliam about his gamekeepers shooting every Magpie, Jay, and other birds that they see. I would also like to know what all the Pheasants are bred for every year at Wentworth. The writer of the letter, who signs himself "Sheffielder," might better enquire into these matters, rather than try to instruct the police in their business. I think it is a generally accepted fact that bird-keepers as a body love their pets, and do their utmost to keep them in good health and feather. As for the remark about landowners, I can prove that there are farmers in this district who would welcome a few catchers to reduce the number of birds in their fields, but dare not do so, and these farmers would welcome a repeal of the bird laws for a couple of years.

Canaries at Batheaston Show.

Sir,—I fully intended not to write any further respecting the above, but I feel I must answer Mr. Tayler's letter, seeing he is so greatly upset with regard to my last. Now, Mr. Tayler, I wish to inform you and the readers that I am not a "disappointed exhibitor," as I and several others who know you personally allow for your inexperienced judgment. Mr. Tayler states that he was in the tent before me and Mr. Folwell. Allow me to contradict you, Mr. Tayler. When I arrived at the show there were only two Canaries there. Then came Mr. Folwell and Mr. Tayler behind him. You try and make the readers believe that you have handled nearly all the champion birds. A few might believe this, but thousands would not. You write as if you had judged at the Crystal Palace and all the leading shows. Re my birds dying in 1906, this is perfectly correct, which I have good reasons to remember. I hope Mr. Tayler will never have such a blow; otherwise he will be in a position to sympathise with other fanciers. If he had had the loss I had he would have a face as long as a fiddle, not a wet week. I do not think he will have such a loss, as he doesn't keep birds; he is only a looker-on—one of those who try and find fault. Allow me to inform him that I had about 150 Canaries in my rooms, every bird my sole property, including several open winners, which had won for me. Now, Mr. Tayler, I invited one of your neighbours (Mr. B. Clark, whom you know well) up into my bird room about three weeks before Bath Show, 1906, and he can witness that he saw quite 100 Canaries, including all the ten birds I exhibited. He (Mr. Clark) remarked: "I suppose you have a hundred here?" I replied, "Quite," and I showed him two large cages of young Norwich Canaries, about forty in number, and he said: "They are a grand lot," and added: "You will be sure to run Mr. Tayler very close at the show." I had heard that Mr. Tayler had the best Norwich in Bath some six or eight weeks before the show. I was sorry, Mr. Tayler, you were not able to take your gold medal to the engraver again and have your name put upon the front, as you intended. Never count your chicks before they are hatched. It is correct that I was compelled to resign through asking for the balance of my prize-money (which I afterwards received). Had my birds been awarded all v.h.c. cards, I should never have been compelled to resign. Through my being compelled to resign several other members resigned. I have been asked several times to rejoin, but I have replied "No." Mr. Tayler, if you are a fancier or sportsman, act as one. The gentleman to whom you refer as my "tout" is a gentleman, not a "tout." I have known him over twenty years as a good breeder, exhibitor, and an honest judge. I do not think Mr. Tayler would care to call him a "tout" to his face. I hope my remarks will satisfy Mr. Tayler and your readers.

G. E. Lanham.

[We think this correspondence may very well close with Mr. Tayler's reply (if he chooses to briefly make one), as much purely personal matter, quite foreign to "Canaries at Batheaston Show," has been introduced. We have had to condense the above letter.—Editor.]

Questions for Bird-catchers.

Sir,—I see in Cage Birds of September 16 that "Bait Box" wants to know various points concerning the using of the valuable spring net trap. He asks me for several hints, and I think if I tell him the proper routine of catching with these nets it will be useful to a good many more as well. The first thing is concerning the net itself. Some fanciers think that the larger the net the better, but that is absolutely wrong. As long as your net is large enough to hold a bird as big as a Thrush it will do. Do not get your nets with a wood base, because the birds fight shy of these. Before taking out your nets, have a walk or a cycle ride in the country to find whereabouts the birds are to be found. If you require Goldfinches, look out for a patch of rough land with plenty of thistle seed about, and keep your eyes open for an hour or two; or find a brook or a dyke where plenty of teazle seed is growing, as these are the Goldie's favourite haunts. As for Linnets, etc., hundreds of these can be found in stubble and clover fields at the present time. When you have satisfied yourself that you have found a secluded spot, take out your nets. If after Goldfinches and you have for your destination a dyke or brook, look out for a willow tree, as these are their favourite perches. Set your nets about a dozen yards away from it. As regards setting your nets, clear the ground a little, but not too much, as Goldfinches are very shy. Then put your nets in a circle with a good call bird in the centre. See that your nets are three feet apart from each other. For baiting, select a large ripe head of teazle seed or thistle; but before baiting your net with it, break the head open so that the birds can see the seeds. If you are after Linnets, etc., set your nets (in a stubble field where you know there are plenty of birds) about twelve yards from a hedge, and arrange them the same as advised in the case of Goldfinches. You will find that, these nets being self-acting, you can take a walk round the field and work the birds round to your nets. The bait you will require will be charlock seed and a good sprinkling of chaff around your nets. For catching Bullfinches, these nets make your work as easy as catching flies on a flypaper. What you require is a good trained call-bird, one that will call while you hold call-cage in your hand. The most likely place to find Bullfinches is around a wood or orchard. Take a walk round and your call-bird in your hand a-calling as you go along, and if there are any Bullfinches about you will soon hear them. As soon as you hear any, set your nets at once with your call-bird, and then go for a walk; then, by the time you come back, you can rely upon having a Bullie in your net. The best bait for Bullfinches is almost any kind of berries. For catching Blackbirds and Thrushes, your net requires a piece of cork on the bait tin; pin live worms, etc., on to this. The best place for catching softbills is among strawberry plants and fruit bushes. These spring net traps also come in useful for catching Nightingales and other small softbills, but as their season is now over, we will leave them for another time. Wishing "Bait Box" a little better luck.

Spring Net Trap.

The War Against Red-mites.

Sir,—As the breeding season is now over, we usually make a careful inspection of our cages, on the look-out for our enemies, the red mites. I have heard it said from old fanciers: "No mites, no young birds." Whether this is the case or not I cannot say. But one thing I can say is that if this has been a good season for young birds it has equally been a good season for mites, as mostly every one has the same complaint. The hot summer might have something to do with it. I have tried many things for keeping them away, but still they come. Now, this season I tried a substance used by joiners to prevent decay in wood, especially wood that has to go below the ground—"crozott," I think, is its name. I put some on the end of all my spars, and I can assure you I have never seen any mites this season. When the "crozott" is applied it has a strong smell, but this soon dies away. It is very cheap. I think it is worth a trial.

Jno. Kilpatrick.

[Probably Mr. Kilpatrick means creosote, which we have used ourselves, and have known used by several bird-keeping friends, as a preventive of red mite. It is most excellent for this purpose, apart from its powerful smell and the necessity for keeping the birds from contact with it.—Editor.]

Breeding Canaries from a One-winged Bird.

Sir,—Referring to "Midlothian's" query in last week's Cage Birds, I also have bred a Canary this season with only one wing. It was one of a nest of four Lizards, and appeared the largest and strongest of the lot; and it was only when the other three left the nest and took to the perches that I noticed this one remaining on the edge of the nest for some days. Not understanding why it should be so inactive, I took it from the cage, and found it had one wing only, not a trace of the other, the body being quite smooth and round. At first I thought I would rear it, and keep it as a freak, but as it was so seriously handicapped, and would never be ably to fly to a perch, or hold its own with my other birds, I took what I think was the most humane course, and destroyed it.

Westgate.

Sir,—In answer to "Midlothian's" letter re Border Fancy hen with only one wing, we beg to inform him that we also have a hen of the same breed that was born with only one wing and unless our memory is at fault there have been at least two letters in Cage Birds this year from breeders of Canaries which had one wing missing. The hen we have, which is a clear buff, was hatched in 1909, and was one of a nest of three, the other two being perfect birds. For the first week or so after it came out of the nest it found a difficulty in getting on to the perch, but soon became used to its affliction, and was shortly able to reach the lower perch; now, by climbing up the wires it is able to get to the top of a large flight. Of course, it often has a fall, but never seems to hurt itself, and is now as strong and healthy as any other bird. We showed the hen to other fanciers, and asked them what we should do with it; they all told us to sell it or else kill it, and under no circumstances were we to attempt to breed from it. However, we couldn't sell it, and we didn't like to kill it; so we determined to breed with it as an experiment. We paired her up to a young cock, and everything went on all right. We put in a nest pan just off the ground so that she could easily reach it, and awaited results. From the first nest of three eggs one young hatched out, the other two eggs proving clear. From the second nest we had four young hatched out of four eggs, all of which the hen brought up, doing all the feeding herself. This year we tried her again. She has had three nests, and has hatched nine young out of eleven eggs, again bringing them all up by herself. All these fourteen youngsters of hers have been perfect birds, and only one died, we having lost one this month from inflammation, which we are sorry to say has carried off a good many of our young birds this year. It would be interesting to know if any other breeder has bred from a one-winged bird without any bad results, as we were warned that the young, if we got any, would be minus a limb, or otherwise of no use, instead of which one of this year's young took second prize at our local first feather show. We should think these one-winged birds are too common to be of any value as freaks.

Pure White Crest-bred Canary Bred by a Reader.

Sir,—It may interest some of your readers to know that I have bred this year from a splashed Crest hen and a splashed Crest-bred cock a pure white Crest-bred cock, also a splashed white Crested cock, which unfortunately died when about six weeks old. The pure white is now a fine large bird, and could be seen by any fancier.

The "Champion" Singing Linnet

Sir,—In reference to the Linnet singing challenge matter, my bird has gone into moult, so I shall not be able to sing my bird until the coming season, when I hope we shall be able to arrange a sing.

HARRY BROWN.

Sir,—I have received a letter from Mr. Brown, of Leigh, informing me that his bird has gone into moult; therefore he cannot go on with his challenge, which I accepted. I beg to thank Mr. Brown for his kind letter, and hope to visit his club in the near future. My bird was quite ready for the battle. I cannot take any more notice of any further challenges. I have replied to all that have been thrown at me. Allow me, too, to thank those who have written me letters wishing me success.

FRED ALLEN.

A New Cage Bird Society for Annfield, Everton & District.

Sir,—I see by your issue dated September 16 that Mr. R. B. Wright is appealing to fanciers to form a new society under the above name. At present the Fancy is well catered for in Liverpool and district, and any fancier who is not a member of a society would do well first of all to become a member of any of the following societies:—Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association (subscription, 2s. 6d. per annum; sec., F. Eccleston, 42, Cotswold Street); Green Canary Association (subscription 5s. per annum; sec., G. Green, 36, Lord Nelson Street); Liverpool Open Society (subscription 10s. 6d.; secs., Metcalf and Hillmen, 68, Brunswick Road), whose headquarters are in the city of Liverpool. The district societies are Bootle, Garston, Wallasey, Birkenhead, and Prescot. At any of the above-named societies a fancier would receive material benefit from the lectures, debates, washing exhibitions, and advice from old fanciers, who have brought the Fancy in Liverpool and district to the high standard of the present day. Novices would do well to read the essays by fanciers, read at the Liverpool B.B.A., and kindly published in your issue of September 9. Personally, I should not have thought so much of an appeal for a new society if it had been brought forward by a fancier more known than Mr. Wright. Now, Mr. Wright, kindly let us know where you showed a bird before Bootle Nest Feather this year? Also, is it correct that Mr. R. Algie suplied you with these birds? Let us, too, know the name of this well-known fancier who is willing to take the secretaryship.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 540.
To Baffle Mice.

Sent by Mr. N. Bailey, 14, West Street, Hucknall.

I send you a simple idea for keeping mice from birds' food in aviaries and also from birds while sleeping, as it makes an ideal perch. To make, get a piece of round wood as shown at A, and fix in the floor. Next, get another piece, and nail across the top, as shown at B. At the ends of B fix small flat boards to stand food vessels on. To complete, get some pieces of cage wire about an inch long; point them and fix them pointing downwards on the centre stem as shown at C, so as to thwart the mice. Fix the wires close all round, and this will stop the pests from climbing.—N. Bailey.

No. 541.
A Useful Cramp.

Sent by Mr. S. T. Perrin, 26, Garfield Street, Kettering.

The following little device will be found useful as a cramp for joining cage backs, etc. It is made as follows: Get a piece of wood a little longer than the width of the boards to be jointed. Nail on each end another short piece as per illustration, letting these work loosely. Put across boards as usual, and by knocking A towards B as illustrated it answers well for cramping joints.—S. T. Perrin.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Knowing Sparrow.

In the Market Place we have a Sparrow which is called "Joey." He sits on the roofs of the houses opposite, and when called, will come and feed from the hands of the man who keeps a stall on the market. The bird is quite tame, but if anybody comes near he will fly away again as soon as he has taken the food.—Sent by Reginald Ditcham (aged nine years), 66, Rupert Street, Norwich.

*Rescuing a Young Bird.

On going to school one afternoon I was attracted by a series of sharp squeaks and chirps coming from an iron pipe near a wall. I looked behind it, and saw a young Sparrow wedged in and evidently in pain. The youngster allowed me to take it home and place it in a cage. I then gave it some food and hid myself to see if it would touch it. A sharp twittering surprised me, and on looking up I saw three Sparrows sitting on the roof. The young one answered them, and presently one flew down and fed the youngster through the mesh.—Sent by L. Davey (aged 12), 1, Henry Street, Plymouth.

Perched on the Nose.

I am very fond of birds. One day a boy brought two funny young birds in his pocket. He got them out of a hole in a tree. So Dad said he would try and keep them alive. I had to go and find some live ants' eggs to feed them with. He used to take the birds up to bed with him to feed early in the morning. But he forgot to wake early one morning, and one of them got out of the basket and perched right on his nose and made a loud squeaking noise, calling for food, which woke Dad in a fright. They were the prettiest birds he ever had. They were Lesser Spotted Woodpeckers.—Sam Dauncey (aged 10), Bridge Street, Nailsworth, Glos.

The Shows.

DURHAM.

Show of Norwich Plainheads held "Travellers' Rest," Gilesgate Moor, Durham, on Sept. 16th. Entries came up well considering it was so early on in the season, and some very good birds were staged. Mr. Geo. Reed (Brandon) had the secretarial duties in hand, and the judge was Mr. W. Rutherford (Crook), who seemed to give every satisfaction. There were 20 entries.

NOR. A.V.: 1, 4, Wilson, leader cl. yell., grand size, extra good head and chest, fine wing and tail carriage, easy win; 4th, cl. buff, good size; 2, Gowland, Crosby cl. buff, extra fine head and chest; 3, Stanger, cl. yell., grand col.

MOFFAT & UPPER ANNANDALE.

Annual show, held at Moffat, September 15th, when there was a remarkably good entry in the various classes, and the collection of cage birds was the finest ever seen at this show. There was a considerable increase in the number of entries, which came up to something like 30 over last year's. Border Fancies led the way, and a really fine lot they were, the class comprising many outstanding birds that will hold their own in much more pretentious exhibitions. Mr. J. Clark (Moffat), with a buff hen, was awarded the B.F.C.C. medal. Mules constituted a good class, and here Mr. J. C. Crosbie (Dumfries) swept all before him with his noted trio. British birds made another good class, pride of place being secured by Mr. A. Smith (Biggar) with a very fine Hawfinch. Mr. J. Thomson (Wigton) adjudicated on the exhibits, and his decisions gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

GLASGOW (Confined Derby).

Annual Show held in Grand National Halls, Gorbals, Glasgow, September 16. In years gone by this event was looked forward to with the greatest of interest, and it was considered an achievement to win the gold medal. Undoubtedly the interest has abated, but there were unmistakable signs of a profound regard for the Derby on this occasion. We have seen better filled shelves, and larger birds, but we doubt if there was superior style. The cup winner bred by Mr. Montgomery, the famous Scotch Fancy breeder, of Corkerhill, is a bird full of merit. Some thought that her sister, a clear buff hen, was the better of the two, when judged for the premier position. We are told that the yellow hen won with ease. They are different types, and no one would have said anything had the buff won. She has more arch on the wing, and takes a commanding position on the perch. The entries totalled 77, and the exhibits were neatly arranged around the hall. The putting up of the shelves was in the hands of Mr. A. Orr, who is an expert in that work. Mr. Bullions, the secretary, deserves special mention for the admirable way in which the secretarial duties were handled. Had he only four times the number of birds his powers would have been seen to full advantage. The judges, Messrs. Carlaw (Falkirk) and Caldwell (Baillieston), deserve every credit for the way they placed the awards. The exhibits naturally were in a raw state, but they did their very best, and generally speaking gave satisfaction. The attendance of fanciers and visitors was encouraging. Among them we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Montgomery, the gold medal winner, Messrs. Black, McClure, Morrison, Muir, Banks, Ferguson, Park, Smith, Scott, Fleming, McIlwaine, Lees, Stewart, Renwick, Bullions, Buchanan, and others.

DOLGELLY (Merionethshire).

Annual fixture held September 15th, in glorious weather. We were pleased to see the cage bird section provided with a few more classes, entries in which totalled well for this time of the year. Yorkshires held the pride of place in numbers and quality. Norwich were disappointing; Mules were good, also the British. The attendance was all that could be desired. Mr. R. Roberts held the secretarial reins once more, which were well handled from start to finish without a hitch. Mr. W. Nolan won silver cup (to be won twice) for most successful exhibitor in section, also the two specials in the Yorkshire classes, Mr. H. S. Davies being runner-up. Mr. James Jones also had a grand team of Yorkshires. We hope the committee will consider a few more classes for another year, which no doubt will improve the show and the Faucy in the district. Mr. J. O. Williams made the awards, which were well received.

NOR., YELL., CL., ETC. (3): 1, H. S. Davies, cl. yell., nice type and condition, good feather and col.; 2, R. E. Griffith, saddle mark, nice head and eye; W. Roberts wrong classed, a Yorks. COLWYN BAY.

Welsh Northern Counties show held at Colwyn Bay, September 16th, in very favourable weather for the time of year. The Cage Bird Section had a marquee to themselves, well lighted, with ample room. If the birds had been staged higher it would have been an improvement. Mr. Cragg had everything in order early in the day, and worked well for the success of the show, ably assisted by a good staff of stewards. All the specials were confined to members. There was a good attendance. The two cups were won by Mr. Sheldon (Llandudno), namely, the Griffith Roberts challenge cup for best unflighted Canary (it was won by this gentleman twice before in succession, and now becomes his property), the Garie Roberts challenge cup for best bird in show, to be won twice in succession or three times in all (this win was the first). Entries were fairly good for this time of year. The quality and type of the Norwich were of a high order; also some of the Yorkshires were very good. Border fancies were cancelled. Mules, too, were good. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

"How I became a Fancier."

By Members of the Liverpool B.B.A.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association held on August 10th the following papers were read by Novice Members, viz., Messrs. T. R. Jones, J. Lloyd and J. Saul.

No. 2. Mr. Lloyd's Paper.

I do not know if I have always had a love for Cage Birds, but when a lad I always kept a Linnet or a Canary. I also had a young Cockatoo and tried to rear the same. My first start in going in for breeding Canaries was a sudden fancy on hearing them singing in Tibb Street, Manchester. I bought a common German for singing. This had a narrow escape with its life. A cat got into the house and knocked the cage down, but it did not manage to get the bird. I next bought a bird from the market, but that soon died. Then I bought a pair of Hartz Mountain Rollers, and then two other Canaries and a cage for two shillings and sixpence. From these I reared about twenty young ones. I also saw cage birds in a shop in Park Road, and I started buying, and have continued ever since.

I saw a show advertised at Birkenhead, and that started my going to bird shows. I think I went to all the local shows. I next sold all my common Canaries and bought a pair of Yorkshires and an old hen or two. Then I joined the Liverpool Breeders' Association, and was always on the look-out for anything I could buy. From the pair of Yorkshires I didn't rear a young one. But I got one of the cock paired to another hen, a clear yellow hen, and the next season I paired this young one up to a buff-green cock, and got two young ones off same, one of which won for me my first prize in the Green Canary Association's Nest Feather Show. From another pair of greens I got eleven young ones and not one green; they were all variegated or cinnamon marked. I had been told when buying that they were both bred from Greens; after that I took good care that I did not get "taken in" again. I always wanted to see what they were bred from, and always took particular notice of birds belonging to other people and of what I saw at shows. In this way I gathered more information than from the Fanciers.

Feeding the Youngsters.

In feeding I use plain Spanish seed, and give a little mixed seed once or twice a week. In the matter of the feeding of young I have reared more on arrowroot biscuits and eggs than on any other. In colour feeding I use Spratt's Patent cage-bird food, as this does away with eggs; I never give them eggs when using this. I do not care for showing young ones, as I think it does them harm, for I always have a lot of mine go bad, ultimately losing them.

I am also a lover of British birds, and if I had space I would prefer them to Canaries, especially if I could keep them out of doors, as I think they do better outside. I have no favourites, for I have kept a good many species and care as much for a Greenie as for a Goldfinch or a Bullfinch.

In buying British it is far better to try and get in with a catcher, for even if you have to pay double there is more chance of your getting a good one, as I think they are picked before they go to the dealers. I know this, as a friend of mine wrote for me to a catcher for one or two, and he sent two birds down, saying they were the best he had caught that season, but I lost both in the moulting.

A Try at Hybrid Breeding.

I have had a try at Hybrid breeding. I have had full eggs from a Greenfinch and Bullfinch; young hatched out, but I failed to rear them. I have also had fertile eggs from Goldfinch and Greenfinch. Both pairs nested in cages. I have had some success in mule-breeding. I reared twelve mules one season and four the next from the same Linnet. I had one mule that I thought was going to be a topper, but when colour feeding it I put sawdust in the bottom of the cage, and about two hours afterwards I found it dead; I blame the sawdust, thinking the bird must have picked some of it up. For muling I like to get the Britishers as young as possible, as I think they get used to cages better than old ones.

In feeding Britishers I use mixed seed: no particular sort—only what I buy from the dealer, viz. the ordinary mixed seed. But I give them as much wild seed as I can get. In moulting them I give nothing but wild seed, both in a dry and in a green state; in fact, I hardly ever miss a day in taking home some sort of wild seed. If ever I have a holiday I usually go away to Chester. I take a boat up the river, and go to the other side of Eaton Hall where I usually get as much wild seed as will last me for a considerable time, besides having the pleasure of seeing a number of birds in their wild state and getting a number of hints as to their feeding. I enjoy this holiday far more than going to any seaside place, and have spent hours watching the birds. I have been out from as early as three o'clock in the morning until late in the evening.

Britishers I give a little colour-feed to in moulting, as I think it imparts a little extra colour, especially to the Linnets. I give the birds a bath as often as possible, and, in showing, if they require washing I do so a fortnight before the exhibition, spraying them every morning after. But I find that they do not require much washing, as they keep far cleaner than Canaries. Some birds, I find, require far more attention than others when getting them ready for the shows. You must get to know your birds, and what they require, and work accordingly. I find this is far better than taking other people's advice. I take note of other birds I see, and try and get my own as near to them as possible, for in showing you must have the birds in the best of condition or you might as well keep them at home. In getting mine into condition I give them port wine, glycerine and honey, mixed together, a few drops in the water, and I find that this keeps them in good condition all the winter.

No. 3. Mr. Saul's Paper.

It's an old saying "If you never try you can't expect to succeed," so here goes. My first attempt at Canary breeding dates back to about six or seven years ago. This is how it began. I was taking a stroll one Saturday evening, going nowhere in particular, when my wanderings brought me to a lane adjoining St. John's Market. On arriving there my attention was drawn to a fellow selling Canaries in small wicker cages—"Guaranteed German Roller cocks, and on song, at two bob a time." Now, thought I to myself, here's a bargain, I'll get one. I did, and I took it home, procured a cage, put sand, seed and water in it, then hung the bird up on the wall. I anxiously waited for the time when it would burst forth into glorious song. But alas, to my disappointment, it never did any bursting, and after weeks of warbling (all done by myself with the aid of a bottle and cork, to try and tempt it to chime in) I came to the conclusion that it belonged to the deaf and dumb class, or there was something radically wrong with its vocal organs. Thinking there might be something wrong with my feeding, I spoke to a gentleman about the matter, and he, having had a Canary or two, volunteered to have a look at my bird. The upshot was he told me my "fine cock bird" was a hen.

Breeding Operations Started.

To say I was disappointed wasn't in it, but it was this that started "the fever" in me. I had a hen, why not get a cock bird from some reliable dealer, and start breeding? Well, I did. I bought a Norwich cock, made a cage, and the following April from a few hints picked up here and there I made a start. But from want of knowledge and a bit of trouble through having to remove my stock I only reared two birds out of three nests I got. Still I was not down-hearted, and was determined to go on with my hobby, but a death which occurred at home about this time and scattered us about a bit made me give it up, and it was not until this season that I was able to make another start.

I have had three cocks running with five hens, and am sorry to say it has been another bad season for me; I have only reared five birds out of about thirty I got in the nests. But I mean still to go on and by combining better stock with better knowledge (which latter I am hoping to acquire), and last, but by no means least, by the exercise of that one great virtue which every true fancier must possess, Patience, I am hoping to reach the height of my ambition, that is, of carrying home a first-prize winner, bred by myself.

With these few remarks, and wishing the Society and all its members the best of success in the coming Show season, I will close my paper.

Should Birds be Kept in Cages?

By J. R. COLVILLE
(Ashton-under-Lyne).

[Following is the extract from the "Ashton-under-Lyne Reporter" to which reference is made by Mr. Fulljames in his CAGE BIRD LEAGUE Notes.—EDITOR.]

To all lovers of a cage bird as a household pet, and to the novice and experienced fancier, this may seem a superfluous question. But is it so? Anyone who has been paying attention to passing events in the bird world, and more particularly in regard to cage-bird life, cannot but be convinced that a serious menace to our hobby and against the keeping of birds as pets has arisen. CAGE BIRDS, the recognised organ of the Fancy, has for a considerable time been supplying us with information and facts which show how serious this matter really is to bird lovers generally.

A Pronunciamento.

"It will be a good day for England when the caging of birds is made entirely illegal."

Now, anyone who takes the slightest interest in keeping a bird or birds who will give this quotation their serious consideration must see what it means. Mark the words "caging of birds." If this means anything it means "all birds." Not only British birds, but also the many kinds of foreign birds, including the talking Parrot and the other beautiful and entertaining species. And what about the domesticated Canary, of which there are so many different varieties? There is that "made in Germany" songster of which you are so proud, and which you are never tired of praising for its beautiful song. All these are threatened. In a word, bird life in cages is banned.

The Crusaders.

The question naturally arises, Who or what is at the bottom of all this? For some considerable time a society called the Humanitarian League, assisted by the Wild Birds Protection Society, has been on the warpath against the keeping of birds in captivity. Starting with a crusade against cruelty in the catching, selling, and keeping of British birds, they have gradually extended their aims and ambitions, as the quotation in italics above clearly proves. With their original intention no true true fancier or lover of birds will have any quarrel; in fact, quite the opposite. All the help possible would have been given to them to assist in stamping out cruelty to birds in any shape or form.

If, instead of starting this opposition to all cage-bird life, they had invited the co-operation of the bird fancier through one or other of the various representative societies, such as the National British Bird and Mule Club, to mention only one, they would have received such whole-hearted assistance and have been backed up by all fanciers that it would have been a simple matter to have drawn up some plan to put a stop to all the evils complained of. But, no. Amongst their members must have been many who held extreme views on the subject, and they evidently carried the day.

A Doubtful Verdict.

The first serious hint which fanciers and bird lovers get of the campaign is the prosecution in the London courts of two bird dealers for selling in London Skylarks which had been caught at Cambridge.

The prosecution was undertaken by the R.S.P.C.A., and a decision was given by the magistrate against the bird dealers. CAGE BIRDS, in the interests of the Fancy, started a fund to enable an appeal to be made to a higher court, where again a decision was given against the dealers on a technical point of law, namely, that no freshly-caught birds may be in the possession of anyone living in a protected area, even if these birds were caught in a perfectly legal way in an open area, the Judges expressing the opinion that until a bird had been in captivity for three of four weeks it could be termed "freshly caught." That means that if a Lark or other bird is caught in Cambridge, which is an open area, or in any other open area, it must be kept for three or four weeks before it can be sent to London or any other protected area, either to be offered for sale by any dealer or be kept by anyone as a household pet.

This verdict is much open to question, as it is very doubtful if the framers of the Wild Birds Protection Act ever had such an idea in their mind. During the open season you can catch and kill as many birds as you like, and send them immediately to London or elsewhere to make pies and other dainties for the well-to-do, but you must not send any birds alive until after a given period. Does this sound correct?

The Moulting Process.

During the past week we have had a decided change in the temperature, although the weather conditions are still good and as congenial as one could ever wish for in the month of September. Resident wild birds are deep in the moult, and as the growth of feathers is at all times a slow process, a sudden change to very cold or inclement weather would certainly not be good for them. Unless one gets a close acquaintance with the birds of the fields, one is inclined to think their change of plumage is effected in a much easier manner than in the case of aviary or cage birds; but this is not so. They may possibly get over it a week or two quicker, but they are equally as ragged and disreputable-looking while the moult is in progress. In the majority of cases they have now finished moulting the body, but look very dilapidated about the head and neck. It is interesting to noto how, during a few short weeks, wild birds put off the gay plumage of the breeding season for one less showy, for use during the winter months. This change is particularly noticeable in the case of the common House Sparrow. The wings do not appear to suffer much by the change, but the head, neck, and back are far less bright, the chestnut at the sides of the head being mingled with grey instead of being clear and distinct. But is in on the black gorget that we notice the greatest alteration. This has almost disappeared, but if we handle a specimen we shall see that every feather upon the throat and breast is edged with grey, and if we turn them back with the finger we shall find that the remainder of each feather is quite dark; in a word, the gorget is there, but hidden with a covering of grey. In the early spring, when the desire for mating begins to assert itself, this richer colouring will come to the front, and the cheeky Sparrow will strut in all his finery. The same change of plumage goes on in all wild birds. In contrast to the somewhat worn and faded breeding plumage, the Kingfisher, Pheasant, Starling, Finches, and others look clean and bright in their new clothes, but these, clean as they are, are in fact very subdued in colour when compared with the depth of colour, gloss and general brightness of the early spring and summer months.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects. Harmless to everything.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1911 SEASON.

Loanhead and District C.B.S.

It gives me pleasure to send on our members' breeding results. Taking everything into consideration, I am certain our show on October 14th will be one of the best ever held by the society. IF you want a good Goldfinch for exhibition, you must have one from Wales, as Mr. Marley (the big British exhibitor) says, the best Goldies come from there, the Worcestershire Goldfinches being too racy, and deficient in the depth of blaze required. Now I get all my Goldies from Wales, having many catchers in different parts, so I get a good supply of the right sort from there every week. This week I have eleven large Greypate Goldfinch cocks (some half-moulted), selected from eighteen dozen I got September 7th, the rest going to the dealer. They are all of good size, nicely mooned and huttoned, and richly tanned on breast. Will make winners. Price 2/6 each: G. Rahy, 5, Park-place, Highgate Park, Birmingham.

I have had birds from all over the country, and if I had sent to you first I should have saved pounds. Yours, Thomas Gates." Please note all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester by expert catchers employed solely by myself; none are sent out until thoroughly on hard seed, and a signed guarantee sent with every bird that they are not recently taken and do not come under the various Bird Acts, and an indemnity given by me in every case taking all risks against prosecution arising therefrom. I am only dealer in this country giving this guarantee and indemnity. I make no idle boasts, but am open to prove at any time that I sell more British birds and have a larger stock always on hand than any other two dealers in Midlands, and that I sell more Worcestershire birds than the whole lot put together (professional copyists note). Visitors are requested to call and see hundreds upon hundreds of Britishers all caged separately. Note name and address; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

VALUE, THE UTMOST

MY MOTTO.

The best value—not figured down at impossible prices, and then hens sent for cocks. This is being done daily by charlatans—it matters not whether they call them Norwich, Yorkshires, or Hartz—for they stoop deep into the slough.

NORWICH or YORKSHIRE COCKS.—Specially selected, singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds, i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. Norwich Cocks, 5/-, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 10/6. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each, 3 Hens for 5/-. Pairs, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6. Good Muling Hens (Yorkshire or Norwich type), for Muling, 1/9, 2/6 each. Travelling cages, 3d. extra. For Crests, Scotch Fancies, and other varieties please send for Free Current Price List. Note.—Some real good cocks, fed, and for show, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; hens to match, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6. Cages in all cases 3d. extra. All on approval any part of Great Britain. Easiest of easy payments by joining my bird club. This is genuine and original—where the honest do not have to pay for the bad debts of the dishonest.

Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week-end Linnet contest, held Sept. 23, when nine of the best picked Linnets in Leeds sang. Quality singing only. Judges, Messrs. E. Wood and C. Lorriman. 1, J. Chippendale; 2, T. Chippendale; 3, J. Clark.—E. Wood.

After the contest—being Woodhouse Feast—we spent a jovial evening, when Tubby Wigfield gave us some of his best scrapping, and Mr. Sellars obliged with some of his "whinneying." We made the best of a wet Saturday night. Also Sept. 24th, 32 birds sang; 1, Laycock; 2, C. Ward; 3, Wigfield; 4, Sellars. Judges, Messrs. Madden, J. Green, C. Biss. Contest Saturday, 3.—C. Clayton, Sec.

Club Reports.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT. C.B.S.

Meeting held St. Philip's Schoolrooms, Westmoreland-street, Mr. Ridal in chair. Meeting was for hearing the experiences of members. We had a very interesting night indeed. Will members kindly note our next meeting night, October 12th, is for the arrangements for annual show, etc.? Will members who have not brought ticket money in for N.F. Show kindly do so?—J. Scott, Sec.

SHEPSHED AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held Pied Bull Inn, September 18, when Mr. W. Watson gave a lecture on the Norwich Canary. Mr. Watson first remarked on the type of Norwich when he first started—the time when colour counted forty points—and on the great difference in the bird generally. He then read over the standard scale of points; he touched on all points, explaining the faulty and the correct, with the aid of a few birds he had brought with him; and what he had not got he soon described by aid of a piece of chalk and a slate. Questions were asked by Messrs. Neale, West, and Moore, which were ably answered.—A. Edwards, Hon. Sec.

ADMIRAL DUNCAN O.S. (Nottm.).

Schedule for 32nd annual goose fair show, October 7, has been passed. We have a total of 31 classes—8 Nor., 10 Crest and C.B., 6 British, 1 Mule or Hyb., and 4 Sell. We have added two Yorkshire classes, 1 yell and 1 buff, by way of experiment, Mr. R. Holmes and Mr. J. Goode guaranteeing both. We have again been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. W. Vardy to judge. Many good special prizes have been promised. Our worthy host is giving an additional £1 to special prize fund; this brings his contribution to the substantial sum of £5. This is our opening and best show of the season, and we are hoping for a "bumper." We are still open to make more members.—J. Cowpertwait, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held, Arcade Temperance Hotel, September 20th; Mr. J. Simpson presiding over a large turnout. Four new members joined and we had a splendid meeting. Secretary reported Mr. J. Leitch had intimated he intended giving a more valuable challenge cup; agreed, that it be given for best bird. The challenge cup presented by Mr. G. Penman will be for most points over whole show. A trophy will be given by Mr. G. Penman Junr., for most points by a member. Two gold medals have been given by a friend, one for best Canary and one for best member British. The placing of specials on respective classes was considered, but was not finished; so a special meeting will be held at same place Oct. 4th, when there will possibly be another silver cup, with more specials to place.—J. R. Reid, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Special meeting held Sept. 21st; chairman, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson. The £25 Robert's challenge cup patronage was received from the Crested C.C., and and also the Northern Lizard Club patronage. Messrs. Steel and Wood, of Blaydon, are to provide refreshments at the show, and those who attended the picnic, will appreciate the value of this. Two members kindly volunteered specials by letter. Mr. Bax (Long Benton Vicarage) was elected a member. Classes for judges to take were selected and an extra Stock class added on same lines as Crystal Palace Show. Specials are very slow in coming in but we expect all members are busy collecting, and hope Mole will still lead the way in this respect. Next meeting time enough to help your own section. We have added a lot of classes and they need supporting. Schedules will be in the hands of fanciers quickly.—J. G. Atkinson, Sec.

WALLSEND C.B.A.

Meeting held September 18th, when a large number of members turned up to hear Mr. Slack's reminiscences, which proved very interesting, and were received with pleasure and applause. Many questions were asked and answered. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Slack. In the absence of our chairman, Mr. McPartling was asked to preside. Mr. T. Robson, another of our ever-welcome friends, spoke very encouragingly. A very lengthened and heated discussion of the class prize money was indulged in, bringing most of the members to their feet, quite a flood of new oratory being displayed. A gold and silver medal, won by Mr. McQuallen for most points at our British Show, was presented by Mr. McPartling, who did so in a pleasing congratulatory manner. Mr. Quallen thanked him for his encouraging remarks, stating that he had done well, and trusted to do still better this season. Show admission tickets were allotted, and it is expected there will be a big sale as a lot of birds are promised for the draw. Schedules are now ready for members. We have conversed with leading fanciers of other societies regarding the holding of our great annual show, as many of the smaller societies find it hard to make open shows pay; say, Newcastle and Sunderland alternately. The first week of the year might prove a great success. Vote of thanks to Mr. McPartling ended a most enjoyable meeting.—Macdouald and Evens, Secs.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath, September 13th, Mr. Wilmott in chair. Mr. Swinden was elected a member, making a total of members 39. The Chairman said it had been suggested that the show be open to fanciers residing in Birmingham and covering the Greater Birmingham Scheme. It was a good idea, but others though it should be solely for members this year with the hopes of good open show another season. Secretary had handed him a rough idea of the probable cost; and for the society to see a small profit it would mean at least 120 birds from members alone, and at least 80 from non-members. After keen debate it was resolved that the show be for members only, same to be held December 26th, open at 2 p.m., all birds to be staged by 10 a.m., otherwise too late for competition. Thirty-six classes agreed upon. A special feature will be a market stall for the sale of any variety (not to be judged); entry fee per bird 2d., to cover cost of attendant. Members have here a splendid chance of clearing out surplus stock. Please note, we have very little time left to arrange further business. Rules were passed, and the question of judge was left with secretary, he to approach Mr. Roe with a view to his taking the whole show. (I have just received a letter from Mr. Roe, who is quite willing to judge.) The treasurer has gone out of his way to grant us the room, so it is for all members to make the show a good and attractive one. At the October meeting the washing exhibition will take place, to be followed by a members' competition, so roll up with your birds, and bring a friend or two.—J. Sheppard, Secretary.

Will intending exhibitors please note that a mistake has occurred in show schedule, writes Mr. W. Whiteford, sec. of the Lochgelly C.B.S.? Classes 25 and 26 should read "Confined to members of Yorkshire Canary Club"; and the gold medal for best bird confined to radius of four miles should read: "Gold medal for best Yorkshire in the show, open."

SENSATIONAL OFFER TO ADVERTISERS!

SEE BACK PAGE.

The committee of the Brighton C.B.A. are offering increased prize money, viz., 10s., 6s., and 4s., with an additional 1s. 6d. in large classes, at their forthcoming open show, writes Mr. Will H. Gibb, the hon. secretary. Schedules will be ready shortly, and will be sent to all exhibiting last year, and to all who apply to me at 19, Bond Street, Brighton.

The Haltwhistle C.B.S. have engaged Mr. J. Dixon (Wigton) to judge their open show on November 10, write Messrs. Nicholson and Tallantyre, the secs. We have secured the patronage of the Border Fancy Club and the Northern Counties Norwich C.C., and expect more to follow. We shall be pleased to enrol as members any member of the above-named Clubs; fee, 2s. 6d., which may be paid now.

In looking through "C.B.," writes Mr. E. Thompson, secretary of the Glossop, Hadfield, and Dist. C.B.S., it gave me pleasure to note that so prominent a fancier and exhibitor as Mr. J. Shore, late of Macclesfield, has taken up his residence in Glossop; and on behalf of the members of the society, I wish him every success, and trust that in the near future he will see his way to throw in his lot with us; anyhow, I extend to him a hearty welcome.

Wigan Linnet Club have appointed a new sec. in Mr. J. Ashurst, 31, Schofield Lane, Wigan. They are, we hear, going very strong, with 37 good members. The sec. informs us that he has been requested to ask the Leigh sec. if he knows how many will meet him to fix contest dates? The Wigan Club will be very pleased if the Leigh sec. and secs. of neighbouring Linnet Clubs will state in CAGE BIRDS where they would like to meet to fix these dates.

IMPORTANT!

Readers should make certain of getting their copy of next week's CAGE BIRDS by ordering it at once. It will contain a surplus coloured plate and extra pages, while its articles, etc., will be of an exceptionally attractive nature. And the price will be one penny.

The coloured plates will be taken from our surplus stock, and comprise a large variety of subjects. Discerning readers will order several copies of this issue, for they will then be in the position of getting charming coloured plates of different bird subjects at a cost of only one penny each.

Advertisers should seize this opportunity, and make an early announcement of the stock they have for disposal. A startling and advantageous offer, made on our back page this week, will interest them. Read it, and remember that next week's CAGE BIRDS will afford advertisers a record publicity for such an astoundingly low cost.

We have decided to hold a social at the Textile Dining Rooms, Shaw Road, on October 7, when fanciers and friends are invited to attend, writes Mr. J. Cope, sec. of the Oldham C.B.S. Our annual show will be held at the Trades Hall, Bow Street, on October 14, when Mr. H. W. Battye will judge.

It is with the deepest feelings of regret that I have to inform you that so able and respected a vice-president as Mr. C. Booth, of Turnlee Road, Glossop, has had to remove from our midst, through taking up another position at Colne, Lancs, writes Mr. E. Thompson, secretary of the Glossop, Hadfield, and Dis. C.B.S. But he can rest assured that he takes with him the well-wishes of his brother fanciers in this society, and we trust Glossop's loss will prove Colne's gain.

At our annual show on October 25th and 26th, writes Mr. J. O. Bell, secretary of the Border City (Carlisle) O.S., we have 55 classes, with prize money £1 per class, and numerous specials and extra specials. Every former exhibitor will receive a schedule in due course. As Carlisle is one of the finest railway centres in the country we should be able to record one of the finest shows. From nearly all prize-winners we last year received thanks for prompt payment and care taken of birds.

Readers who are interested in those handsome flowers, carnations and picotees, should make a point of seeing the catalogue of Mr. Hayward Mathias, F.R.H.S., of Stubbington, Hants. Mr. Mathias is one of the most noted growers and prizewinners in the country (he this year won a silver cup at the big London show), and he supplies all the most charming and popular varieties at very modest prices, while he makes a speciality of sets and selections suited to all pockets and all gardens. We commend his price list to all readers who are carnation lovers and growers.

I have sent schedules out to all exhibitors at the Crystal Palace, L.C.B.A., Battersea, and Clapham Shows, writes Mr. A. L. Priest, hon. secretary of the Clapham and Dist. C.B.A.; it anyone has not received one will he please write? I had rather a good experience of "red tape." I wrote to the Post Office, Lavender Hill, to collect 1,200 schedules on Saturday morning at 8.15. About 8.45 the postman arrived, and asked whether they were ½d. or 1d., because if they were only ½d. wrappers he could not take them, as it was not a total of £5. So back he went with an empty barrow. So I posted them yesterday in the pillar boxes, filling them to the brim, of course, and then they had to send a special man to empty them!

Yorks. C.C. Trophy Competition.

The Bailey Trophy Competition is withdrawn from Laisterdyke Show, the society not having fulfilled the required conditions, writes Mr. John Greaves, secretary of the Yorkshire C.C. The Junior Novice Competition will stand as per schedule.

Can You Help?

Mr. J. Chatwin (Ada Road, Smethwick, Wor.) who last week advertised all his Roller Canaries (old and young) for sale, tells us that he has been reduced to a state of financial difficulty owing to lack of work, and that he would be glad to find purchasers for his stock at moderate prices (he has been a Roller breeder for 23 years). He writes: "I don't like to plead poverty; if any fancier could tell me of a situation, it would be more to my liking. I am a turner and machine tool maker, and have had 30 years' experience in the principal shops. It is the old tale, 'too old at forty.'"

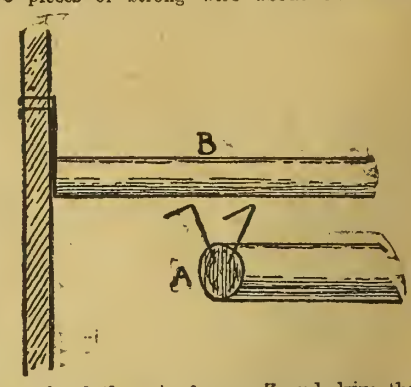
In the Courts.

A Fine for Causing Unnecessary Suffering.

Geo. Palmer, a bird dealer, of Islington, was fined 40s. and 2s. costs for causing unnecessary suffering to thirty-six Linnets, six Larks, and six Goldfinches, on August 28. Mr. H. Ricketts prosecuted for the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Mr. Margetts defended.

It was complained that the birds were kept in a foul condition, with little seed and fouled water. Some of the birds, it was stated, were dead, and others dying, when Inspector Morrow, of the Royal Society, visited the shop. The cages had not been cleaned for 48 hours. The inspector said the seed was strewn on the floor of the cages with foul matter.

For the defence it was pointed out that it was to the dealer's interest to treat his birds well. Palmer said he fed the birds and changed their water twice daily. The birds died through a bad kind of seed. The cages were cleaned on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday regularly.



Mr. Bros said if people kept wild birds in captivity they must keep them reasonably clean. Anybody who knew anything about wild birds knew that they were extraordinarily clean, and did not have their food mixed with their droppings. These birds had not been properly cared for.—A fine was imposed as stated.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 542.
A Spring Perch.

Sent by Mr. A. Bailey, 14, West Street Hucknall, Notts.

Enclosed is a sketch of a simple idea which I use myself, and find very suitable. All that is needed is a piece of ordinary perching and two pieces of strong wire about two inches long; bend them to form a Z and drive them in as shown at A. Fix them through the cage back as shown at B. When complete, it makes a springy perch the same as the bough of a tree.—A. Bailey.

No. 543.
A Cheap Egg-Food Pot.

Sent by Mr. A. Morrison, Peel Road, Woodford.

This can be made with an empty shrimp paste pot and two pieces of wire. Take a piece of wire about six inches long and bend as at A. Have another piece of wire one and a half inches long, with an eye turned each end, as at B. Slip the eyes over ends of the first piece of wire; insert pot and tighten; then bend the two ends to fit in cage.—A. Morrison.

A NEW SEED FOR FANCIERS.

During the course of a lecture, on Thursday evening, September 23rd, given before the members of the London and Provincial O.S., on seeds, Mr. T. R. Trower introduced "Nuseed," the grains of an African plant, which are readily eaten by Canaries (in the direction of an alternative staple diet to canary seed). It is a seed that has much to recommend it, compared with two allied seeds belonging to the grass order. The analysis works out as under:

	Nuseed.	Canary seed.	Millet seed.
Moisture	10.20	9.30	12.85
Oil	5.20	4.01	4.56
A. Albuminoids	14.38	17.37	11.08
Digestible carbohydrates	67.56	59.33	59.46
Indigestible woody fibre	1.23	4.99	7.45
B. Mineral matter (ash)	1.43	5.00	4.60
A. Containing nitrogen	2.30	2.78	—
B. Including sand and other silicious matter	0.07	0.39	—

It will therefore be seen that as an energy and heat producer it exceeds both canary and millet seeds, although slightly below canary seed in albuminoid (proteid) matter. On the other hand, it exceeds millet in this direction, and, taken as a whole, contains all the food elements requisite for supporting life. Canary fanciers, in consequence, should find "Nuseed" valuable as a foodstuff.

Its outer skin is very thin, compared with that of other bird seeds. It also weighs heavier by about 4lbs. per bushel than canary seed, weighing 62lb. per bushel. The sample that was sent to England some months ago has been tried by several well-known birdkeepers, who find their birds eat it very readily. It can be obtained of Messrs. Trower and Co. (442, Caledonian Road, London, N.), at the low price of 2s. per peck, or 7s. 6d. per bushel. They have just received a large consignment, which is ready for immediate distribution.

The Goldfinch.

By GEO. H. GROOCOCK (Leicester).

These birds never seem to me to be very hard to steady, but perhaps I have never had a difficult specimen, for I know an old experienced fancier and catcher who has a Goldfinch that is so unsteady, notwithstanding it has been caged for months, that he would give it up only it is such a good bird.

The quickest way to win the birds' affections, remember, is through their food. Talk to them often, and give them tit-bits after speaking to them, and they will soon know the hand that brings them these. Why, I have had Goldfinches which, when I put a fresh pot of hemp in the cage, would drop on to it and eat out of it while I still kept my hand on it: and this only a few days after they have come to like hemp seed.

I think a steady hen Canary has a good effect on an unsteady Finch if they are caged together. Of course, do not use your best Canary, for the food of the Goldfinch is not calculated to do the Canary any good. A favourite tit-bit for the Goldie is a thistle head cut in two, especially if it is a rotten one, and has some small grubs in it.

The Best Method of Feeding.

Next comes the feeding of birds which are a bit used to cage life. Goldfinches vary much in their tastes; and what suits one bird does not suit another. But after many experiments I have found the following to be the best way of feeding them: In the usual outside food-vessel put plain Canary seed. Every day in a separate pot give one teaspoonful, well heaped up, of a mixture of two parts of teazle to one of linseed, and also one teaspoonful of hemp. I give a heaped-teaspoonful of hemp to fresh-caught birds, i.e., birds just on hemp seed, but when they get used to cage life they do not get quite such a good teaspoonful.

One bird which I had became ill; I forthwith reduced its hemp to less than half a teaspoonful per day, and it recovered, and has kept in good health ever since. So watch the likes and dislikes of your birds.

The "Tit-Bits."

Then as tit-bits give a little inga, maw, thistle, dandelion, gold of pleasure, plantain, and any other wild seeds. Now and then you can give a little rape seed, but all Goldfinches will not eat this. Greenfood must be given, but, of course, care must be taken to see that it is not gathered with frost on it. Such stuff as watercress, chickweed, dandelion, rape seedlings, or apple is much liked.

Always keep your Goldfinches in a good-sized cage; they seem to keep much brighter and healthier, and sing quite as much as in a small cage. I very often keep mine in a compartment of a Canary breeding cage.

Among other things we must not forget the bath. I have always found that my Goldfinches were not very fond of it. But it was just as the birds felt; one could never tell whether the birds would have one or not. However, they always seem to like one on extremely hot days. But (and it is a very big but) they do not at all like baths hung outside the cage. What they like is one inside. If you object to messing the cage in which it habitually resides, keep a small one especially for the job, and run your bird into that for its bath. It should be given the chance of having a bath on all except very damp, cold days.

The Moulting Season.

Goldfinches can be moulted either in cages or aviaries. If in cages let each bird have a good big cage so as to get plenty of exercise. Let it bathe whenever it will. If your exhibition birds obstinately refuse to bathe spray them gently instead. Be very liberal with tit-bits, for there is nothing like their natural food for bringing out their natural colour well. A delicacy which seems to be particularly esteemed at this time of the year is a grub. I generally give my birds nasturtium flowers pretty freely, as in these, or on the leaves, can often be found a kind of fat caterpillar, which has a very tender skin. These are greatly enjoyed by the birds. Some will eat the tough common green caterpillars. Instead of grubs a mealworm or two may be given daily. A fine thing for bringing the blaze of a Goldfinch out silky in texture is a few drops of cod liver oil in a little egg-food each day. This is for birds that are not colour-fed, but for myself I believe in colour-feeding Goldfinches for exhibition.

I know that many will differ from me on this point. At first I was undecided. Some advised colour-feeding, and some did not. I determined to try one bird. I selected my worst (I did not, of course, want to risk spoiling a good one), and fed it as I was feeding my Canaries. The consequence was it was much improved in colour, and in no wise spoilt. So ever since then I have been a firm believer in colour-feeding Goldfinches for show.

The colour-food can either be given with egg and biscuit, or mixed amongst crushed seed. I like the first way myself, and have found the birds to eat the food all right with a little judicious starving; i.e., when the colour food is given let them have nothing else to eat but Canary seed; you will then find that most Goldies will eat the colour food with avidity. Of course, when the colour food is eaten (which takes about the morning) other seeds must be given; in fact, the birds can be treated like other Goldfinches. Give only tasteless pepper. The birds that are in aviaries should be treated the same as those in cages. A nice plan is to make the aviary something like their natural home by tying up in it bunches of thistles and other wild seeds and grasses which they like. Beside the nasturtium flowers, or instead of them, the usual greenfood can be given. Let them have plenty of sunlight if this is possible.

The Show Bird Described.

An exhibition specimen should be of the cobby, or Norwich, type. It should have a good big head, and a rich clear-coloured blaze extending well beyond the eye and a good distance below the beak. The blaze should be square cut at the base, and free from marks. The black round the beak, and extending to the eye, should be distinct but fine, so as not to darken the face. The black cap should be dense, clean cut, and of nice width, tapering down each side of the neck. The cheeks should be pure in colour except for a slight brown tinge like a finger mark. The breast should be nicely tanned, and of a rich chestnut in colour, showing as little of the white down the centre of the chest as possible. The back must be a rich nut-brown in colour. The wing bars must be large and of a deep bright yellow. The wings must be carried so as to just meet. The buttons must be clear and even.

The bird should stand well up at an angle of 45 degrees, and must be shown in the pink of condition or it will not be at the top.

Hybrid Breeding Hints.

The Goldfinch is a favourite bird for the breeding of hybrids of all kinds, especially Goldfinch-Canary hybrids, or, as they are more commonly called, Goldfinch Mules. Many believe that for a Goldfinch to breed it must be a house-moulted one, i.e., it must have made a complete moult in a cage. But this is not so. Birds which have been caught in their full colour and caged for a sufficient time to get fairly steady will breed. For myself, I prefer, when getting fresh birds, to get Greypates that have no adult colour at all. You can be as sure of these breeding as of an untried house-moulted one. Of course, if house-moulted birds are preferred, they can be recognised by their light, whitish legs, which get lighter with every succeeding cage-moult.

Never be persuaded to pay a big price for a Cheveral or a Peathroat "because it will be a certain breeder." They are no more reliable than others. A bird which is not a tried breeder should either be run with its mate through the winter or be put in the next compartment with a wired slide between. I prefer the latter myself, for the food of a Goldfinch does not suit a Canary.

When the Goldfinch is in breeding condition the black stripe down the centre of the beak will disappear. To bring the Goldfinch into this condition give tit-bits of some kind every day, especially dandelion and thistle, and by way of greenfood give dandelion leaves.

Do not trust the Goldfinch with the eggs. Get up early in the morning and remove them; then set the hen on the evening of the third day, shutting the Goldfinch off. For even if he will not hurt the eggs, he is no use with the hen, and will perhaps kill the young ones when they come.

In conclusion, let me say that if you are over in trouble with your birds write to CAGE BIRDS, whose experts are only too pleased to give you advice. I may say I always read through the answers to queries on British birds, and have picked up many bits of useful information from the replies.

"THE PRIDE OF THE FANCY."

Sketched from the Yorkshire Canary, unevenly marked, exhibited by Mr. H. W. Cook (Poplar) at the Horticultural Hall Show, where it secured second prize.

The Yorkshire Canary:

Let me warn Canary breeders against the indiscriminate use of milksop. It has been recommended by some that the use of this as a staple food for young birds is a certain solution of the worries attendant on the time which elapses between the young leaving the nest and their getting well on to seed. I am a firm believer in the usefulness of milksop as an occasional food and as a pick-me-up. But its regular use, without regard to the condition of the bird, I deprecate. When the excreta of your young birds is thin and discoloured—a sure precursor of the evils of inflammation and diarrhœa—instead of flying to milksop, try about a quarter of a spoonful of powdered charcoal with a teaspoonful of egg food or egg and bread. This will at once correct the irregularity, and should be continued for a few days.

I also recommend giving a fairly strong solution of lime water in the drinking glass immediately the young are taken away. Continue this until they are on to hard seed. Many of the illnesses of Canaries result from the drinking of too much water, but lime water will prevent this, and at the same time it will help to build up the growing frame of the young birds.

Conditioning for the Show Bench.

For getting birds into good condition for the show bench, try a seed mixture made up as follows: One part each German rape, gold of pleasure, linseed, teazle, and half parts of maw and hemp. Give one teaspoonful every day and supply twice a week a small quantity of egg (hard-boiled) with a little arrowroot biscuit, and in the drinking water put a few drops of tincture of iron—not too strong, but sufficient to give the water a bitter taste. Last, but not least, spray the birds on every bright day, and after it put the bath on. Do this in the early part of the day. Follow this, and if the birds are good enough bred they will look the whole world in the face and fear not any judge.

Concerning Colour-feeding.

For colour-feeding use the egg-cake instead of egg and bread. If mixed with the colour-food all the better. I make mine as follows: Six fresh eggs, lard the size of an egg, a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of baking powder, and a proportion of 2 of flour to 1 of pea-meal sufficient to make a firm dough. I bake it in a slow oven and then dry it so that it will grind up. It makes a highly nutritious food, far preferable to boiled eggs and bread crumbs.

In regard to washing birds for exhibition, there is one fallacy I wish to destroy, and that is "soap in the neck." I suppose every fancier will have seen his wife or his sister (or somebody else's sister) when she has been caught in the act of restoring the curl of the feathers of her best hat by holding them to a hot fire. That is the secret of curled feather in the neck—it is due to drying the birds too quickly.

Points When Washing.

I use three waters for washing; and after rinsing the bird thoroughly I wrap it in a cloth without attempting to take any moisture from it. I lay it before the fire for about twenty-five minutes, and the fact that the bird is sopping wet allows you to use—and it needs—a hot fire. When the bird is taken out of the cloth it should be warm and steaming. On no account should it be allowed to dry in the cloth. Then place it in a cage sufficiently far from the fire so that it will not be scorched. You will have no curled feather then. If the bird be dried too quickly the neck feathers will curl up, because whilst the outer tips of the feathers are thoroughly dry, the hollow of the neck still retains moisture. Let me repeat: Don't let the bird get dry in the cloth; and I add, what is just as important—don't let it get cold. I must conclude these random jottings, and the thought strikes me that in spite of the diversity of opinions as to methods of breeding, rearing, moulting, and preparing for exhibition, the Yorkshire Canary has arrived nearer the ideal than has been attained in any other variety.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(For rules see last week's issue.)

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Lite—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

Wheezing and Mating.

Sarsfield.—(1) As the wheeziness appears to have been more or less troublesome all through the year, it is doubtful if you will quite cure it. The moult nearly always brings out these little weaknesses, which explains its reappearance now. Try following treatment for a month or so. In addition to staple of plain Canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and a morsel of banana or green food. On the alternate days for a fortnight give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Limit the diet to this, but, if available, a mealworm a day might be added with benefit. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and for a fortnight afterwards add to the water every second day twenty drops of whisky, 6 each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and 2 of eucalyptus oil. Shake well together. (2) You would simply be going from bad to worse to try to breed Crests from your Norwich. A much better course will be to get the chubbiest and shortest feathered yellow hen you can obtain, with as short a tail as possible, and as much of her bulk as possible carried in front of the perch. By this mating you will make a step nearer the true Norwich ideal, instead of getting further away from it.

Making a Start, etc.

D. Thompson.—(1) Had you said what, if any, definite object you had in view, it would have been much easier to choose a suitable mate. It is quite probable the mark on head which you call brown is cinnamon colour, in which case there would be Cinnamon blood in both parents. Well examine colour of its eyes in varying angles of light, and see if they are a pink hue. If so, the bird is certainly cinnamon ticked. You might mate it with a clear hen of the opposite colour—thus if the cock is a yellow, mate it with a buff hen, and vice versa—choosing a hen, if possible, with Cinnamon blood if you wish to breed clear and ticked birds, otherwise you will produce a vast majority of greens and heavily variegated. The bird is in reality scarcely a suitable subject to breed for recognised markings, and would be better employed to improve quality of feather where this was required. (2) Answered in above. (3) In a yellow the yellow colour extends to the extreme end of the web of the feathers, thus giving the bird the appearance of a solid yellow hue. In a buff the body of feather is still yellow, but the yellow colour stops a little short of the end of the web, leaving a narrow margin of white around the tip of the feather, thus giving the bird an appearance of being a yellow more or less "frosted" or dusted with a white powder as it were. All these things are very fully explained in "Our Canaries." (4) Here again you should have said what you wish to breed. In the absence of this knowledge the most generally useful pair I can advise you to get is a ticked buff hen and a clear yellow cock, or vice versa—a bird ticked on one or two flights (inner) for preference.

A Wheezy Youngster (J. Evans).—For a young Canary to be in the condition indicated suggests one of two things—either it has been subjected to grave mismanagement, or it is the product of thoroughly unhealthy parents. In either case the outlook is not very rosy. Keep it in a moderate-sized box cage, in an equable temperature, quite free from draughts or noxious fumes of burning lights, etc. At same time see it is in a bright, well-aired, and healthy position. Keep cage and all food and water vessels scrupulously clean. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a scrap of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a pinch of mixed seeds, and on two other days a spray of green food. Continue this dietary for a month. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Bad Feet (C. Tyrell).—You cannot do better than continue the course of treatment previously advised, except that instead of anointing feet with zinc ointment you should use Lanocyllin, which will be rather better for the job now. It is extremely doubtful whether you will save the middle "claw" of the left foot, which will almost certainly drop off. You will be really fortunate if the disease is arrested at this stage with the loss of the one toe, as now seems likely.

Noisy When Fluttered (W. J. Delves).—See that the birds are quite free from draughts and extreme fluctuations, and treat both as advised to "Sarsfield (1)." This should set matters right. The feathers will probably re-appear around the eye of the cock in due course without attention, though it will do no harm to slightly ancint the bare skin once a week for a month with horacic ointment.

Growth in Ear (Webb, Woolwich).—I cannot say definitely what the growth is without seeing it. It is most likely a deposit of caseous matter from the circulatory system, and its position makes any unskilled interference inadvisable. However, anoint it daily with Tanocyllin, and give a mild aperient, such as a pinch of sulphate of soda, in the water every second day for a week, and follow up with 6 drops tincture of gentian and 4 aromatic sulphuric acid every second day the next week. If the growth does not disappear under this treatment write again, referring to this reply, and describe course it is taking.

Swollen Feet (F.K.).—Am inclined to think this is only a case of scaly accretions due to age, and the "humour" is probably more apparent than real. Keep perches and cage floor as clean as possible, and bathe the feet for a few minutes daily in a very warm solution of boracic acid—a teaspoonful of acid in a teasaucerful of warm water. Whilst bathing gently pass each toe between the tips of thumb and forefinger from time to time to remove any accumulation of dirt and cleanse toes thoroughly. Dry on a bit of soft rag, and well anoint them with zinc ointment, finally wiping off all surplus grease before returning bird to cage.

Samples of Wild Seeds (W. Allison).—The sample is beautifully clean, and well varied, and I find Canaries are very fond of picking amongst it, some of which, at least, they evidently find much to their taste, so that it should form a very appetising and beneficial change as an occasional tit-bit. There could be no possible objection to such a mixture being frequently used as a substitute for the hackneyed, though none the less useful, maw.

Injury to Eye (A. Steel).—I'm afraid you made a big mistake in putting bird into a fresh lime-washed cage with its eye in such a condition. It would have been far better to well wash out the cage for cleanliness, and give the eye a chance to get sound again before applying limewash to its cage. Get a poppy head from a chemist, smash it up, put in a teacupful of filtered rain water, and slowly stew it beside the fire until reduced nearly one-half; then strain the liquor, add two tablespoonfuls of rose water, and bathe eye daily with a little of this—using fresh liquor each time—until the inflamed condition has disappeared. It may recover completely, though there is the possibility of the sight being permanently damaged. Keep a cover over the cage as long as the light is painful to the bird. See rule 7. Glad to hear you are about joining the League; every fancier should do so, Canary lovers also included.

Bareness and Picking (Middleton, Hartlepool).—The symptoms are very like insect attacks. Examine cracks about cage, joints of doors, and ends of perches for red mites; also the bird itself for grey lice, and if any are discovered act as frequently advised here to eradicate them. Add a few quassia chips to the bathing water occasionally for a time. If no insects are found, give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape in addition and a morsel of banana. On the alternate days for the next fortnight give a scrap of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. Sparingly anoint bare places twice a week for month with zinc ointment. In the drinking water give the same medicine as advised to "C.D. and C.M. (2)."

Poison Suspected (M. E. W.).—Certainly there are means of having the seed analysed. You need only submit samples to any recognised chemical analyst, whose fee would vary according to the tests required. In such a case as you name, the county analyst would be best. To claim damages from the seed merchant you would require very clear proof of the seed having been supplied by him, that it contained a poisonous substance in sufficient quantity to cause death, and, finally, that the birds had died from the effect of this poison. Of course there is the probability your birds died from some other cause. It would have been far better to have had a post-mortem on the birds that died to elucidate the real cause.

Suitable Mate for Singer (Iredale).—The bird is probably a Roller, though it would be impossible to say definitely without seeing it. To breed a good stamp of bird for singing only you could not do better than mate it with a so-called Seifert or St. Andreasburg Roller hen of a good singing strain. A 1910 or 1911 bred hen would be the most suitable age, and these ages would be equally suitable provided the hens were equally suited in health, vigour, etc. If the cock is a marked bird you should endeavour to match him with a clear hen, and if a yellow with a buff hen, and vice versa in either case. You would do well to read the chapters on Rollers in House's "Manual," and Part XVI. of "Our Canaries," which will soon appear. Also see reply to "Novice" above.

A Seifert Roller (V. A. G.).—A trained so-called Seifert Roller certainly ranks in the highest place as a household songster—that is, speaking for Canaries only. You should get a very fair singer at the price you name in two or three months hence. At present it is rather early for them to be in the market. They are excellent singers, more varied, less noisy, and not so ear-piercing as ordinary singing Canaries—in a word, the voice and performance is more cultured. As to whether I consider them worth keeping, though they are far from being my special favourites, I am never without at least one cock, which I keep solely for love of the song. They would succeed well in an all-wire cage provided the room were quite free from draughts. A box cage, however, is much less risky. You should get the Nutshell booklet on the "Roller." See Mr. Page's column for reply re Pekin.

Building a Strain (M. W. S.).—As you say you intend getting two pairs to start from a well-known breeder. I feel sure the best advice I can give you is to tell this breeder just what you would like to aim at in breeding, and leave the selection in his hands. Knowing the birds and their parentage, as he doubtless does, he will be able to select matched pairs for any definite object far better than I or anyone else could advise you to choose for yourself. By stating your object I mean you should tell him whether you would like to produce a majority of clears or marked young, or whether you aim at breeding even-marked, and so on. With only two pairs to start I should scarcely advise you to have a green—two clears, one slightly ticked, and one lightly variegated, would give you a fair amount of green blood. As a beginner you should certainly read up "Our Canaries," which deals very fully with all kinds of cages.

Roller Panting (M. Glasgow).—Give a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a bazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw and a morsel of banana, carrot, or a spray of green food. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. In the drinking water give 6 drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of the following every second day for a fortnight: Two drachms each glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Any chemist will supply. See bird is quite free from cold draughts and extreme fluctuations.

A Border Trio (C.D. and C.M.).—(1) Yes, the cock who is now tailless should in the ordinary course be quite ready and have a full-grown tail by the date named. The only rational way of "speeding up" the moult is to keep on the warm side, free from draughts, and cover over the cage, as mentioned several times lately here. (2) Probably the bird is a glutton—nothing worse. Some birds are naturally of this nature. Give her six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts in the water every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops of tincture of gentian and two of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. (3) You should have given the size and description of your bird-room, with a rough sketch if possible showing what means of ventilation you had in it. Only then could I advise you properly re heating it. At present I can only say that the method you suggest is at once the riskiest and most unsuitable. See reply to "L.B.W."

CANARY QUERISTS

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Aviary Queries.

H. B.—Providing the outside aviaries are sufficiently roomy for exercise and that when the glass shutters are closed the aviaries are not draughty, the following can be left out-of-doors: Diamond Doves, Avadavats, Bib Finches, Bronze-wing Mannikins, Orange-breasted Waxbills, and Green Cardinals. During mild genial weather the glass shutters could be open for a few hours during the middle of the day. As it is their first year in this country and Grassfinches are likely to be rather scarce, I think all the others had better go indoors for this winter. As winter store cages, the 5ft cage will accommodate 25 birds, and the 3ft. one a dozen. So long as draught cannot blow through the cages when room is ventilated, the cages need not be boarded up, but it would be good policy to place the cages against a wall so that back and one end would be protected. Use twiggy branches as perches, arranging them round back and both ends. There is just a chance of their rearing the young. By making use of the glass shutters at night you can leave the birds out till end of October, unless the weather should turn exceptionally severe. If you will give me the dimensions of your outside aviary I can tell you if two pairs of same species will be safe together when breeding. I do not think you need break up the pairs for winter caging, but do not put nesting receptacles in cage, nor supply nesting material. Green Cardinals will require ripe fruit, soft food, and live insects while rearing young. Cock birds of same species will agree together, providing there are no hens to fight over. If any of your birds batch out you must supply soft food and green food ad lib. If you have more birds than your cages will accommodate, write me again and I will tell you which are the least risky to leave out. If you have to write again, give me size and description of outside aviaries.

An Ailing Grey.

W. M.—Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free from our Manager, should help you as to general treatment. I cannot give you a full reply till I know how the bird has been treated (fed) during the twelve months it has been in your possession. It is evidently in a very weak state, and I am almost afraid it will not recover. Get from your chemist a box of honey and borax, and put a little on its tongue twice daily (use a camel hair brush and well cleanse it each time it is used). This will help to clear the mouth and throat. Give two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia with a day between each dose—one teaspoonful of Magnesia to two tablespoonfuls of water—this to form the day's drinking supply; after this repeat every fourth day so long as the voidings are not watery-loose; on intervening days add one teaspoonful byno-phosphates to the daily supply of drinking water. Mix a pinch of grit (not sand) with its daily supply of seed. If you send me the particulars asked for above, with any other details you can, I will try and assist you further.

An Ailing Amazon.

E. Finch.—Confine dietary as under, and do not on any account give sops, table scraps or animal food of any kind: Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet, and one pint each of oats, paddy rice, white maize, hemp and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in cage. Boil about one tablespoonful of maize till soft, drain off all water, then lightly dust with flowers of sulphur and supply to the bird; this must be prepared fresh daily. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit and green food. Add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. Put a little honey and borax into the mouth twice daily, and cleanse (bathe with a camel-hair brush) its nostrils daily with diluted glyco-thymoline. Put one teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in the drinking water. Keep its bowels moving freely (not watery-loose) with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one tablespoonful magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water—to be given in lieu of the ordinary drinking water. Continue this treatment till relief is given—the dietary permanently.

Not Moulting Regularly.

W. Webster.—The first moult in this country with Parrots is often irregular and protracted. Keep bird strictly out of draught, yet not in a stuffy corner. Give following seed mixture: one quart each canary and white millet, and one pint each white maize, hemp, dari, paddy rice, oats, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply in cage. Give a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily, boil till soft, drain off all water, and well dust with flowers of sulphur; this only keeps fresh one day. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, green food (any salad going), and plain biscuit. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply, and keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in cage. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (two tablespoonfuls), so long as voidings are not watery loose; when this occurs stop magnesia till voidings are normal. When not giving the magnesia, add same quantity of byno-phosphates to the water, and continue till moult is safely past. Spray once or twice weekly with quassia solution, using a mist sprayer. Anoint lightly with cold cream any bare patches, but not sufficiently often to make the skin or plumage greasy. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food.

Blue-fronted Amazon.

C. Meads.—Treat swelling and eyes as already advised. Also keep bowels moving freely (not watery-loose) by giving, about every fourth day, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water—this to be given in lieu of the drinking water. On intermediate days put barely a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water. Stop milk sop at once, and in place give a little boiled maize daily; boil till soft, drain off all water, and lightly dust with flowers of sulphur. Seed Mixture: Get one quart each canary and white millet, and one pint each hemp, oats, paddy rice, white maize, grit and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in cage. A more airy position would be better, but it must not be in a draught—the temperature of any living room will suince. Am of opinion the "Tck, Tck," is in consequence of a dyspeptic condition, and that with returning health the bird will recommence to talk, and the objectionable call will be left off. Break in upon this call continually, talk to it and otherwise attract its attention. The bird is in low condition and spirits! Treat as above and report progress with full details a month hence.

Another Ailing Amazon.

W. H.—It is a most unsatisfactory position—the bird must have food, yet, if the bread and milk is continued indefinitely, it will only aggravate matters, and ultimately ruin the bird's health. Yet you must not stop the sop suddenly. Boiled maize daily or every other day is quite permissible, but you must also supply dry seed mixture (see previous reply), ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. A pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seed, and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept hanging in cage. Get it on to this diet as quickly as possible, and gradually wean bird from the milk sop. The boiled maize only keeps fresh one day. Prepare as follows: boil till soft, drain off all water, and then dust with flowers of sulphur; about one tablespoonful of maize (when boiled) should be ample. Every fourth day so long as the voidings are not watery loose, supply in lieu of plain water one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia diluted with two tablespoonfuls of water. You must give it on two occasions at any rate. On the intervening days put one teaspoonful of hyno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. If the bird will take it, a piece of biscuit moistened in hyno-phosphates 1 part, and water 2 parts, will be helpful. Keep a supply of dry seed mixture in the cage; the sooner the bird returns to it the better.

Zebra Finches ("Zebra Finch.").—I am afraid you are giving them stimulating food and the cock throws out the eggs or newly-hatched young because the nesting fever is on them again. Do not give any soft food till the young are hatched, and then give a little daily. Feed on good canary, white and spray millet, with green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. A few ants' eggs given as bought would probably be appreciated when they are feeding young. Many pairs rear on seed alone. If the cock continues his bad habits, get rid of him and procure another.

What Species? (A.M.B.).—I am still at a loss as to actual species, but it is undoubtedly one of the Babbler Thrushes and should be fed on soft food, live insects and a little fruit. I am keeping your query by me and will try and definitely identify it for you. A rough sketch, even if only approx shape and colour areas are indicated, would be of great assistance. Can you supply this? Only observation can tell you whether it will agree with a Bulbul in a cage. Try them; keep watch and promptly remove one if they quarrel.

Australian Finch (Alarmed).—From such details as you supply I cannot help you definitely. Clipping the flights, unless you also cut away flesh as well, would not account for its condition, and the flights would be renewed at each moult. Possibly it has dashed against the wire netting and injured itself. If you have a vet. near you let him see it and prescribe; if not, well cleanse the wound with tepid water and then dress with antiseptic ointment, which can be obtained from any chemist. Keep the bird's bowels moving freely at this juncture. Half teaspoouful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on other days a similar quantity of Byno-phosphates.

Cardinal with Sore Feet (G. Wright).—This bird requires a more generous dietary. Give it a little ripe fruit (apple, banana, etc.), seed mixture (1 quart each of canary and white millet, and half-a-pint each of paddy rice, hemp and sunflower seed, the whole to be well mixed). Also give green food, grit, cuttlebone, and two or three mealworms or other live insects daily. Bathe the foot in tepid water and anoint the sores with a little antiseptic ointment (from any chemist). If the bird picks the sores and makes them bleed again, cleanse the feet in tepid water and then lightly touch the bleeding wound with Friar's Balsam, keeping the bird in the hand till the Balsam has dried. Twice a week for the next month put half-a-teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water (the latter about two tablespoonfuls, Cuban and Other Finches ("Yorkshire Girl").—These Finches require Canary, white millet, also millet sprays, with greenfood, grit, and water ad. lib. for drinking and bathing. A little of the seed mixture you name will do no harm once or twice a week. When obtainable free from frost, a blighty spray from rose or fruit tree or any non-poisonous herbage. During the winter season canary seed can be grown in any sunny window in thumb pots, and when two or three inches high a pot can be put in the cage, and will be much appreciated by the birds. By periodical sowing a supply can be kept up—it is excellent for the birds. A little soft food is also excellent for the birds—for such as will take it. You must consult their taste a little. Most species will take ants' eggs either dry or moistened. Keep birds out of draught, and ordinary living room temperature will be ample.

Weavers and Lavender Finches.

A Bird Lover.—(1) The period of going out of colour is very variable, say any time between Xmas and end of February. (2) Weavers are very difficult to breed in captivity and very few instances of their doing so successfully, even in large garden aviaries, are on record. The demeanour you describe is quite normal, some species being more demonstrative than others. (3) The demeanour of the Cordon Bleus is also normal, and in an aviary your pair are very probable breeders. (4) Give them their choice with husk and rush nests, also a Hartz travelling cage, with the fitting removed and also two bars, so that birds can get in and out. (5) It all depends on size of aviary, condition of shelter shed and locality. If the latter is northern you had better take them in, though with immunity from draught artificial heat is not necessary. If southern, providing the shelter is well lighted, weather-proof, and large enough for them to be shut in during sharp extremes, they will be all right out-of-doors.

Lemon-crested Cockatoo (J. Blackmore).—Supply a seed mixture of one quart each Canary and white millet and one pint each of white maize, hemp, paddy rice, oats, dari and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply in the cage, add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts (various), greenfood, gritty sand for cage tray, and water. Stop the tea at once, and give in lieu of same chemical food and water, and twice weekly soak one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into a piece of biscuit; if the voiding should become watery this must be stopped for a fortnight. Spray him once or twice a week with quassia solution, using a mist sprayer. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Continue the above treatment for about six weeks, and then report progress with full details.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Colour-feeding a Bullfinch (London).—Your bird having finished moulting, there is no use in colour-feeding him. This should be commenced at the first signs of the moult at the latest. For a Bullfinch, quite the best form of colour-feeding is plenty of such berries as he could get in Nature—blackberries, privet, etc. Give these freely from now. No amount of cayenne pepper will impart a natural colour to the breast of a Bullfinch. You should get our Nutshell No. 11, which goes very fully into the question of the proper feeding of the bird.

Old Hemp (Nauticus).—"Old Hemp" simply means hemp seed that has been stored beyond the season in which it has been grown. Such seed, when it has been properly stored, is better than that of a new crop. The best is of a greyish-brown colour. If green it is unripe, and if very dark has been most probably improperly stored. The kernel should quite fill the husk, and should be white in colour and nutty to the taste.

A Variety (Novicee).—(1) It is not correct to say that a hand-reared Goldfinch will never breed Mules. Don't you believe it. (2) "Do Greypates grow until they are full coloured?" What an extraordinary question! It is like asking: Does a baby grow until it cuts its teeth? The answer is in the affirmative. (3) The young Goldie shows its full blaze at the first autumn moult (in extent, that is), but the majority do not get fully up in colour until well towards the Spring—some, indeed, not until after the second moult, keeping what fanciers term "brassy" in colour. (4) Paraffin and boiling water will exterminate red mites. In fact, either (used by itself) will suffice. (5) I have had no experience of aviaries covered with tarred felting on the inside. I don't suppose the smell (if the place is well ventilated) would adversely affect the birds. By all means open the windows on sunny days during the winter, but use discretion if it is very windy, so that a strong draught is not created.

A "Wild" Thrush (Brownie).—Your bird, I am afraid, is not of a kind (tractable) disposition, and I do not see what more you can do to try and gain its confidence. I shall be surprised, however, if it does not gradually alter and lose its nervousness at your near approach. You must continue to keep it where it has plenty of human company; also to talk to it, and quietly offer it mealworms, etc., with your fingers. That the bird is beginning to sing so nicely is a most excellent sign. A thick layer of finely-broken-up peat moss will be better than paper as a covering for the cage bottom. This can be bought cheaply at almost all hay, corn and food stores; many of our advertisers offer it.

Two Linnets (C. Hart).—The best advice I can give you is to obtain a copy of the Nutshell booklet on the Linnet from our publisher. This is only 2½d., post free, and in it you will find an illustration and description of the most suitable style of cage, with up-to-date advice upon foods, management, etc. Then, if you want advice upon any particular point, I shall be only too pleased to give it.

Stock Mixtures (J. W. R.).—You ask me for a stock mixture for no less than nine species of birds. This is really too tall an order to answer shortly, especially as for any one bird the stock mixture should vary somewhat according to the season. A column could be taken up in detailing the proper feeding of the Goldfinch alone of the birds you mention. You will find very full information in our Nutshells (see list in advt. columns), upon the proper feeding of all the birds in your list, except the Brambichinch, and this bird should be fed exactly as detailed in the Nutshell on the Chaffinch.

Mule-Breeding in Large Flight (F.M.).—Your flight is certainly a fine roomy place, and I see no reason why you should fail to rear some Goldfinch-Canary Mules therein. You are proceeding on the right lines by restricting the inmates to the two species only. Two other points you must observe are: (1) do not put in too many birds; (2) arrange plenty of nesting sites—at least twice as many as there are hen Canaries. I should think that your four Goldies with six hen Canaries would be a wise limit as regards number of inmates. If any of the birds prove persistently quarrelsome (some hen Canaries are very vicious and cruel to others of their kind during the breeding season), they will have to be removed. Catch up the young Mules as soon as they can feed themselves properly, and cage by themselves for at least during the continuance of the breeding operations.

About a Mule (Tilbury).—Your bird, of which you send a sketch (very useful, this), would compete in the class for "unevenly-marked or variegated" Mules. Of course, the wording of class headings varies in the different show schedules (above I am quoting from the schedule of the Crystal Palace Show). Your bird, however, could not compete as a "lightly marked" Mule. If really big and stoutly built it would stand an excellent chance of securing a prize at shows which give a class for variegated birds. Against clear, ticked, and evenly-marked Mules it would be outclassed. I think it a pity that more shows do not offer classes for variegated Mules (to be not more than half light, say, or two-thirds). They would fill well, I fancy. Your bird should be fed as hot a colour as possible.

A Goldfinch's Trouble (Hardbill).—In my opinion your bird has turned dull and queer because it has stuck in the moult for some reason or other, and until the feathers are falling freely again it is likely to continue so—in fact, you may lose him. Could you not try removing his cage into a heated room? I take it he is at present in an unheated one. A warm kitchen would be just the place. It would help if you carefully extracted one or two of the secondary flight feathers of each wing, and a feather or two from each side of the tail, while if this fails to start him, later on take out one or two feathers from the sides of the breast. This may sound rather cruel advice, perhaps, but it is a case of "needs must when the devil drives"; and the operation causes but momentary pain to the bird, while it is fairly certain to save its life. You can also try the effect of steeping a little meadow saffron (fresh daily) in its drinking water.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. R. Runnels-Moss.—Liver in an advanced stage of fatty degeneration, much enlarged, soft, friable, and spotted with small hemorrhages, complicated with intense inflammation of the bowels following upon disorganisation of the liver substance and alteration of its secretions. It is dietetic in origin, and results from the intaking with the food of particles of irritant or poisonous materials, which are responsible for conversion of liver cell tissue into fat. It is gradual in its onset, and symptons are not generally observable until the intestines suffer; and death quickly results from acute enteritis.

L. A. Knight.—Pleuro-pneumonia, otherwise pleurisy complicated with pneumonia, probably tubercular, and not of recent origin. It is difficult to detect this in the living bird, until pneumonia renders evident the trouble. The vendor may have in all good faith sold you what he considered a healthy bird; its new surroundings may also have influenced the course of the disease, unless, of course, there was evidence of illness at time of purchase. I regret your unfortunate loss.

Ebbw.—Read answer to J. R. Runnels-Moss; your case is very similar, except in the absence of bowel inflammation. The liver showed all the same changes, not a portion of it being in a sound condition; but death followed on exhaustion from anæmia and debility, due to improper assimilation or digestion of food. The muscles, also the interior of the body, were watery and dropsical. There is some fault in your diet, and I should advise you to search for this, or to procure a fresh supply.

H.S.—Splenic-apoplexy, meaning engorgement of the spleen with blood induced by ptomaine poison. The spleen is a very important organ, better known to the layman as the milt, capable of holding a very large amount of blood, and highly distensible to many times its ordinary size. It is one of the principal organs most affected in septic fever; in fact, is always enlarged in bacterial diseases, from the toxins or poisons generated by them. Use scrupulous cleanliness. Wash all utensils in a weak solution of Condy's Fluid, and give also of the latter night and morning in the water to drink. You need have no fear of contagion, the trouble arising from one source only, any one bird not being contagious to the others.

G. Heath.—Acute entero-peritonitis, or inflammation of the bowels and peritoneum. The body cavity also contained a quantity of black clotted blood. Symptoms are suspicious of acute mineral poisoning. To any affected birds give twenty to thirty drops of the following medicine in the drinking water night and morning:—Morphia 1-32 of a grain; spirits of chloroform, 10 drops; syrup simplex, ½ ounce; water up to 2 ounces. This needs careful dispensing by a chemist. Do not attempt the use of turpentine; it is much too severe, and only serves to hasten death.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Pheasant (L.H.).—The desired information will be given you next week by Mr. Page in his query columns.

Striped Feathers (G.E.).—Mr. St. John (our Canary specialist) will answer your question in his query columns.

Press Cuttings (J. Wager, T. Duncan, A.E.S., and others).—We thank you for your courtesy in forwarding the newspaper cuttings.

Different Colours in Canaries (W. L. Delver).—If you will tell us the variety of Canary (Norwich or Yorkshire) and enclose three 1d. stamps, we will send you a coloured plate depicting the different forms of markings and colour.

A Perch (O. E. Brooks).—This type of perch is in too common use, we are afraid, to be worth illustrating.

Dolgelly Show (Judge Task Bob).—We cannot take notice of anonymous communications. If you want your letter published you must send us your name and address as a guarantee of your bona-fides.

The Peacock (Peacock).—Your question was answered in our issue of September 16th (page 155, col. 2) as follows: "The doubts of your friends have no foundation. The eggs of the Peafowl are fertilised in the same manner as the eggs of other fowls."

Three Items (New Reader).—East Ham is in London (that is, the County of London). Copies of the Wild Birds' Protection Act of 1880 can be obtained from Messrs. Wyman, Ltd., Printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.; they also supply copies of the bye-laws made by the various local bodies to adapt the above Act to different counties, etc. They cost 1d. each (postage extra). Copies of local bye-laws can also be obtained from the Town Clerk, or the Chief Constable of the various county towns (or the chief towns of the particular district). Bird-catching is prohibited in Epping Forest all the year round (to wit, in the parishes of Epping, Epping Upland, Theydon Bois, Theydon Garnon, and Lambourne). All of Essex lying within the metropolitan police district is closed the year round; and in many Essex parishes catching is prohibited on Sundays. If you catch birds along the public roads it is conceivable you may get summoned for causing an obstruction. Much depends upon the tackle and the kind of "public road" it is used on.

Turning White in the Moult.

Sir,—Having been a reader of Cage Birds for some length of time, I thought your readers would be interested to know that I have a Linnet that is turning white in its moult. The bird is four years old.

— Rees.

A Mixed Bag.

Sir,—Would any reader of Cage Birds be kind enough to tell me how to breed, and keep, mealworms and maggots? Could anyone tell me also of a good place for catching birds near East Ham (Essex).

A New Reader.

[There is a back number of Cage Birds which contains an article upon the breeding of gentles (maggots); and the same with mealworms.—Editor.]

The "Champion" Singing Linnet

Sir,—Mr. Allen speaks of not taking notice of any further challenges. Does he think it was only paper talk on my part? If he does, I want him to think again, as he ought to know himself that all birds are likely to go into moult at this time of the year. My bird has not only gone into moult, but he died on Wednesday last, September 20th. So Mr. Allen does not need to be afraid of a challenge from me just yet, anyhow.

A Threatened Revolt in Scotch Fancy Circles.

Sir,—In conversation with brother fanciers (I use that term advisedly, because all Breeders should be one common brotherhood) I found a general impression that the Scotch Fancy has suffered, and is suffering, from being confined to a few. A system is in vogue, it is said, with the "upper ten" to exchange birds within their own caste, which keeps those who might, and would, purchase, from getting into the Fancy as successfully as they would like. I think the time has arrived when this serious aspect should be considered. Unless there is an amendment, and that quickly, a serious situation will arise. The fanciers of the "bird of circle" are ripe for a revolt against this endeavour to keep the good birds in the hands of a few. The case of the Scotch Fancy is bad enough, without this kind of thing being resorted to. What do others say?

A Fancier.

The Ladies Feasted at Bradford East.

Sir,—The Bradford East Society have arranged for a supper and social evening (to open the winter session) on Tuesday, October 3, at headquarters, the Park Chapel Schools. A varied and interesting programme has been arranged by a sub-committee, which reflects great credit on their businesslike methods. The evening is one specially set apart for the ladies, who have played a very important part in the society's welfare. In every public function we have always been favoured with their help and support, and although it has been keenly appreciated by the rank and file of the members, still it was considered that we had not, as yet, shown them that appreciation in any outward form. Hence the decision arrived at is a happy idea to try to repay them. The supper is to be served by the members, and in addition they have taken the responsibility of paying for the lady who accompanies them at supper. To fanciers and friends the supper will be served at the modest price of 6d. each. It is hoped all members and their wives or friends will attend. Commence at 7.30 prompt. A special invitation is extended to all. Bowling Old Lane. Trains run to within a few yards of the school.

The Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland and Coming Competitions.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in stating that since our last meeting two of our members have offered "specials" for competition during the coming show season. Mr. A. Girvan, of Ayr, is giving a special prize to the runner-up to bowl winuer. As Mr. Girvan was runner-up himself last season, it looks as though he means to go up "dux" this term. Mr. R. Heggie, of Mount Florida, is giving a gold medal for novices on exactly the same lines as Dr. Syson's medal last year. As we could be doing with more competition for these prizes (particularly the latter), and for the other club trophies, I extend a hearty invitation to all Yorkshire exhibitors in Scotland to join us at this time. I would particularly appeal to Yorkshire fanciers in Fifeshire. There are a lot of them, I know, and yet we have only two members from the "Kingdom" on our books. As we are giving our patronage to two Fife shows this year, I think I can expect further support from the "Fifers." I am also glad to say that the special prize subscription sheet opened at last meeting is filling up nicely, but there is still room for a few more names on it. With regard to the club's standard show cages, the maker informs me that these are now ready, so if those members who have ordered, but not yet paid for theirs, will kindly let me have a remittance, I will have the cages sent on at once.

Can a Novice Grow "Too Old?"

Sir,—Would any of your readers oblige by telling me when a fancier ceases to be a novice?—as I see here (Scotland) some old fanciers showing away in the novice classes year after year.

Something Rare in Hybrids.

The Goldfinch-Twite Successfully Reared

Sir,—It may interest some of your readers to know that a friend of mine (Mr. D. Warwick, of North Shields) has been successful in breeding from a Goldfinch cock and a Twite hen. From the first nest he got three eggs, which he put under feeders. The following week, seing the Twite hen was wanting to nest again, he put the Goldfinch back. She soon laid again, and hatched two eggs; but has only been successful in rearing two of the young hybrids; these are now nearly through the moult. He lost the others when they were about three weeks old. Any fanciers are welcome to see them by calling on him at 9, Canden Street.

Members of Societies and their Subscriptions.

Sir,—With the numerous announcements of societies about to hold their annual shows, fanciers generally are looking over their stock with a view to patronising them and the hope of winning some of the prizes that are offered in competition. Does it not behove every fancier to ask himself whether he is doing his best to support the concerns nearer at home—whether he has paid the subscription to his society or societies? When that is paid he must feel a greater sense of security, because he fears the frowns of no man and can say, if he wins, that he has won honourably. To my mind it is dishonourable to enter birds at all at the annual competition until those dues are paid. Of course, all societies have rules that bar this procedure, but rarely does it ever happen that the rule is carried out. Help the secretaries all you can by paying your way, and they in their turn will have the power to refuse those birds whose owners are a disgrace to the Fancy.

Ipso Facto.

Should Overdue Subscriptions be Accepted?

The Green Canary Association and Its Rule.

Sir,—Mr. Green replies to "No Dollar" in last week's Cage Birds that he is not debarred from receiving subscriptions after August 31st. I would like to ask him (as it was through his instrumentality that the rule was made) what is the use of the rule, as receiving subs. after the date named renders the rule obsolete. As regards his reiterating that the society was formed to be run on business lines, I will pass over that, for everyone does not work a business on the same lines. At one time we had an hon. secretary who could get subs. and specials galore, but he did not show any officialism, which I think was the cause of his success. I am one of the defaulters, but as regards being under any obligation to the G.C.A. I fail to see it, for I take it that if a member has not paid his subscription by August 31st he is crossed off the list. As regards the G.C.A. not being a "philanthropic institution," I think it is the want of a little diplomacy that causes him to write in such a manner, as it would not tend to get subscriptions in, even if he did depart from the rule. He says "No Dollar" will never be missed. Not alone, I agree, but when he is put alongside all the other dollars that are not forthcoming, I think he will be rather a severe knock for the Green Club, as it is such members as "No Dollar" that provide specials for the "nuts" to rake in. In closing my remarks, I would like to say that it seems the hon. secretary of the Green Club is trying to twist the rules of the society to suit his own convenience.

Another Missing Dollar.

Sir,—Mr. Green remarks he would be delighted to expound his views in person if "No Dollar" would publish his identity. As I do not think any good would accrue from hearing Mr. Green's views in private, and being debarred from having any voice in the Green Club's meetings, I still prefer to remain

Next Crystal Palace Show Date has been Fixed: Suggestions for the Classification Invited

Sir,—Arrangements have been made for this show to be held on Feb. 2, 3, 5, and 6, 1912, by the London and Provincial O.S., as usual. It is proposed to give the same classification as at last show. The classification can be extended provided the sections be guaranteed. Any suggestions received from intending exhibitors will be carefully considered. I shall be pleased to receive matter for schedule from secretaries of Specialist Clubs giving their patronage to this show at their early convenience.

Lancashire and Cheshire Union of Cage Bird Societies.

Sir,—At the last meeting of the above Union a sub-committee was formed to draw up a code of rules. This has been done, and I have sent a copy to most of the societies in Lancashire and Cheshire. If any society has not received a copy, will the secretary please inform me, when I will send one on. As the show season is about to commence, there will be a greater opportunity of meeting fanciers at the shows. Should any fancier require information with regard to the Union, either Mr. Dent—who is acting as Chairman—or myself will be glad to explain. Will the secretaries who have received a copy of rules kindly let me know the decision of their societies as soon as possible?

A Lively Letter from Liverpool.

The New Society for Anfield, Everton and District; and Some Sensational Allegations.

Sir,—I am pleased at the opportunity presented of making a further appeal to fanciers to join the above society, and at the same time replying to your correspondent who conceals his identity behind the name of W. C. Robinson. I am rather inclined to think, and I am not alone in my contention, that the real instigator of the letter appearing in your last issue knows more about goldfish and "wasters" than he knows about the needs of a new society in the above districts that have a population of over 100,000. I am afraid, sir, I should occupy too much of your valuable space to go fully into the many matters arising out of your correspondent's letter. First of all, let us deal with his appeal to fanciers to join the three city societies, namely, the Breeders', G.C.A., and Open Society, by first asking the question, Who governs these societies? Are the members allowed a say in matters? I think not. Why are so many fanciers receding from these societies? Is it because they are governed by a clique—of which your correspondent is no doubt one, and a principal at that? Let him come out and sign his name and I will promise him something in my future correspondence to reflect upon. A fancier describes this clique as a "bond of union," or "the charmed circle," limited to about a dozen of the high-standard type. Yes, very high, sir; but decay has set in. Not one of these individuals dare speak ill of one other. Why, the borrowing and lending of birds for show purposes is so rampant that the ordinary members haven't a ghost of a chance. You cannot expect to enrol members while this is permitted. I venture to say this much: the man that speaks out against this kind of thing is very soon riddled out—blackballed, if you like. Let me ask this question: Why did a member of the G.C.A. so suddenly stop competing for the Championship Cup and resign his membership? Now, sir, I know the answer to this. Was it because one of the charmed circle was borrowing birds to compete against him, or was it the thought of having to pay a dollar this coming season? I hope I have given your correspondent some idea why the genuine fancier will not join the City societies. I am afraid unless the talking Canary of these societies is checked there will be no one left but the "charmed circle." The gentleman who has been kind enough to sign the letter is only known to me as a "pot hunter." Perhaps he has been nominated for the cup this coming season? Now, sir, a word on the district societies. These are in fairly decent hands except in one or two instances. Note the difference: Nest feather shows, Birkenhead over 100 birds, Bootle, 120; Wallasey, upwards of 100; City societies, Breeders, about 40; G.C.A., about 30. Something to boast about, isn't it? The City societies are governed by the charmed circle, and the principal business is hatched and colour-fed in anything but the proper place. The outside members are kept on the leash and muzzled. The proposed new society will have lectures, debates, washing exhibitions, etc., by up-to-date fanciers, but no stop-at-home-all-day-talking Canaries. Let us proceed. Who is this Wright of mushroom growth? How dare he have the audacity to start a society without first consulting the charmed circle and supplying all these novice fanciers' names and addresses and giving us a chance to make them pay their footing? This man Wright showed birds about twenty-two years ago, in conjunction with his father, and has kept and bred Canaries ever since. Re Bootle nest feather show, let it be distinctly understood that one of the points I feel very strongly upon is the borrowing or lending of birds for exhibition—money-grabbing, in other words. The birds I showed were my own property, and, what is more, they won. The same applies to Birkenhead. Then, again, the proposed secretary is, or was, a member of the G.C.A. and the Breeders', and he informs me he bred and showed Canaries when your correspondent was in petticoats, and had no idea of slinging mud at the efforts of a real fancier who is endeavouring to help those that keep birds for the love of the sport, and who declines to be muzzled. With regard, sir, to the personal remarks you have thought wise to delete, will this gentleman (so-called) be good enough to repeat them to my face? One word more. I have received applications from members who are seceding from the G.C.A. and the Breeders', together with a good number of novice fanciers who are in no society, who are guaranteed a fair and square hearing, and the rules will be carried out without any favour. I am afraid, sir, there will be no room for your correspondent in this society to advertise himself. I would advise him never to stab a man in the back—say what you have to say to his face, and don't shield yourself behind another man's name.

R. B. Wright.

The Breeding of Cutthroats in Captivity.

Sir,—After reading Mrs. Lloyd's letter re "Pair of Cutthroats and their Domestic Troubles," I feel I must write and give my own personal experience in breeding the above birds, which I have managed with as much ease as my Yorkshire breeding. First of all, you require a cage of the box pattern, size 24ins. by 20ins., by 11ins. deep, with the usual sand tray, and with seed and water vessels inside. Having our cage, let us cut a hole in the right hand side of same, measuring three inches wide and four inches high. The bottom of this hole should be about ten inches from the bottom of the cage. Now take a box about seven inches square, and securely fasten over the hole; this acts as their roosting and nesting quarters. The best method of fastening same, I find, is with small brass corner brackets; they can be screwed up firmly. When fixed, make a wire top for the nesting box; same can be made very neatly out of punch bar and wire. Make this to open and shut, as you would a lid. This will act for two purposes—for giving plenty of ventilation and light, also as a means of peeping within to see if all is well. Having completed our cage, we must purchase our birds, which can be done at any bird shop for about 3s. per pair. I obtained mine at the beginning of March, 1911. I placed them in the cage I had already made, which I kept hung up in the kitchen day and night, and, much to my delight, on April 23 I discovered an egg in the nest (which, by the way, was an ordinary penny nest bag, well pulled to pieces). All went well, and four eggs were laid, both cock and hen sitting upon same alternately. At the end of the twelfth day I was delighted to hear that the eggs were hatching successfully. On peeping into the nest the next morning I discovered four young ones, all eggs having successfully hatched. So straightway I supplied them with egg and biscuit, the same as I give my Canaries. All went well for the first three or four days, and then, to my disgust, the parents started to throw out the youngsters. Strangely enough, they threw out one each morning until all four were dead. I at once thought my method of feeding was at fault. Nothing venture, nothing gain, however. I cleared out the nest and supplied the birds with another nest bag. I did not have to wait long, for on May 26 I discovered the hen had started to lay again. This time again all went well, six eggs being laid; and all hatched successfully at the end of the incubation period. Everything went smoothly until the fourth day, when I discovered they were at their old tricks, one youngster having been thrown out. So I thought I would endeavour to give them a change of food. This I did by crushing equal parts of canary and white millet into a powder; this I mixed with egg and biscuit in the proportion of one hard boiled egg, about six biscuits (butter fingers), and two small teaspoonsful of my crushed seed. This I well rubbed together and supplied them with as often as required, with the usual mixture of canary and millet. Green food I found they would not look at. Well, the following morning I found one more youngster out of the nest, thus leaving four, which I am pleased to say were reared and are to-day "four of the best," all getting nice and steady. When these four were about six weeks old the old pair went to nest again, and another six eggs were laid. All hatched, and the young were successfully reared, making my total of youngsters to-day ten in number, of which six are cocks and four hens. I might mention here that the hen laid four more eggs, which I at once removed, thinking she had earned a rest and being satisfied with the ten youngsters. But these eggs I placed under one of my Yorkshire hens for experiment, to see if she would rear them, but I was doomed to disappointment. They all hatched out successfully, and the hen kept them alive four days, and then gave up the lot; so I concluded that it was not much good relying upon Canaries to rear Cutthroats. I shall be delighted to show my ten youngsters to anyone by appointment at 32, Little Ealing Lane, South Ealing, London; or to answer any question, providing a stamped envelope is enclosed.

Railway Strike Brings Disaster to Hallam and Ecclesall Show.

Sir,—Respecting our show held on August 17 last, owing to the strike of railway employees and the general unrest in the country at the time that the entries should have been coming in, and on the show day, the entry fees and gate money are down about £145. This leaves the society about £80 in debt. At a meeting of the committee it was decided to ask the prize-winners in the district if they will accept 75 per cent. of the prize-money they have won, and also the various tradesmen to give a substantial discount off their bills. Will exhibitors and others grant this favour in the interests of the society?

Useful Alike for Birds and Bird-keepers.

Sir,—A few days ago I was looking through your Nutshell Booklet, "The Ailments of Birds and How to Cure them," when I noticed a recipe for diarrhœa which I know is also a good one for the same complaint in ourselves. I therefore take the liberty to ask if you will kindly publish the same in Cage Birds, as I think it may prove of much value to other readers if they know the right dose to take for themselves. The mixture is, one pennyworth of each of the following:—Tincture of Capsicum, Tincture of Rhubarb, Spirit of Camphor, Essence of Peppermint, and Laudanum. The dose is for an adult, 40 drops in cold water; for a youth, half this dose; and for a child, 5 drops.

Bird Organs and Training Young Birds.

Sir,—As far as possible I endeavour to indicate the nature of correspondents' Canary queries in the replies thereto, in order to make the replies helpful to as many other readers as possible, but it is evident that the writer under the above heading last week did not quite grip the nature of the query he refers to. Perhaps it is difficult at times to do this. For his edification I have looked up the query, and find the following is a verbatim copy: "Can I buy an organ for teaching young Yorkshires to sing?" Here there was probably an impression that some distinctive kind of organ might be required, or procurable, for tutoring Yorkshires. My reply was, presumably, only wished to settle the douht as to whether an organ could he bought or not, in addition to which I added the fact that it would of necessity be the same as used for tutoring Rollers, and also that the Yorkshire was not usually the subject of such tuition. I neither definitely advised my correspondent not to purchase an organ nor encouraged him to do so, but gave him the necessary facts upon which he might decide the matter for himself. Of course, had I been called upon to give an expression of opinion as to the value of an organ in tutoring young birds, I should have done so; hut even then I might perhaps have differed somewhat from Mr. Tomlinson, who seems to be well aware that there is diversity of opinion on the point. Curiously enough, Mr. Tomlinson himself, whilst wishing to advise one definitely not to get an organ, still is careful to point out that he does not wish Roller fanciers to think he does not advocate the use of an organ.

Claude St. John.

Where are the Yorkshires at Glasgow City Show?

Sir,—I am glad to learn from Mr. MacDonald's letter that Yorkshires are at last to receive proper treatment at City of Glasgow Show. But he doesn't explain why Yorkshires or their judge were not considered worthy of mention in his previous notices. At the great English shows the "Gentleman of the Fancy" usually has "pride of place," whilst here at what professes to be one of the leading shows in Scotland his name is not deemed worthy of mention, and apparently any kind of judge is considered, by the committee, good enough to place the tickets in this section. Now, gentlemen, this kind of thing might have done years ago, when there were no Yorkshires in Scotland, but times have changed, and the committee of the leading show must keep themselves up to date. It is to be hoped that the generous offer made by a Yorkshire fancier to guarantee two extra classes will be accepted, and it remains for all breeders of this variety of Canary to turn out their birds in numbers, and so make the experiment a success, and encourage the show officials in their efforts on behalf of the good old "City of Glasgow."

A. Hendrie.

P.S.—As an efficient judge, I would suggest one of the following, viz.: Mr. McRobbie, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Penman, or Mr. Fred Bowman. These gentlemen know Yorkshires, and (what is more important) have bred and are still breeding good ones.

*Kindness Rewarded.

Among the birds in my outdoor aviary, I have a cock Chaffinch which was caught hy my brother more than a year ago, with a broken wing. One day it escaped, and our spaniel carried it round the lawn. We thought it must have been killed, but it was not much hurt. That is more than a year ago, and it is now in splendid feather, and can fly. I have, I may say, 37 birds of my own—35 foreign and two British.—Sent by Mary Boyd (aged 15), Wehbery, Bideford.

A Jackdaw Story.

A gold chain was lost in Buckingham a few days ago. A gentleman and his wife were going for a walk and lost the jewellery. On a recent morning, after a long search, what seemed to be a chain was seen hanging on a telephone wire. A ladder was obtained, and the chain secured. It is said that the chain was picked up hy a Jackdaw, which afterwards alighted on the telephone, and the wind caused the chain to become wound round the wire.—Sent by A. Clements (aged 10), 99, Dempsey Street, Stepney, E. (Taken from "The Times.")

*Tame and Playful.

My father had three young Thrushes given him out of a nest. Two died, and he hand-reared the other. We used to give it bits of sweet, jelly and apple. My dada made a platform to project out about four inches, and opened the door of its cage. When we went for walks we left the door of the cage open, and fixed up the platform. When we came home again the Thrush would he on the bars of the empty fire-grate, or else in his hath (which we put outside on the top of his cage). He used to like splashing the picture above him, and the ornaments below.—Sent by John Nicks (aged 12), 44, Teignmouth Road, Bournbrook, Birmingham.

Wild-Bird Life.

Swallows and Swifts.

Although we are still fortunate enough to get fine sunny days, the temperature at night is considerably lower now, but we hope we are a long way from really cold weather. The few migrants remaining with us are not as yet affected; they appear as perky and bright as ever, particularly in tho evening, when insect life appears to be plentiful. The Swallows, Martins, and Swifts are at present untouched hy the approach of autumn. These lively birds stay with us as long as possible, and are particularly interesting when they collect preparatory to making the southern journey. When staying later than usual, and they are caught by a specially severe night, they appear to be almost numbed with the cold, and will sit in the sun on a tiled roof until thoroughly warmed through before taking flight to search for their daily food. At this time of the year the sooty Swift is a captivating bird to watch. His size makes him conspicuous; his speed is terrific, and he spends all his time in the air, now soaring high overhead, now with a dozen companions dashing around his haunts with exultant screams and at a pace that proves beyond dispute their superiority in the air. The Swallow, the Eider Duck, and the Long-winged Peregrine Falcon are all exceptionally speedy; hut the powers of the Swift are undouhtedly much greater. No bird can pass him. His speed has been estimated at over two hundred miles an hour—a most wonderful performance, especially when we consider that the whole weight of the hird is not more than an ounce. It is only at nesting time that the Swift is for any length of time "off the wing." His home is usually in some cliff or a hole in a building. He will work his way under the eaves of a thatched cottage, where the noise of the young ones when being fed is not conducive to the peace of the inhabitants. Church towers and cathedrals are also favourite places, and the birds love to circle round them in the evening, screaming and toying with each other in sport. Like the Swallows and Martins, the Swift returns to the nesting site each year, which we may take as conclusive proof that the birds pair for life. The eggs are a pure white in colour, and generally two in number.

PORTOBELLO C.B.S.

Meeting held September 12, Mr. Mattbew in chair. Classification gone into. Members reported it had been a bad season for them, and as they were of opinion the Y.B. classes would not fill, it was agreed to add four extra classes for old birds, and four field-moulted classes for British.—J. Bell, Sec.

SHETTLESTON AND DIST C.B.S.

Annual meeting held September 9. There was a good turn-out of members, Mr. McFarlane in chair. Following gentlemen elected: Judges for show on December 9: Messrs. J. Renwick and J. Ward. Classes were divided into three sections. Agreed, to have cups and medals for each section, cups to be won three times before becoming winner's property, not necessarily in succession; a handsome medal to be given with each cup. There is a large increase in the membership. Agreed, to hold next meeting in Mr. Johnston's Hall, Old Edinburgh Road, October 14. A hearty invitation is given to fanciers residing in Shettleston to join. This will be the closing date for enrolment. Hand-washing exhibition will take place at meeting.—A Berry, Sec., 36, Bulgair-terrace, Shettleston.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Special meeting held Crown Hotel, Hill Street, September 20th. Mr. G. E. Millett (vice-chairman) presided. Mr. de Maillet mentioned that at their August meeting the members wished to have two unflighted Yorkshire classes, but upon Mr. Wells (chairman of the M.C.Y.C.C.) pointing out that M.C.Y.C.C. classification must be adhered to if held under patronage, the meeting accepted their classification. Mr. Wells had since telephoned to say he was in error as the M.C.Y.C.C. classification was a minimum and could be added to if desired. Mr. Broadhurst thereupon proposed that an additional unflighted class be added, and this was unanimously carried. One class was also added for old Border Fancies, and one for unflighted. The Chairman called for donations for special prize fund, the result totalling nearly £4, which was equally divided between open and members' competition, the latter having to compete in open classes, none being reserved for members only. Show bills and admission tickets were handed round for disposal, and several members volunteered their services as show stewards, Mr. J. H. Jones again undertook the night duties. A discussion took place regarding the old trouble between this Society and two members over last year's show; it was the unanimous wish that both parties attend next meeting, and, in the interests of the Fancy, and this Society in particular, amicably settle the matter. The usual meeting will be held October 4th, but as our neighbours (the South Birmingham O.S.) have a competition on October 11th, members are requested to send show entries per post, or they may hand same to Mr. Mole, or his deputy, at the S.B.O.S. meeting.—J. H. de Maillet, for present Secretary.

The Shows.

NOTE.—We cannot possibly undertake the writing out of lists of awards from the catalogues of shows. A fully written report must be sent us. —EDITOR.

MARKET DRAYTON (Salop).

Held in connection with the Agricultural Show, September 21. This is the first occasion that cage birds have been included at this fixture; they were restricted to the society's radius of 13 miles. Judging from the immense numbers of people who gathered about the birds, there can be no question as to their attraction. The tent in which they were staged was packed with people the whole afternoon. Mr. P. Victor Williams staged a grand team, and captured all the leading honours, his birds standing clear away from most of the others. We were informed that this gentleman, in order to encourage other local exhibitors, very generously decided not to take the prizes, but allowed them to drop to the next exhibitors placed in order of merit—a very laudable action, which, no doubt, would be highly appreciated by those exhibitors who were fortunate enough to be well placed. Mr. H. Podmore, the hon. sec., and his attentive stewards, had everything in good order, the birds being nicely staged at a convenient height. Mr. Arthur C. Brotherhood judged.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY.

Annual show, under the auspices of this society and the presidentship of Robt. Wright, Esq. (Greenock) held in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, 23rd September. It was a great success. The dull weather suited the young birds, being better than the hot sunshine. Entries numbered 250, and the quality was excellent. Never perhaps were a better class of birds brought together. The cup was awarded to Mr. W. McClure (Mount Florida), who won with a neat buff piebald cock. The cup and medal winner was claimed by a well-known Eastern fancier at catalogue price. The best of opposite sex went to Mr. W. Montgomery's buff hen. The judges were Messrs. D. Holden (Muirkirk) J. Keen (Edinburgh), D. Kennedy (Paisley), and A. Nisbet (Galston). Once again the secretarial duties were in the hands of Mr. Thomas Smith, to whose assiduous endeavours the success of the venture was chiefly due; he is a worker, and no doubt about it.

CATERHAM.

Annual show of the Caterham F.C. held September 20th and 21st, Drill Hall. The date was much too early to ensure success. The indifferent, and in many cases disastrous, breeding season has left a great number of fanciers solely dependent upon their old stock for show birds, and these are not by any means ready yet. That well known fancier, Mr. A. J. Kilby, remarked, "It has been a cruel season; I never had such a one." Many classes had to be cancelled. The quality of the birds was good. Mr. H. Fabian Russell, the hon. secretary, is to be congratulated on the capital arrangements Mr. Kilby, sen., who for so many years successfully piloted the society, and whose spell of ill-health, now happily terminated, compelled him to relinquish the secretaryship, made an efficient steward in the cage bird department. Special for best Norwich was won by Mr. A. J. Kilby with a rattling fine clear buff, and the same exhibitor annexed the local special with a variegated of the same variety. Special for best Yorkshire was won by Mr. J. A. Taylor with a fine upstanding yellow, and a lovely Whitethroat shown in splendid plumage by Mr. Jont, was awarded the British bird special. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

NOR. BUFF (4): 1, withheld; 2, sp, A. J. Kilby, bonny buff, grand body and head, rich quality; 3, H. E. Taylor, another buff, rare feather; res, Silk, full of quality, not quite so good in head and neck; 808, absent. BUFF UNFLIG. (6): 1, Davis, full of quality and col., very forward, nice body, a trifle stilty; 3, Little, sweet hen, when fully fined will be very nice; r, Lewin, variegated, nice tone of feather; vhc, H. E. Taylor; hc, Mrs. Procter. YORKS., YELL. (9): 1, spl, r, vhc, Britton, leader straight, well filled in, nice neck, grand feather; res, another smart bird of good quality; 2, Frisby, not quite so well braced up, good length and col., smart one when ready; 3, J. A. Taylor, stylish, fine quality, good col.; c, Hutton. BUFF (6): 1, J. A. Taylor, ticked on wing, straight as a pencil, full of fire, needs time; 3, Frisby, cl., well up on leg; r, Britton, very pretty; vhc, Hutton; hc, Adams; c, Silk. HEN (5): 2, Hutton, leader very straight and well up on leg, stylish, rare feathered hen; 3, J. A. Taylor, another buff, very full of "go" and rare feather; r, Hutton, sweetly pretty yell., full of quality; vhc, H. E. Taylor; hc, Silk. BRIT. A.O.S. (7): 1, spl, 3, Jont, leader tip-top Whitethroat; 3rd, lovely Wheatear, in grand feather, very rich col., and steady; r, Cadman Bros., grand Chaffinch, very nice; vhc, Miss Hopwood; hc, Davis.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects. Harmless to everything.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

List of Patrons still Growing. The Various Societies sending batches of Members. The Intentions of the Opposition. What we need to Combat.

Notes by the Secretary.

I have pleasure in announcing that since our last issue CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has received the support, as patrons, of

The Hon. Mary Hawke, Tadcaster.
A. Ezra, Esq., Mount Street, Grosvenor Square, W.

Societies Coming Along.

Now that the show season is opening, the membership roll of THE LEAGUE is increasing by leaps and bounds. The Hon. Secs. of several societies have sent in batches of names with a note that there will be more to follow. This is as it should be, for if the out-and-out opponents of bird-keeping get their way, there will of course be no bird shows, and no need for any Cage-bird Societies. Our list of Local Hon. Secs. now numbers about seventy, but there are more than five hundred Societies in Great Britain, and they will all be affected alike if bird-keeping is stopped.

Bear this Always in Mind.

Our opponents are good enough to put their policy in a single sentence. This was quoted last week by Mr. Colville, and must not be forgotten: "It will be a good day for England when the caging of birds is made entirely illegal." This is their openly avowed object, and secretaries of societies should point out to their members that this means all birds; not British birds, not foreign birds, not Canaries, but all birds. They say that the keeping of any kind of bird is "an acted blasphemy," and the luridness of this language only expresses the fervour of their opposition to our hobby. They mean to stop bird-keeping; we mean that they shall not stop it, and the secretaries of societies can do more than any to increase the strength of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I shall be very pleased to send a number of our "Aims and Objects" leaflets to all applicants, and a reprint of the reply which was published in CAGE BIRDS in controvertion of the misstatements made in the pamphlet issued by the Humanitarian League.

Another Good Idea.

Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Liverpool, writes that besides having a number of "The Aims and Objects" of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE on his counter, he has hung in his shop a tablet on which is printed "Are you a Member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE? If not, join at once."

Memberships as Special Prizes.

Referring to my note of last week that it had occurred simultaneously to two members of the LEAGUE to offer special prizes, consisting of a year's membership and a Rolled Gold Badge, Mr. Hinckley writes that the idea was his own, and that Mr. Wickham had adopted it after a conversation with himself on the subject. Mr. Hinckley tersely says that a good lead is generally followed, and I hope that many other members will copy the example of Mr. Wickham in following Mr. Hinckley's very original idea.

The continuation (second instalment) of the contribution by Mr. J. R. Colville, entitled "Should Birds be kept in Cages?" will appear in our next issue.—Editor.

Additions to List of Hon. Secs.

Mr. J. H. Mitchell, in accepting the post on Hon. Secretary for Codnor Park, Riddings, Jacksdale, and Eastwood, writes, "I hope before another month has passed you will have the pleasure of entering us all (the members of Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S.) as members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE." Mr. Mitchell's address is South Street, Greenhill Lane, near Alfreton.

Another addition to the list is Mr. J. Oldham, Hon. Secretary of Middleton C.B.S., whose address is 207, Grimshaw Lane, Middleton Junction, Manchester. In accepting the post Mr. Oldham sends along as members one-half of the total roll of his society. A fine beginning, indeed.

OUR NEW SEALS.

These pretty seals are giving great satisfaction, and orders are coming in by every post. They are printed in gold and colours in exact facsimile of our Badges, and are an ornament to envelopes, notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc. All members should use them; the price is eightpence per hundred, post free. Smaller quantities at the hundred rate, but with one penny extra for postage.

OUR FREE BOOKLETS.

I have still some of each of the sixpenny pamphlets on British Bird Culture and on Canary and Hybrid Culture, and, as long as they last, one of either will be sent gratis to all new members applying for a copy at the time of joining. Those of the old members who have not yet had a copy may receive one of those reserved for them on sending a penny stamp for postage. Only one copy of either book can be sent free either to new members or old, and when the stock in hand is exhausted I may not be able to get a fresh supply, so that those who would make sure of getting one of these useful pamphlets should send on their application with their membership fee without delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AND BADGES.

The subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is one shilling annually, and the badges sixpence or one shilling. The sixpenny badges are in three forms: (1) a button for coat lapel, (2) a pendant for watch chain, (3) a brooch for lapel, cycling cap, or for lady's wear. The badges at one shilling each are mounted in 9-carat rolled-gold, and are in two forms only: (1) a pendant for watch chain, (2) a brooch for a lady or for cycling cap or coat lapel. Members should distinctly state which form they prefer.

JUNIOR BRANCH.

The annual subscription to the JUNIOR BRANCH, for members under fourteen years of age at the date of joining, is sixpence. Price of badges as above.

PATRONS.

Ladies or gentlemen who are in sympathy with the objects of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE may give practical expression to that sympathy by becoming PATRONS of the LEAGUE and either making a lump sum donation to its funds or subscribing an annual amount of a guinea or upwards. One-half of such donation or subscription may be allotted to any individual object of the LEAGUE.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The qualification for Vice-Presidentship is an annual subscription of not less than half a guinea, and one-half of this subscription may be allotted to either the Literature Fund, the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be given at any show nominated by the subscriber. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the LEAGUE, to advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

Secretary; CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Under the White Rose.

YORKSHIRE Canary Club Year Book is now in the hands of the members. On running casually through its pages, one is astonished at the great progress made. The membership totals about 200, and in the balance sheet it is very gratifying to note that last year 188 fully-paid up members are accounted for. Truly, such results reflect great credit on the secretary. The balance sheet is the best for years, and shows a good balance in hand—nearly £5, and this after giving over £17 in cash specials during last season. The committee never try to get a big balance in hand; they always give all that is possible away in prizes, and the coming season is no exception. I would advise the junior novices to look up what is given for them; it ought to fetch them in in shoals.

THE full committee of the Cinderella Club Show met last week to fix up the classification and judges for this great event, and after some discussion eighty odd classes were arranged and the judges allocated—a stiff bit of work that took up a good deal of time. Other items were gone through in connection with the show work, and several knotty points settled; and the committee are looking forward to a romping good show and the handing over of a nice balance to the Cinderella Club Fund.

A FEW weeks ago the following incident occurred in the Bingley district. Whilst a couple of Bingley fanciers were out on the moor-edge trying to catch winners for the Linnet section, the call cage, containing the bird, had been put out on the top of the wall, and a stone weighing some eight pounds on top of it. After some little time there was a sudden swoop and swish of wings by a Hawk, and the bird and cage were carried a distance on the moor edge and then dropped. The Linnet suffered a little from fright, but otherwise was no worse for the experience.

WAKEFIELD are booming the British bird section of their society. I hear that at their next members' show they are going to have five open classes with a view to encouraging the section in the neighbourhood; and as there are several fanciers in the district the show on October 28 will be of more than usual interest. Let us hope they find a few new members.

A GOOD BIRD : AND A GOOD FANCIER.

The Hawfinch (Great Britain's largest seed-eating bird) depicted here is that fine specimen so successfully shown last season by Miss M. Bousfield, of Bournemouth. Inset is a photograph of Mr. A. F. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. 3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

who has not yet given me a trial? He is the man I particularly want to read this advt., as once I get a person's custom I know I can retain it, if sterling value, low prices, and honest dealing mean anything. My conditions of sale are these: Everything is sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of "Cage Birds," on the distinct understanding that unless every satisfaction is given birds have only to be returned and every penny of your money is promptly and cheerfully refunded. In a nutshell it means this: you either get exactly what you want or you get all your money back. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived safe, and am very well pleased. I also thank you for your straightforwardness to me, and for the way you packed the bird. Yours, J. Williams." "Hanworth-road, Hounslow, Sept. 6. Sir,—Birds (24 Goldfinches) received all right, and was very well satisfied, as I found sex quite right. I shall want more later. Yours, J. Bates." "Cumbrae, Seymour-st., Bishop Auckland, Sept. 11. Sir,—Please send following birds. I saw one of your Linnets in Leeds the other day, and told the owner he would take a lot of beating. Yours, W. Crowther." "10, Queen-st., Orrel, Lancs., Sept. 10. Sir,—I received the two birds a month ago and have given them a fair trial. The Chaffinch is a beauty, and Greenfinch as tame as a Christian. I could not have got a better pair if I had paid a big price for them. Yours, J. Gibson." "Police Station, Kingscavil, West Lothian, Sept. 14. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived safely and well packed. Thanks for kind attention to such a small order. Yours, E. Dann." "Soldiers' Rest, Annitsford, Northumberland, Sept. 18. Sir,—Birds (12 Linnets) arrived all healthy. I give you every credit for the way you pack your birds, with plenty of room and light. They are the finest lot of birds I ever had from any dealer, and I give you praise against all others. I have had birds from all over the country, and if I had sent to you first I should have saved pounds. Yours, Thomas Gates." Please note all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester by expert catchers employed solely by myself; none are sent out until thoroughly on hard seed, and a signed guarantee sent with every bird that they are not recently taken and do not come under the various Bird Acts, and an indemnity given by me in every case taking all risks against prosecution arising therefrom. I am only dealer in this country giving this guarantee and indemnity. I make no idle boasts, but am open to prove at any time that I sell more British birds and have a larger stock always on hand than any other two dealers in Midlands, and that I sell more Worcestershire birds than the whole lot put together (professional copyists note). Visitors are requested to call and see hundreds upon hundreds of Britishers all caged separately. Note name and address; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

ST. MARYCHURCH AND BABBACOMBE F.C.

Show held September 20, Manchester Hall. The members are to be congratulated on their fine display of cage birds. Some of the exhibits were hardly up in feather yet, and consequently bad to stand down. The winning crest is a good one. Yorkshires were a nice lot; the winner was a smart up-standing, tight-feathered buff, with lovely wings. The British, while not up to last year's lot, were very good. Most notable were the winning Bramblefinch and Thrush. The special winning yellow Norwich of Mr. S. A. Peeke was well worthy of his position of being best in show, being in lovely feather, and most level in colour, with a good head and neck. Mr. J. N. Jeffery judged and gave satisfaction.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Polite Friend.

A few weeks ago I was going on an errand for my mother when I saw a lady with a Cockatoo on a lead. When I got up to her, the bird promptly "raised his hat" to me. This, I thought, was very polite.—Sent by E. Twilley (aged 12 years), The Pines, White Hart Lane, Wood Green, London, N.

A Narrow Escape.

My father once had a Goldfinch, and he used to put it outside the birdroom window in a box cage. One windy day we went for a walk, and left it out. When we came home our first thought was the bird. Father went into the yard, and, much to his surprise, found the cage lying on the ground, face downwards, and two cats sitting by it. He picked the cage up carefully, and found his little pet quite safe and sound.—Sent by Lena Bratherton (aged 13), 1, Peet Street, Edge Hill, Liverpool.

Arbroath C.B.S. have had to abandon the idea of holding a show this year for financial reasons; the show was to be held on November 18, writes Mr. J. S. Napier, the sec.

I am resigning the secretaryship of the Stocksbridge and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. A. Jarvis, and I hope members will attend meeting on October 7 for the election of my successor.

The Guisborough and District 'Priory" Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. S. H. Lambert, the sec., are holding a table show on October 14, when Mr. T. Hill (Thornaby) will judge thirteen classes of cage birds. All birds are to be staged by 3 p.m. prompt.

Will intending exhibitors please note that Class 18 should read Green or Cinnamon, and that in Class 22 the word hen is a misprint, and the class should read Clear or Ticked Buff Cock, writes Mr. W. Whiteford, sec. of the Lochgelly Show, October 14.

If "New Reader" who wrote last week under the heading of "A Mixed Bag" would call at the Live Stock Shop, Denmark Terrace, East Hant, there is no doubt he could be supplied with the necessary information. So runs a postcard we have received, signed "Well-wisher."

In making our final appeal for support we offer a hearty welcome to all fanciers to pay our show a visit, write Messrs. King and Joiner, secretaries of the Portsmouth C.B.S. Show on October 18 and 19. We are making a reduction of 2d. on 6d. tickets purchased before the day.

Schedules of the London Federation of C.B.S. Show have been posted, writes Mr. H. W. Cook, the show secretary. Should any affiliated member not have received his, if he will advise me of same I will send him one by return of post.

Kindly allow me, writes Mr. Alex. Donnelly (Swinton) to thank all fanciers and societies who conveyed to me expressions of sympathy on the death of my wife, who passed away on September 6 last, when only 39 years of age, and leaving two children. She was respected by every person who knew her.

Mr. A. T. Bellinger informs us that the Bromley and West Kent F.A. have relieved Mr. House of all pigeon classes except two at their show on October 18, so that he may be able to concentrate his ability and time on the cage bird section, which contains forty classes. Cage bird fanciers should note this.

Mr. A. L. Priest, sec. of the Clapham Show, writes there will be someone in attendance at the hall from twelve o'clock on October 10. Will those fanciers who wish to bring their birds note that if they book to Clapham Common by electric train or to "The Plough" by tram, it is only a minute's walk to the Hall?

Owing to our not receiving many entries up to date, writes Mr. B. Clare, sec. of the Craven Arms Show on October 11, we have extended the time of closing to Monday morning's post (October 9). Anyone wanting schedule may have one by return of post on application. This is our first show, and we hope to make it a success.

Entries are coming in very slowly, and do not average one per class, writes Mr. George Lingard, sec. of the Pentre C.B.S. Rule 15 in our schedule was put in by mistake—a printer's error—it should have been abolished, as there will be no cancelling whatever. The entries are extended, and will not close until first post on October 10.

Schedules of our show on October 14 have been posted to all known fanciers, and anyone omitted may have one on receipt of postcard, or any entries received will be duly entered in their proper classes, writes Mr. Robert Whitton, the sec. of Broughty Ferry C.B.S. Class 38½ was accidentally omitted from our prize list; it reads "Green or Cinnamon Border Fancies." Even marks, I may add, compete in the unevenly marked classes.

I made a mistake in our advertisement of last week, writes Mr. F. Western, sec. of the Bradford West C.B.A. It should read 1st prize, 10s.; 2nd, 6s.; 3rd, 4s.; 4th, 2s. 6d.; and vhc, 2s. We shall be taking entries at our headquarters, "Shoulder of Mutton," Girlington, on October 10. The show management will be in reliable hands, and every care will be taken of "away exhibits," which will be sent home at 6.30 on the day of show, and prize-money paid same day as show.

Attercliffe and Dis. C.B.S. are holding a table show on October 12 for point specials, and all birds must be staged by eight o'clock prompt, writes Mr. W. Richinson, the sec. There will be two classes for Norwich, two for Yorkshires for the novices, and the same in the members' classes; British birds will be classified when entered.

The National British Bird and Mule Club has just become possessed of a handsome diploma, in colours. It is intended (though the point is not definitely settled yet) to present copies to members who have won one or other of the Club's cups, to commemorate their successes. This diploma is a highly ornate and skilful piece of work, very pleasing and artistic in its conception and colouring, and a credit to the gentleman who executed it—Mr. F. H. Burton, St. Leonards-on-Sea (a friend of one of the members of the N.B.B. and M.C. committee).

The officials of Plymouth Show (October 17 and 18) have put an exceptionally fine schedule before the Fancy, comprising 90 open classes, with very liberal prize-money (22s. per class for a 1s. 6d. entry fee), and no fewer than 72 open specials. The train service to Plymouth is one of the best, the hall is an ideal place, and the local fanciers are noted for the care they give to the birds sent for competition. We recommend our readers to apply at once (entries are due to close) to the hon. sec., Mr. T. Pope (98, Embankment Road, Plymouth) for a schedule, and to participate in the good things provided by this famous West-country show.

COLOURED PLATE FREE THIS WEEK.

Every copy of this week's issue of "Cage Birds" should contain a coloured plate, selected from our surplus stock. As these plates vary in subject, new readers have the chance, by ordering extra copies of the journal, of acquiring coloured plates of different bird subjects at a cost of only one penny each. We hope all old friends who may already be possessed of a copy of the plate they receive will do us the favour of handing it on to some acquaintance who is interested in birds, and likely to join the ranks of bird-keepers.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society are having a lecture by Richard Kearton, Esq., F.Z.S., on Saturday, Oct. 14, at 8 p.m., at the Leysian Mission Hall City Rd., E.C. (opposite Old Street Tube Station), entitled "Bioscoping Big Game in Africa"; also Birds in Norway, including Fieldfare, Redwing, Blue Throat, Brambling, Snow Bunting, and many others in their summer haunts. These films are entirely new, and will be shown for the first time, the lecturer only just having returned from a six months' tour abroad. The committee warmly invite all fanciers and friends to avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing Mr. Kearton. The admission to this lecture will be one penny. The films are of the latest non-flammable type.

The importance of good seed in relation to the health of one's birds is now widely understood—every bird-keeper recognises that if he would avoid digestive troubles, disorders of the throat and bowels, the deadly ptomaine poisoning, etc., amongst his birds, he must be careful in choosing his seeds, and take every precaution to ensure their being sound, well ripened, and thoroughly clean. In achieving this, he can be greatly helped by his seed merchant if the latter be a man who knows his business and specialises in seeds and foods intended for the use of bird-keepers. Such a man is Mr. W. A. Rudd, of 108, Middlesex Street, London, E.C., whose advertisement appears on page 211 of this week's issue. Mr. Rudd claims that the seeds of his firm are the finest that money can buy, and that they are selected with expert knowledge of the wants of all sections of bird-keepers. He is prepared to prove his words by submitting samples of any kind of seed to readers who desire them and will write him stating their wants. Messrs. Rudd and Co.'s stock of specialities is a very varied one, and their method of business very advantageous to buyers.

Norwich Plainhead Club.

There will be a committee meeting of the Norwich Plainhead Club on Saturday next at Burnley Show at three o'clock. Will as many as possible kindly attend?—Jno. Hopkins, hon. secretary.

Something Like Pluck.

I have just fought through two seasons of septic fever, losing over £50 (fifty pounds) worth of birds, writes a well-known fancier of Otley, but I stuck to it, and am pleased to tell you that I have bred over 100 Yorkshires this season.

Changes of Addresses.

The attention of secretaries and others is directed to the following changes of addresses:—Mr. J. Johnson (sec., Lancaster Primrose C.B.A.), from Perth Street to 64, Aberdeen Road, Lancaster; Mr. E. THE HAWFINCH. Our largest British Seed-eater.

FEMALE. MALE.

Is the Yorkshire Canary on the Down Grade?

By "LONGFELLOW."

Who is to Blame?

Our contributor, one of the best-known of present-day exhibitors, holds that some of the chief characteristics of the Yorkshire are being sacrificed.

It is in all seriousness that I pen these notes with a view to stemming, if possible, the current of events operating to the detriment of the Yorkshire Canary. It will be quite obvious to those who are interested in this beautiful variety, and who have attended the shows during the last two decades, that the Yorkshire has been gradually deteriorating in some of its chief characteristics.

I think no one will gainsay the fact that the winning Yorkshires of to-day do not possess the beautiful length of side boasted by birds of former years. Now this is a state of things that is much to be deplored in view of the fact that such strenuous efforts were made many years ago to secure this most valuable and essential property; and, mind you, the efforts were not made in vain. The desired length was obtained, and birds have been staged—and good ones, too—possessing as much length as any true enthusiast of a Yorkshire could desire.

I take it that a Yorkshire Canary is essentially a bird of position, length, type, and quality, and our utmost endeavour should be to keep these four properties up to the high-water mark standard. Unfortunately, this system has not been carried out as it should be; hence the great falling off in what I may term the most charming features a bird of this variety should possess.

I may mention that Mr. Robson pointed out in one of his lectures a short time ago that the Yorkshire Canary was not now possessed of that beautiful length of flights and tail which the birds of years ago could boast; and at the last Crystal Palace Show CAGE BIRDS reporter, in his remarks on the Yellow-ticked class, referred to the winners as being of small size.

How Has it Come About?

The question may arise as to how this state of things has come about, and why are we drifting far below the recognised standard? To my mind, the answer is quite clear, and I have no hesitation in saying that our judges are mainly at fault in this matter, and why? Simply because they have placed quality of feather before every other consideration, and have therefore dragged down the once beautiful Yorkshire almost to the level of the Border Fancy in their endeavour to make this bird into a one-property variety of quality. Yes, all quality.

I am well aware that a certain amount of pressure has been brought to bear on our judges; still, I think that if they had exercised that force of character with which Englishmen are generally credited, things need not have drifted to such a pass. Of what use is a standard for any variety if our judges will not try to select for the various honours birds nearest approaching to same? Some of our leading judges seem to forget the far-reaching effects that their awards have on the various varieties adjudicated upon.

As an illustration of the effect of awards, I may mention the name of Mr. Joseph Boxson, the popular judge of Yorkshire Canaries, whose awards at the Crystal Palace particularly did more to keep up the standard length of this variety than all other factors with which I am acquainted. It was no use staging a Border Fancy type of Yorkshire if one desired to win. Mr. B. favoured a "good long un." And rightly so, say I. So long as he had the handling of them we had birds deserving the name of Yorkshires, and breeders then had some material of value to operate with in the breeding room—birds of both size, type, and quality. What have we to-day? A bird of 6¾ inches is an exception in any breeding room. Then, how is the stamp and type to be produced that ought to grace the show bench? I think if my fellow fanciers will only put on their studying caps for a little while, they will see that we need to put our houses in order if we desire to maintain the glory and prestige of the Yorkshire Canary.

I hold that we should endeavour to produce Yorkshires of the highest possible standard that the mind can conceive. The properties that are the most difficult to obtain, and which are the most beautiful when produced, it should be our only end and aim to secure.

Now, with regard to quality of feather—the fad that has ruled some of our present-day judges, and which is carrying in its train the ruination of the Yorkshire Canary. If this property—and one must frankly admit that it is an essential and valuable one—when taken in conjunction with the other good qualities, was very hard to produce, there would have been some excuse for the course pursued: but the fact is fine quality of feather is one of the easiest things in the world to get if one will only sacrifice size, Surely there is no great honour in producing a winner under existing circumstances.

We will now reverse the order of things, and instead of a 6¼in. or a 6½in. bird, you desire to produce one 6¾in. or over. In breeding a bird of this description with all the four properties combined—namely, position, length, type, and quality—you have a task set you that it is worth your best endeavours to accomplish, and if the issue is successful there is something of value, and a bird to feel proud of, for not only have you produced an exhibition bird, but the value from a breeder's point of view cannot be overestimated.

A Tilt at the Judges.

If our judges would only take into consideration the fact that we must have birds with some size in them in order to produce exhibition birds, they would, I think, alter their mode of awarding leading honours to birds far below the Yorkshire Union standard.

If the system now in vogue be persisted in, we shall in a few years' time have birds little larger than Border Fancies, and they will be so near alike in type and quality that they will be like peas in a pod, and a bird will be standing first one day, and at the next show perhaps cardless, as there will be no property that excels another to decide by, except (as is the case at the present day) when a bird has a distinguishing mark, in which case it can be easily spotted for leading honours, and some judges are apt to be led by the decisions of others, whether rightly or wrongly.

Now this is a state of things that ought not to obtain, as there should in every instance be a point or quality in which one bird excels over another to entitle it to take a leading position over its rival, and to which a judge can readily refer should the unsuccessful exhibitor desire an explanation. To my mind, when birds come so near in all-round properties—which they are bound to do on very many occasions—there is nothing more satisfactory than a little extra length to decide by. This as a rule is a decision that exhibitors take with a good grace when they can see plainly where they are beaten.

I can assure my fellow fanciers that my remarks are given with the highest possible motives, and in the interests and welfare of the Yorkshire Canary, which I hope to see exhibited in full possession of all the properties for which it was famed in days gone by.

A Point for the Y.C.C.

It would be interesting to know what object the fanciers of the Yorkshire Canary had in instituting "The Yorkshire Canary Club." I take it that they were desirous to make this variety more popular by extending the classification, and also by protecting the interests of Yorkshire fanciers. The above are, so far as I can learn, the primary objects of this august body. When we consider that the Y.C.C. was founded in 1894, and the objects of the club are yet of such a meagre nature, it makes one wonder at the apathy displayed by the powers that be in connection with "The Yorkshire Canary Club." If I may be allowed to suggest it, I would say that there is one object in particular that could be tacked on to the above with the greatest advantage, namely, "and to protect and advance the properties of 'the Yorkshire Canary' to the highest state of perfection." I have no hesitation in saying that if this had been included in the objects of the Y.C.C. and carried out in a true fancier's spirit, there would have been a far better state of things existing to-day.

The Y.C.C. has undoubtedly done much to popularise the Yorkshire, and through its influence the classification has been largely extended, and fanciers have benefited thereby. The trophies and special prizes disbursed by the club have been considerable, and these have undoubtedly been the means of considerably enhancing the value of the Yorkshire Canary, for which every credit is due to the Y.C.C. Still, the fact remains that a point of vital importance has been overlooked; whether inadvertently or not, I am not prepared to say; yet I am firmly convinced that it would be good policy on the part of the Y.C.C. to amend matters, although it be at the eleventh hour.

I may remark that this is a matter deserving the serious consideration of the Executive Committees of the Y.C.C., and any action taken by them for the protection and advancement of the bird in question would be readily followed by the various offshoots of the parent body.

We should then see taking leading honours Yorkshires that were worthy of the name; in fact, birds possessing all the true attributes of the breed in their highest form—birds which could then most appropriately be described as "the birds of grace and beauty"—which it would be quite a misnomer to apply to many of the miniature Yorkshires that have taken leading honours during the past decade or so. What every true and enthusiastic fancier of the Yorkshire desires is to see a bird possessing position, length, type, and quality taking leading honours, and not a mere miniature usurping the place of what may aptly be termed "the gentleman of the whole Canary family."

PREPARING FOR THE FRAY.

THE FINISHING TOUCHES.

The Gardener and the Birds.

The following humorous account of a gardener's "difficulties" in dealing with birds was published in the "Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette."

"If you please, sir," said Mary Jane, bursting into the room in the midst of the usual whirlwind that always seems to accompany her movements, "the gardener would wish to see you."

I was in the middle of lunch, but the summons seemed important, and delay might be dangerous. So I abandoned my half-eaten chop to the coldness of its fate, and went at once. Anderson, the gardener, was waiting at the back door, scratching his head with one hand, his face almost as long as the handle of the rake he held in the other. Evidently it was something serious.

Before I could speak he began to unburden his soul. "It's them bloomin' Bullfinches again," he explained; "they've nigh cleared the buds from the gooseberries while I was away tidyin' up the drive."

The Culprits.

"Are you sure it is the Bullfinches?" I interposed, for my own private opinion is that the Bullfinch, being perhaps the most conspicuous of all birds that haunt the garden, is the scapegoat for the rest—the Sparrows and Greenfinches in particular—among the bud-destroying birds.

Yes; Anderson was quite sure it was the Bullfinches, because he had just seen one fly across the lawn. "Go back and finish the drive," I said; "I will look into the matter." Anderson departed without another word. I could see that he was not in the best of humour, and I had some sympathy for him, though I have also a sympathy for birds. But, plainly, something would have to be done. Three times already had Anderson spoken to me concerning the depredations of the birds in the garden, and on the last occasion he had hinted pretty broadly that the time had almost come when I must make a choice betwen the robbers on the one hand and himself on the other. A one-acre garden, he had explained, was hardly large enough to contain both.

Now it so happened that I had lately picked up at a sale an old book on gardening, and to its well-thumbed pages I turned in my predicament for counsel and advice. Halfway through the volume I waded—it had no index—before I found anything at all likely to help me, and then in a footnote that might well have escaped my notice, I happened upon the very information I sought. Here is the passage: "To Protect Buds from Verminous Birds.—Take lamp-oil, ½ pint; chips of quassia or bitter bark, a handful; quicklime, two handfuls; skim milk, a quart; mix well in a bucket, and boil together. When cold, strain, and apply with a squirt." I copied out the recipe, substituting "paraffin" for "lamp-oil," and gave it to Anderson. He read it slowly, and went away to obtain the ingredients. I thought I saw a suspicion of sarcasm hovering around his bearded lips. But I could forgive him that. Presently the triumph would be mine, for of a surety no Bullfinch would tackle buds treated with such an unpleasant-tasting concoction as that.

A Misunderstanding.

Two days later—I had been away from home—I met Anderson again at the back-door. He appeared to be in the last stages of exhaustion, and his person was spattered with a creamy yellow mixture from head to foot. The syringe he held in his hand dripped copiously from every one of its joints and perforations with the same evil-smelling and disgusting liquid. (If you have ever used a faulty syringe, you will understand.) Anderson eyed me wildly. Then he proceeded to explain that he had come to give notice. I felt there must be something wrong—a misunderstanding somewhere, but he was too excited to speak, so with reluctance I accepted his notice and went indoors to try and think it out.

The next day, when he was in calmer mood, I met Anderson again, and then I learned that for the whole of the previous morning he had been endeavouring to apply the mixture to the birds instead of to the buds! "You can't git near 'em wi' the stuff," he explained; "and, beggin' yer pardon, sir, it's too bad to expect it of an old man like I." I must admit that during the course of subsequent explanation on my part I found it difficult to suppress a smile, but in the end, when I could refrain from laughing outright no longer, Anderson joined in the joke against himself.

We have made some more of the mixture, and applied it in the proper way with the greatest success. The Bullfinches and the Sparrows no longer investigate the buds for insects, and Anderson has withdrawn his notice to quit. So all is well.

Through a Birdroom Window

New Series by this popular Author.

No. 14.—My Violet Tanagers.

One of the strangest phenomena in this life of ours, I often think, is the way in which one thing leads to another. We never know when we are moulding our destiny. Some years ago, I went down to the seaside for a holiday. I had no thought of birds. I had no idea of the existence of a bird shop in the place I was going to, but the very first evening I walked abroad. I ran right into one. What could I do but enter to see what I could find? I poked about in all sorts of out-of-the-way corners; but could find nothing to suit me. There were any number of birds I didn't want, but not one that my soul longed for; and I sat down and realised, as one can sometimes, how empty life is if it holds not one's desire.

Presently I got into talk with the owner of the shop, and as we got on more friendly terms, he told me casually that he had a few birds in his own private room, if I would like to look at them. Needless to say, I eagerly accepted the invitation. Hardly had we got there than the man was called downstairs to attend to a customer, and I was left to examine the birds at my leisure. I lingered around these cages as careless as man in his first state. All at once my eyes lighted on the very thing I wanted most—a cageful of Violet Tanagers. Some people's day always lies along the primrosiest path. I certainly thought mine did. There were quite a lot of them, too, and all in good feather, and plenty of either sex.

While I was waiting I spent my time usefully and well in picking out two pairs of the very best, and by the time my friend returned I had them safely transferred to a neat travelling cage and was ready for home.

The price was very moderate; so far as I remember, fifteen shillings the couple; but I saw before me a whole vista of pleasant possibilities—happy families of Violet Tanagers, and all my rivals green with envy, hatred and all uncharitableness. In the event you will see I was wrong, but happily I did not know it at the time.

I noticed that the Tanagers were a bit sticky to the touch, and on looking at their food tin, I found they had been fed on some mixture of which honey formed a component part. The first thing therefore I did on getting them home, was to give them a good tub. This is really a very simple matter. All you need is a basin of warm water, a good badger hair shaving brush and some shaving cream. Lather the bird well all over with the brush, and then rinse him thoroughly in two or three changes of water. Then put him into a dry travelling cage before a moderate fire, and in half an hour Richard will be himself again. The moment my Tanagers were dry I gave them a nice ripe banana, and by the way they went at it, I knew there was no fear of a chill.

The beauty of buying Violet Tanagers is this: You can't possibly be taken in as to the sex. They are like two distinct varieties. The cock is a beautiful blue black in colour with a little yellow poll and canary waistcoat, while the hen is a little plain olive-green bird. The only thing they are alike in is shape. It is a great comfort to know at once that you have a true pair. Sometimes I have stood for hours trying to determine the sex of some species; and then I have been wrong; and a whole season has been thrown away, to say nothing of the injury to my temper.

It was late August or early September when I made my purchase, so that I knew I must run no risks so late in the year. I therefore turned them into my large indoor birdroom, and there they passed the winter happy and contented enough. There is no difficulty in feeding Tanagers, if only you can provide them with abundance of ripe fruit. Of course, in late autumn there is no cause for alarm so long as pears are in season. I go to Leeds market and buy a lot of "sleepy" pears at a nominal figure; sometimes I get them given; though I carefully explain that I am not going to eat them personally. In order to take away the puzzled expression from the vendor's face, I thoughtfully tell him that I am a mild sort of lunatic that keeps foreign birds, and that these require ripe fruit. He looks greatly interested, and tells me he has a Canary bird at home, and we are friends for all time; and practically for the rest of the season he will save me his half "sleepy" pears, instead of throwing them away.

Pears, however, do not last long, and then something else must be sought for. Of course, bananas are the great stand-by, but I remember one year there was quite a banana famine, and I was at my wits' end to know what to do. One week I could not buy one for love or money. What was to be done? All of a sudden something inside me whispered, "try tinned pears." No sooner said than done. I went to the store-room and silently annexed a tin. I knew it would not be missed for a few days, and sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. I laid two half-pears before the Tanagers, and by the way they went for them I knew I need never more fear a banana shortage. Still, supposing these pears had been refused! But what is the good of imagining troubles that never come?

Of course, besides fruit these birds require a soft mixture, but without fruit they will soon sicken and die. All Tanagers are very fond of oranges, and they also love honey; but it makes them so sticky unless given very carefully. I found the best way was to give it in very narrow necked little jars, such as you buy at bird shops in German Canary cages. Hang one of these high up on the wires, and the Tanagers will, like Sairey Gamp, help themselves when so disposed, and be all the better for it. If you see them getting a bit sticky give them a bath, and it will soon put things right.

MORPETH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 30, Mr. H. Seely presiding over a good attendance. Final show arrangements were made, and everything is now in A1 order. All we need now to make the event a huge success is a bumping entry. We shall endeavour to pay all prize money on the afternoon of show. Will successful exhibitors apply at secretary's stall for same?

LOCHORE & GLENCRAIG C.B.S.

Meeting held McMenemy's Hall, Sept. 30. Mr. R. Johnstone in chair, in place of Mr. Donaldson, resigned. Secretary read letter from West Fife C.B.L. re specials, but it was left on table till after next meeting of the League, Oct. 7. As we hadn't all our specials and moneys in, we could not place same; so we postponed this business until next meeting, which is at Mr. R. Johnstone's room, Oct. 12, 6, when I should like to see a full turnout. Mr. T. W. Peel was elected treasurer in place of Mr. J. Rodger, who has gone to Broxburn.—D. Grant, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held September 28, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in chair. Following new members elected: Messrs. Davidson and Humphreys (Liverpool), Allsopp (Cardiff), Gentleman (Avonbridge), and Morement (Bradford). The assist. secretary tendered his resignation owing to pressure of business; same was duly accepted. Season's specials allotted as follows: Club gold medals to runners-up in each section, as last year, and 10s. for third most points in each section. There are two cups to provide, by subscriptions—one for Borders, and the other to cover Yorks., and Norwich novice sections. Yorkshire and Norwich championship cups are still in competition, and it is hoped members will do their best to make the competition keener this year. Subs. are well up to the average, but there are still some outstanding. The syllabus for 1911-12 was arranged on similar lines to last year. The cards, together with specials, cards, and full particulars of patronage shows will be posted about the end of this week. The season opens with the Yorkshire and Norwich at Bradford West on Oct. 14, followed by the full classification at Newcastle-on-Tyne on the 20th and 21st inst. If members will pull together, success is assured.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

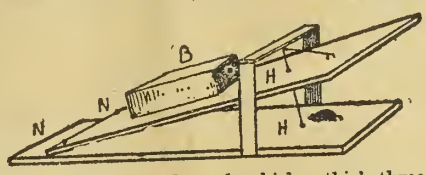
HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Meeting held Club Room, White Lion Hotel, September 30, Mr. Thos. Thompson in chair. Mr. R. W. Mole (Durham) was elected to judge members' show, Dec. 16. Decided, to leave classes until next meeting, when there is a washing exhibition and competition. Members to compete for money prize for best method and best washed bird. Washing commences 7 p.m. prompt, Oct. 14. Fanciers are invited; give us a record meeting. Admission free.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.F.B.A.

Meeting held September 20th, George Hotel. Ten members joined "Cage Birds League." Tender for printing, stationery, etc., for open show finally settled. Secretary read a paper on "The Yorkshire Canary," by Mr. T. E. Crawhall, who was afterwards thanked for his most interesting paper. It was arranged to hold a washing exhibition at next meeting, October 18th, in which two prominent members kindly agreed to take part. Proposed, seconded and carried that a gift class be added to schedule for open show, November 11th.—A. Walker, Sec.

N. COUNTIES NORWICH & C.C.



Meeting held September 20. The chairman presided. Final selection as to where our patronage was to be given was gone into, with the following result: Morpeth, Newcastle, Blaydon, Haltwhistle, Gateshead, Carlisle, and Sunderland. Members must put following initials after each entry—N.C.N.C.C., novice members to add X. We are providing following specials: Silver cup, the three highest birds to each show (champion and novices) to count for points; a special on same conditions also to be competed for. Illustrated Ideas

No. 544.
An Effective Mouse-trap.

Sent by Mr. H. Watford, Church Hill Cottage, Hollington, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

To make a simple and effective mouse-trap, get two pieces of half-inch board about 18ins. by 9ins. Place one above the other as in the illustration. NN are two nails to prevent the upper board from slipping. B is a brick to provide the necessary weight. HH are holes in the two boards through which a thick thread or thin string is passed. If the lower end of the string be tied to a match under the lower board it may then be passed through both holes in both boards, and then through a staple fastened under the bridge; then back to the upper board, and tied to a staple on the upper board. The bait is provided by rubbing the string between the two boards with butter or dripping or sweet oil. The mouse gnaws through the string, and then——.—H. Watford.

No. 545.
A Cage Door Platform.

Sent by Mr. Robert H. Wright, jun., Great Western Road, Glasgow.

Here is an illustration of a very useful alighting platform for fixing to a cage door—one that is very easily made. A piece of wood, size to suit the cage; two pieces of tin bent as per illustration, and two copper rivets are all that are required. The bottom of the cage door fits in between the two pieces of tin, and the platform itself is, of course, outside the door.—Robt. H. Wright, jun.

Schedules for Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A. open show are now out, writes Mr. A. Dickson, the sec. Anyone who has not received one by this can have one by sending me their address on a postcard.

All applicants for schedules for our show on October 28 will have same posted to them immediately they are received from the press, writes Mr. E. Woodhead, hon. sec. of the Hartlepools C.B.S.

We are holding our annual show on November 11, writes Mr. W. T. Singleton, sec. of Darwen and Dis. C.B.S. There will be nine classes open to all England, viz., two Norwich, two Yorkshire, and five British. We have engaged Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) to judge.

Owing to Mr. T. H. Harrison having an important engagement on October 12, writes Mr. W. Maxey, hon. sec. of the Stratford and East London F.S., the lecture postponed from September 28 till October 12 will not take place. As soon as a definite date for the lecture can be fixed, due notice of same will be given. All committee members are requested to attend meeting on October 12 not later than 8.30 p.m. Schedules, etc., for Y.S. Show will be given to members present.

The officials of the Clapham Show have issued a splendid list of classes for their fixture on October 11 and 12 next—sixty-three all told, with special novice classes in the Norwich and Yorkshire sections. The prize-money is good, and the special prizes extensive. Every possible arrangement is being made for the comfort of the birds and for their quick receipt and despatch. The entries finally close this Saturday (October 7), and readers should send them off at once to the hon. sec., Mr. Priest, 28, Kyrle Road, Clapham, London.

The fanciers of Mansfield are determined to rally the Cage Bird Society there, and are holding an open show on October 28th, writes Mr. S. Hawksley, the secretary. A good classification is provided, and it is hoped the show will be the means of drawing a good number of fanciers together. They are having their headquarters at the Horse and Groom Inn, whose proprietor is that well-known Crest breeder Mr. M. Norwood. I should be pleased if intending members would present themselves on October 14th, when a table show will be held.

The Burton-on-Trent C.B.S. have again been successful in obtaining the use of the Victoria Hall for their open show on October 21, writes Mr. W. Elliott, the sec. This is one of the best rooms in the Midlands, as any of the visitors of last year can verify. Our schedule is one of the best, with four money prizes. Mr. J. Robson is judge, and there are fifty specials. We have also obtained cheap bookings by the Midland Railway for thirty miles radius; this should give all fanciers a grand opportunity; they will be welcomed by our members.

"The Animal World" and Cage Birds League

In my notes published in our issue of 26th August, I gave a copy of a letter I had written to the Editor of the above magazine in reply to a leaderette which had appeared therein criticising CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and in CAGE BIRDS of 9th September I notified that the only reply I received was a letter stating that the matter would be brought to the notice of the Editor as soon as he returned to town. The October number of the "Animal World" is now to hand, and I note that no reference is made to the subject. Perhaps the Editor has not yet returned from his holiday.

More Local Hon. Secs.

This week I have the pleasure of announcing the following additions to our list of Local Hon. Secs.:—

Goldthorpe, nr. Rotherham: Mr. J. H. Hallows, 9, Gosling Gate Road.

Mr. Whitton, in accepting office for Broughty Ferry writes: "There is no doubt that our hobby is threatened by the faddist who thinks nothing of hunting the poor otter or fox in my district, but who regards it as a crime for a working man to keep a pet Skylark. He prefers to have his Larks done up and covered with a crust, and then gives a donation to the R.S.P.C.A. to alleviate his conscience."

They are printed in gold and colours in exact facsimile of our Badges, and are an ornament to envelopes, notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc. All members should use them; the price is eightpence per hundred, post free. CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Mites and Creosote.

S. P. M.—Creosote is certainly a very excellent destroyer and preventive of red mites; indeed, I don't believe any self-respecting mite would remain within several hops of its powerful and disgusting odour, which is the one thing that, in my opinion, renders its regular or free use in the birdroom impossible. I have experimented a few years with it by painting the bare wood in new cages before any size or enamel was put on, and in various ways, but though the effect is certainly excellent, it disappears very largely with the odour, and the smell takes some time to pass off sufficiently for the cages to be used. To take your questions seriatim: (1) I don't know whether the smell would really injure the birds, but unless very strong I should think not. (2) About equal parts turps and creosote mixed and well painted all over the cage—the bare wood—and allowing it to dry in before painting or enamelling, is the way I have applied it. That may not be quite the best way, but is sufficient for the purpose. (3) Cages may be painted or enamelled next, and when quite dry again may be put into use—well, as soon as you think you would like to endure the odour yourself. Personally, I would not return the birds for a week at least. (4) Candidly, I do not know anything that will "absolutely keep red mites away," much less anything better than creosote, which I imagine would rank very high if not quite at the top of such a class. Only constant attention to the details of cleanliness and preventive measures, even when mites are not apparent, will avail in keeping them at bay.

Seeds (W.H.).—No. 1 canary is an excellent sample of very good all-round quality. No. 2 canary, besides being badly ripened, is very musty and quite unfit to feed birds with. The rape is probably a mixture and an appreciable portion of it is bot acrid stuff. I should only use it in a seed mixture of which the birds were given a little occasionally by way of change.

Sex of Norwich (A Beginner).—You will find a fully detailed description of sexual distinctions, if such it may be called, in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" now sent you. The differences are wholly comparative, and so obscure as to be not easily conveyed by a written description. Only close observation, coupled with practical experience, will make one expert at recognising them, and even the most expert may be deceived sometimes. A careful study of some of the plates in "Our Canaries" would help you to grasp the difference.

Norwich Hen (G.K.).—Glad to hear the hen is much better. Continue the same general treatment for a few weeks, but use the sponge cake instead of bread and milk, and twice a week mix three drops of cod liver oil emulsion with it, or mince two fat mealworms and mix with it each time. Instead of the medicines previously advised give now six drops of syrup of rhubarb in the water for one day, and for the remainder of the week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, then miss a week, and repeat the same course another week. If she commences to moult keep her in a warm and equable place.

Bird Caping (A. M.).—See that the cage is kept free from red mites, is not exposed to the fumes of burning lights in the evening, and does not hang high up near the ceiling, nor too near the fire, which would expose bird to great fluctuations of heat and cold. Having attended to these points, feed same as advised to "S. Jacobs" for a month, and in the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and for a fortnight afterwards give 20 drops of whiskey, five each of oxymel of squills, acid ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day.

Broken Leg (A. W.).—A reply has been sent direct. In these cases full particulars of the position and extent of the injury should be given, as proper treatment must to a great extent depend upon this.

Slow Moulting (Mrs. S. F. Cooper).—Some birds naturally moult very gradually. So long as the bird appears in good health and fairly lively, I would advise you not to interfere with the course of events, as there seems no particular object in wishing the moult to end in a given time. If you are quite satisfied about the absence of draughts and fluctuations, the only reasonable thing you might do is to keep it in a fairly warm place, and in addition to the staple diet give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, linseed, millet, and black rape, twice a week, and add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid to the drinking water twice a week for a fortnight.

Striped Feathers (G. E.).—I believe these feathers are chiefly, if not solely, due to red mites, though exactly how the mischief is done I have yet to discover. Keep the cage as free as possible from these pests, touch the ends of the perches about twice a week with quassia essence, and keep bird fairly warm and in an equable temperature to encourage the rapid growth of feathers, and lightly dust the egg food twice a week for a fortnight with flowers of sulphur, and add 20 drops of chemical food to the water four times a week for a month. Do not pinch the marked feathers, but allow them to grow and mature, and when the plumage is quite mature if the marks do not disappear by the bird bathing, wash the bird before exhibiting, when they will become quite unnoticeable.

Seed Mites (G. M. O.).—The mites infesting your seed, of which you sent specimens, are the same as I have frequently called attention to in these columns. Bad storage in, I fancy, slightly damp quarters favours the pest, and so, I believe, does storing the seed in closed tins, but I cannot dogmatise on these points as I never had any become infested in my own possession, though I have bought seed which was badly infested several times. My only remedy is to "change the shop" for the time being, and throw away the seed, which would, I imagine, prove very risky to feed birds with. If you have a large quantity of this seed you might first riddle out all the dust, and then well brush and winnow the seed, but if badly infested I should throw it away.

What is a Tick? (Not Knowing).—You should read the definitions of markings given in "Our Canaries." Apart from the Yorkshire and Border, in which varieties markings are clearly defined by the standards, there is much diversity of opinion as to what constitutes a ticked bird. Generally speaking, a bird with one or two small isolated patches of colour is termed a ticked. According to some authorities no patch should be larger in area than a threepenny piece, and may be so small as to be barely visible. An imperfect "mark," or one or two dark inner secondaries, either with or without another small dark patch elsewhere, also constitutes a ticked bird. It is a pretty safe rule to look for a ticked bird to possess nearly all flight and tail feathers of a light colour.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Long Moult (S. Jacobs).—You doubtless keep the bird in a draughty position, or where it is exposed to extremes of heat and cold, or, maybe, the fumes of burning lights in the evening. Attend to these points. Keep bird in a fairly warm and equable place. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar; on two other days a pinch of maw and a morsel of green food or banana; and on two other days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts of hemp, inga, linseed, millet, and broken groats. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day. Continue this treatment for a month or six weeks. See that the cage is free from red mites.

Measuring Bird and "Slipped" Claws (No Nom-de-plume).—(1) The standard length is the length from tip of beak to end of tail. This is ascertained in several ways. By laying the bird flat on its back on a rule starting with the tip of its beak at zero and measuring off length of beak and forehead as the bird is laid down flat; by laying a tape on a flat surface and laying bird on this with tip of tail at zero and then raising the free end of tape over crown to tip of beak; and by a measuring machine. In all cases avoid neck stretching and keep bird as near its natural length as possible. Part VIII. of "Our Canaries" has a plate showing how to measure, and Part XV illustrations of measuring machines; (2) You should have said which claws—probably "toes" are meant—are "slipped," and there again "Our Canaries" is what you need. Part VI. gives illustrations and particulars how to treat various forms of foot deformities. Otherwise, please write again and send me the necessary particulars with a rough sketch of toes.

Heat of Room (A. Fleet).—A room that never gets below 45 degrees in the winter is not really a cold room, as this temperature is about the correct average for a heated room during the winter months, so that it is evident your birds can scarcely be quite accustomed to a cold room, and therefore as your present room seems likely to be very cold and also very susceptible to external changes, I think you would be well advised to provide some means of controlling the variations, and also prevent the temperature getting too low until all the birds are quite through the moult. The best means of doing this depends upon the size, position, and general character of the building, and on all these points you are silent. If the room is of moderate size, a small portable hot-water coil heated with an atmospheric burner would probably supply all the heat you require, as 45 degrees will be quite sufficient for the winter months in any case, and whilst the birds are in moult 55 to 60 will suffice.

Swollen Feet (C. Tyrrell).—First see that the cage floor and perches are kept as clean as possible. Dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in a teasaucerful of hot water, and when lukewarm catch bird and bathe the feet for a few minutes in this solution. Carefully remove any hardened dirt that may be adhering to the feet after it has been well softened by bathing. After bathing for a few minutes, dry gently, and well moisten the feet with boracic ointment, afterwards wiping off all superfluous grease before returning bird to cage. Repeat the above daily. Give a morsel of bread and milk every second day for a week, and slightly dust it with flowers of sulphur and sprinkle with maw each time; on the alternating days give ten drops of lemon juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Lovebirds in a Cage.

B. J. M.—You could try cocks of Blue-wing and Madagascar Lovebirds, with hens of Black-cheeked (Chocolate-faced) and Green Budgerigars. I think these would agree together fairly well. As to breeding, that is another matter, and it is purely an experiment. Would not the better course be a pair of Black-cheeked Lovebirds? With the cage to themselves they would be very probable breeders. (2) The following are usually to be had, but the market is very variable, and first one species and then another disappears for a time: Madagascar, Blue-winged, Guiana (rare), Red-faced (delicate when first imported), Black-cheeked and Peach-faced; the latter are now almost unobtainable, only appearing at long intervals, but it is a pugnacious species and must not be associated with other species in a cage.

Aviary Queries.

Amateur.—Unless the conditions are very exceptional, the Sugar Birds ought to go indoors and be kept where the temperature does not fall below 50 deg. F. during the winter; they can go out of doors during the summer months, and there certainly would be a probability of them breeding. All the plants you name would be suitable for the flight, as also would fir, laurel, wild clematis, hawthorn and hops. The birds will do well enough out of doors from May to end of September in most seasons. Give them milk-sop in addition to the fruit, consisting of Nestle's milk, boiling water, Mellin's food and a little crumbled sponge cake. Let the cage be a roomy one, and the birds should successfully winter in any ordinary living-room. You could keep with them Cordon Bleus, Grass-finches, and small Tanagers—half-a-dozen pairs of different species ought to do well in your aviary. Indicate class of birds you prefer, and I will give you a list with pleasure.

A Feather-eater.

Spurrier.—Try with a special seed mixture at present, and if she eats it up fairly well continue indefinitely—one quart each canary and white millet, and half pint each of oats, paddy rice, hemp and sunflower seeds; mix well and keep a supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, green food, and plain biscuits. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed, and keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in cage. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery-loose, give in lieu of the ordinary drinking water one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water. On intermediate days put barely a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. Spray it twice a week (use a mist sprayer) with either quassia solution or a weak solution of fir-tree oil, choosing genial days about noon. Do not give any sops, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever. You must persevere with this treatment, as the habit is very difficult to check—if the bird should commence stripping itself, you had better write at once describing its demeanour fully.

Parrot with Bad Mouth.

Poor Polly.—Do not experiment with the bird too much. In lieu of the drinking water give the following every fourth day—one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two teaspoonfuls of water—continue this for some time. Also twice daily put a little honey and borax on its tongue, use a camel-hair brush, and you must cleanse after use, and not dip it in an unclean state in the bulk of the mixture. Spray or bathe its nostrils daily with glyco-thymolline. Continue the above for a month and then report progress, but there will not be much improvement while you are giving teasops; do not give such, neither milksops. If the bird cannot manage the seed mixture (but keep a bottle of this in its cage) give a little boiled maize daily, boil till soft, drain off all water and then dust with flowers of sulphur. The following sop will meet its needs fairly well till it can manipulate seed again: break up some stale bread or biscuit into the food vessel, well sprinkle with sugar, pour over the bread first one tea-spoonful of chemical food and then sufficient boiling water to properly moisten the bread. It must be made fresh daily. On the days you are not giving the magnesia put three drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the drinking water, but you must use either a glass or crock drinker when giving drugs.

Birds for Aviary.

M. A. W.—In the division you wish to put the Waders you must arrange for a shallow pond; it need not be large, with a path of loose sand and shingle round it. Green, Grey, Golden, and Ringed Plovers, Struts, Avocets, Knots, Dunlins, Curlews, Redshanks, Sandpipers, Water Rail, and Mandarin Ducks—with them you could keep such as Grey-winged Ouzels, Shamahs, Laughing Thrushes, Troupials, Glossy Starlings, Pies, Foreign Doves, and Pigeons. With the Pheasants you could keep further species of the above birds, certain Tanagers, also Weavers, and Whydahs, though there will always be a risk, if they go to nest, of both the Waders and Pheasants snatching up a stray bird as opportunity offers. In the third enclosure you could keep a series of small and medium sized birds, such as Gouldian, Parrot, Painted, Cuba, Olive, Alario, Red-breasted, Pileated, Diamond, Bicheno, Fire-tailed, Parson, and other Finches; Yellow-billed and Green Cardinals; Indigo and Nonpareil Buntings; Cape Canary, Blue Grosbeaks, Black-headed and Hooded Siskins. With them could also be associated the beautiful, but freely imported Waxbills, Mannikins, and the "Small Ornamental Finches," also single pairs of Scarlet, Blue and Maroon Tanagers. This flight should be fitted up on a piece of wild common land, with two or three good fir trees, reaching to top of flight and a laurel or two at intervals over the flight. If you care to send me a stamped addressed envelope per Editor, I can give details not possible in the scope of this reply.

What Bird (H. Raymond).—Your description would fit many species, but if you can let me know what country your friend brought or obtained the bird from, I can then name it for you.

What are they? (L.H.).—If by Callus you mean Gallus, this is the generic name of Jungle Fowl. Please repeat the query next week, with the fullest details you can give me as to where you got the name from. I shall then probably be able to trace the bird referred to.

Will they breed? (Alice): All the birds you name excepting the Weavers have been bred in this country, but they will not breed kept together in a crowd. You had better send me size and details of the aviary, and I can then better say what you may keep so as to get best results from your accommodation. I should not keep Lovebirds with Finches, as it usually leads to disaster, but I will await the above information before answering you fully.

Birds for Cage (E. I. W.).—You wish the birds to breed, I presume; therefore, not more than three pairs, and I consider it would be better for them to be all Budgerigars, but if you wish for variety (though Green and Yellow Budgies are very effective), then one pair each of Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds can occupy the cage with one pair of Budgerigars, of course, it being understood that any young birds must be removed as soon as they can fend for themselves.

Pekin Robin as a Songster (V. A. G.).—The cock Pekin Robin is a really good songster, though the merits of individual birds vary considerably. At the same time, I should not advise the payment of more than 7s. 6d., unless for some bird that was really a good singer, and which you could hear before purchase. Then, of course, the matter would be one of mutual arrangement between yourself and the vendor, the governing factor being the talent of the individual bird. A really good singer is fully equal to our Blackcap Warbler.

What is it? (C. L.).—I think your bird is one of the Bulbuls, probably the White-checked, but it is very difficult to recognise birds from such a description, as there are so many species the description given would apply to. Can you give me the source you obtained it from, and if possible the country it came from. You had better give it soft food, live insects and ripe fruit; also keep a small tin of canary and white millet in the cage.

Parrakeets and Lovebirds (J. R. Barrett): (1 and 2) The birds you name would agree together; at least, I have kept them in an aviary no larger than the one you name. You could also keep with them Red-crested and Green Cardinals. (3) The species named will do better in the aviary together, than kept separately in large breeding cages. (4): Both the Quaker and Moustache Parrakeet have bred in aviaries, but they are distinct species, the former of which often proves rather quarrelsome in a mixed series.

Can they be left out of doors? (M. A.)—I do not know your county, so it is somewhat difficult for me to give a definite answer. Providing yours is not a northern county, you can safely leave out all the birds you name; the Cordon Bleu is perhaps the most doubtful one, but I think they will be all right. During the winter months keep all the food under the covered portion of flight, and the birds will then mostly during adverse weather use the sheltered part of the aviary the greater part of the day. All the birds have wintered out of doors in many aviaries in the county of London.

Avadavats and Cordon Bleus. (P. D.).—Get our Nutshell Booklet No. 16, "Avadavats," this will give you more details than I can crowd into this reply, and you had better get it—2½d. post free, from our Manager. In various aviaries young of both species have left the nest during May, June, July, August, and September of this year, and the bulk of the young reared. Hartz travelling-cages, rush nests, coco-nut shell nests, husks, and a domed nest constructed of grass in some bush or twiggy branch are the kind of nesting receptacles they mostly favour. All these species breed with greater freedom in the garden aviary than in cages.

For Outdoor Aviary (Amadis).—You must not stock your aviary till the spring, unless you purchase birds which have been out-of-doors at least two months. You could keep in it six or seven pairs, say Java Sparrows, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Cut-throats, Bronze Mannikins, Silverbills, Golden-breasted Waxbills, and Avadavats. I consider another piece of the border would answer best for the Budgies and Cockatiels, and if you had both ends (say in a 7ft. length), and 18 inches of the front at each end matchboarded, with only the middle 4ft. of frontage open wirework, no shutter would be needed for the Parrakeets; but you must use a wood and glass shutter for the Finch aviary during the winter months.

What Birds? (H. Symes).—I have not heard these called "bumming birds" before; they are the common or Red Avadavat. Am afraid there is no English species likely to mate with them, but there is no need for you to attempt such a cross, as the Indian Avadavat is freely imported, and you can procure hens from any of the dealers advertising in our pages. If you procure sufficient hens (four more) to mate with the cocks the strife will cease; the cocks are quarrelling over the odd hen. If you could give these birds a room or aviary, furnish it with some twiggy branches and a few nest boxes. Not much probability of their nesting in a cage, I fear; if you attempt this the cage must only contain one pair.

Budgerigars and Cardinals (Sarsfield).—(1) Green and Yellow Budgerigars are distinct varieties, they are worth 6/- to 7/6 and 8/6 to 10/- per pair respectively. (2) The Cardinals you refer to, Red-crested (Grey) and Green (Black-crested), both are handsome birds, the latter double the size of the former. I am afraid they are not likely to breed in cages. Diet: Fruit, seed (canary, millet, oats, hemp, and sunflower), and several live insects daily, with green food, fruit, and water ad lib. for drinking and bathing. The cages for a pair of Cardinals ought to be 3ft. long by 18in. deep and high. In such they might breed—if any young are hatched, they would require an unlimited supply of five ants' eggs, smooth caterpillars, wasp grubs, beetles and mealworms.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Birds for Aviary Cage (Aviary).—I do not think in such a cage I should mix British and Foreign species. You could keep cocks only, Grey and Green Singing Finches, and pairs of Gold-breasted, Orange-checked Waxbills, and Avadavats. You should put in three flask-shaped rush nests for the Waxbills to sleep in, and you must supply mixed canary seed, white and spray millet, green food, grit, cuttlebone and water ad lib. Our Nutshell booklet, "Waxbills," will give you full details how to treat and feed, etc.; 2½d. post free from our Manager.

Budgerigars (D. P.).—Your treatment is quite correct, and I can only counsel patience. Sooner or later they will settle down and breed; a single pair often take longer to do so than two pairs kept together would do. But these charming birds are so anxious to reproduce their kind that yours are sure to do so in the end. Keep them in some airy but not draughty position, and during the summer let the supply of green food be unlimited, and even during the winter give lettuce daily, but it must be fresh. Get our Nutshell Booklet No. 18, 2½d. post free from our Manager; it will help you.

Parrot Continually Moulting (H. J. Jewett).—Get our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," and feed your bird as advised therein. You must give fruit, nuts, and green food and a piece of biscuit occasionally, in addition to seed mixture. While the bird is in the moult, put it on a course of bynophosphates, say one teaspoonful to two teaspoonfuls of water, and once a week in lieu of the phosphates give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the same quantity of water. Spray twice a week with quassia solution. Keep a supply of cuttlebone and grit in the cage. It may possibly be only the usual moult, which is very often much protracted by the vagaries of English weather. Keep out of draught, but in an airy position.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

A Weed (H. Walker).—The weed you send is known to me as "bacon weed"; its seeds are sometimes to be found in the "wild seed mixtures" sold for the use of birds.

A Household of Four (Elegans).—If you mean could you keep two British birds in a 40 x 18 x 10 cage, along with a pair of Yorkshire Canaries, with a prospect of getting young from both couples (that is, Hybrids and Canaries), then the answer is in the negative. Success under such conditions would be extremely unlikely. Each pair should have a separate cage. Mate either a cock Goldfinch or Siskin with the hen Linnet.
